Italian fiesta set for Leonard Field

Society persuades selectmen to change vote on third round

By WADE ROUSH
Special to the Star

The sights and sounds of the Italian Fiesta and Carnival will again fill the air of Leonard Field this year.

Reversing two earlier decisions, the Board of Selectmen voted Monday to allow the Society of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary to hold the annual event on its traditional site.

The decision was a victory for society members, who have been lobbying heavily with the board to make an exception to new town policies prohibiting non-athletic use of playing fields. It does not promise, however, to end the high pitched dispute between the society and residents of the neighborhood around Leonard Field.

The selectmen rejected the society's request for a permit for the festival at meetings on July 13 and 27, citing the new regulations and complaints from neighbors of excessive noise, traffic and litter. Society members returned this week saying that Leonard Field, where the fiesta has occurred for the past seven years, is the only viable location for the affair.

Selectman Thomas Schmitt was the swing vote for the fiesta. He sided with Selectmen Mark Lombardi and Francis Sopper in approving the society's plans for a scaled down carnival, which is scheduled for Sept. 18 and 19.

Neighborhood residents said after the meeting that they would consider returning to the selectmen to ask for a reversal of the reversal.

A public hearing preceding the vote attracted some 40 townspeople about evenly divided between society members and neighborhood residents. Comment was loud and at times emotional.

"It is wrong to have a few people discriminate against an organization that cherishes the United States Constitution," said society counsel Emidio DiLoreto, referring to a petition presented at the July 13 selectmen's meeting from 26 residents opposing the use of Leonard Field.

Carol Cammon, a Nathaniel Road resident who gave the board Monday a petition carrying the signatures of 121 more neighbors, asked why the selectmen would vote to block off the high school parking lot to slow traffic there and then allow the Italian fiesta to go on at Leonard Field. "Are the lives of our children any less precious than the lives of the children you voted to protect on Spruce, Holland and Nelson Streets?" she asked.

Treasurer of the society John Mercurio presented the board a three-point plan to "keep disruption to a minimum" during the fiesta. He said the society had decided to hold the carnival, with its amusement park rides, for only two days instead of the previously planned three. In addition, he said the society would negotiate with the police, the recreation director and the parks director to coordinate traffic and parking, to locate the rides so that no playing fields are damaged, and to clean the field on the day after the festivities.

Mercurio said that a fireworks display, the subject of numerous noise complaints in the past, will still be part of the fiesta.

Lucia's receives license

By WADE ROUSH
Special to the Star

The Winchester Board of Selectman voted Monday night to remove the last obstacle to restaurateur Filippo Frattaroli's plans to expand Ristorante Lucia in the town center.

After a half-hour public hearing, the board unanimously approved Frattaroli's application for an expanded liquour license. The license will allow Lucia's to add 112 seats in its newly renovated basement.

"It truly is a tremendous addition to our Centre," said Frattaroli's lawyer Paul Amico at the hearing. Amico presented an endorsement of the expansion plan from the town Chamber of Commerce and certified that town safety officials have inspected and approved the addition.

The new basement dining area and kitchen, 5[illegible] square feet in area and decorated with marble and frescoes, is a product of Frattaroli's craftsmanship over several years. When fully stocked, it will contain one of the largest wine collections in the country. (See accompanying story.)

Planner John Connery, who spearheaded Winchester's revitalization efforts early in the decade, spoke at the hearing on Lucia's behalf. "It's a classic example of a piece of property coming back, and it's about as close as we'll get to the issue of having an anchor store in the Town Centre."

"The extension is a plus for the town, not only in terms of service to the town, but in terms of moving the Centre toward stronger and better uses," Connery said.

Selectman Robert Deering expressed his concern before the vote that the expansion would add to downtown parking congestion.

Connery said, "Parking and older town centers are always going to be at odds; the problems are the same in other towns."

Amico said that Ristorante Lucia would be glad to take part in the "educational process" of getting diners to park in appropriate areas.

No one at the hearing spoke against the application for expansion.

A Winchester sandpit near the Woburn town line filled with 25,000 cubic yards of illegal demolition wastes and potentially hazardous petrochemicals will likely be paved over with a parking lot and forgotten, if the development of the Woburn Loop area proceeds as planned.

Neighbors to the two-acre site on the west side of Rock Avenue say the fill, which the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) assessed as illegal in 1984, has degraded real estate values in the area. One resident, John Morgan, who lives directly across the street from the site, fears that hazardous chemicals may have leached into groundwater supplies and wants the material removed.

DEQE, which has listed the Rock Avenue site as a "location to be investigated," says that removal may endanger the public health and environment. Tests by an environmental firm revealed no groundwater flow in the area, but according to DEQE, oily soils discovered on the site "are of concern since their presence...may constitute a long-term, continuing source of groundwater contamination and vapor generation."

In 1984, DEQE recommended to the Winchester Board of Health that it assess the situation and determine whether the material should be excavated and removed or whether the site should be closed and sealed over. Three years later, the Board of Health has taken no action on the site.

Meanwhile, site owner Charles Ferrari's plans to build apartments adjacent to a parking lot there hinge only on the board of selectmen's pending decision to sell Ferrari the portion of the Woburn Loop that he needs to meet square-footage requirements for the project.

In a meeting last month between DEQE, town officials and Morgan, Town Counsel Douglas Randall recommended that the town refrain from any action on the site until development plans become better defined.

The site's history is complicated by allegations from Morgan, a former Winchester police officer, that Ferrari knew of and profited by the illegal dumping operation, which began in 1980. Ferrari says he did not know at the time that the materials being dumped, composed mainly of concrete, steel, bricks, asphalt and other wastes from the demolition of several buildings on Eliot Street in Boston, were illegal for use as fill. Ferrari also denies that some 200 truckloads of "putrid gunk," which Morgan and other residents say were dumped on the site in 1981, were ever brought there.

Morgan says he has been attempting for six years to get the fill removed, but that he has been blocked at critical junctures by state and local officials. Town officials say that Morgan's grievances have flowed through the proper channels and that he has yet to lodge a specific, answerable complaint.

The Ferrari property, now a gravelly, weed-covered field at the same elevation as Rock Avenue, was once a 30 feet deep sandpit owned by Morgan's aunt. Morgan said that as a child he used to swim in and skate on ponds in the pit.

Ferrari, who once lived in a Hill Street house also abutting the site, bought the land in 1977 and established there Loren Contractors, his plumbing supply business. He had always had an eye toward developing the property, he said, so when Paul Leary offered to fill the site shortly thereafter, Ferrari accepted.

Leary, of Alpha Construction Co. in Chelmsford, had contracted with the state Department of Public Works to demolish and remove several buildings to make way for the new Transportation Building at 10 Park Plaza in Boston. Morgan alleges that rather than transporting the demolition wastes to the closest state-designated landfill in Amesbury, near the New Hampshire line, Leary conspired with Ferrari to bring the material — enough to cover a football field 6½ feet deep — to Winchester.

The Amesbury landfill is closed and there is now no state-approved dumping ground for such wastes, the DEQE said.

Ferrari said that Leary told him the waste was concrete and other solid material, but reiterated that he did not know that disposal of such material required state authorization.

One Arlington Institute backer sues town for $5 million

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Edward Callan is suing the town of Winchester for $5 million. He claims he has been denied the use of his land.

Callan is the sole financial backer of One Arlington Institute, an educational corporation. His suit in the Commonwealth's Land Court also claims the zoning bylaws that govern his land are invalid.

Callan bought the 1.72 acres at One Arlington Street in the institute's name in April 1986 from the Medical Missionaries of Mary Inc., a nursing order. It has been zoned for SCI or conservancy institutional use since 1953.

The town's bylaws define the uses of SCI as "conservational, educational institutional and recreational." Commercial and industrial uses are prohibited.

When the Medical Missionaries bought the land in 1952, it was zoned for single-family residential use. Town Counsel Douglas Randall said the order was zoning exempt because it was a tax-exempt church organization.

On May 6, 1986, Callan asked Building Commissioner Arthur Gallagher to issue a certificate of determination declaring the institute a non-profit organization and allowing the institute to use the land. Gallagher denied the request, finding that there was no evidence that the institute was a non-profit corporation as non profit at the time of Gallagher's decision.

Callan claims that all the paperwork necessary to become non profit was done, but that his attorney had left the papers on his desk a week too long. The institute was recognized as a non profit educational corporation by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts on May 12, 1986, one week after Gallagher made his adverse determination.

Callan also asked Gallagher for permission to renovate part of the existing building to create a single family residence. SCI zoning allows for residential use if it is auxiliary to the main use of the land. Callan felt that as director of the institute he should be allowed to live on the land.

Gallagher denied this request as well, because he found that single family residences are not a proper main use of the land. He could not consider the residential use as auxiliary to the institutional use because he did not recognize a legal, institutional use.

In October 1986, Callan went to the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) to dispute Gallagher's original decisions. The issue at the hearing was whether the institute had been incorporated as non profit at the time of Gallagher's decision.

Callan admitted the institute was not incorporated until one week later, but felt his use of the land was legal. Chairman Ferdinand Pacione and member John F. Looney Jr. believed the point was moot because the incorporation had been approved by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. They voted to grant Callan the appeal, but member Salvator Porras was not swayed that Petitioners is in fact a non profit organization," according to ZBA petition number 2783. Porras voted against the petition.

On a three member board, petitions are granted only by unanimous decision.

Because of the pending lawsuit the state Attorney General's office would not comment on the legality of the ZBA's decision that the institute is not non-profit.

Although Callan did not win the petition, he continued to live on the land and use it for his institute. Randall said the uses named in the by laws are a matter of right. Callan did

One Arlington Institute focuses on economic and land-use research

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

A lot of the controversy surrounding Edward Callan and the property known as One Arlington St. revolves around One Arlington Institute.

Winchester Building Commissioner Arthur Gallagher said that, during his inspection of the property on May 5, he found no signs of the institute. Selectman Chairman Judith Muggia said she was not sure what the institute was, and Zoning Board of Appeals member Salvatore Porras was suspious enough about the institute that he was not convinced, despite proof of the institute's legal status under Massachusetts incorporation laws as non-profit, that the institute was non-profit.

Callan said Edward Callan Interests (ECI) in Wakefield is an investment company that has no interest in developing the One Arlington St. land. Although ECI does do some development, it focuses on office complexes of not less than 150 acres.

The institute, he said, is an opportunity for him to do something he has dreamed about for a long time, economic and land-use research. He conceived the institute as an educational facility that would host seminars and lectures relating to land use and environmental issue. During business hours, the institute's 25 members can use the building as a quiet place to do research or write. Callan said he limited membership to cut down on the activity on the property. The land is on Myopia Hill, an area largely zoned for single-family residences, although Callan's parcel is zoned for conservancy-institutional use.

The institute's biggest project to date, Callan said, is a study called "The 'Economic Future of Metropolitan Boston." Other projects include studies on the effect of traffic on land-use, tree and environmental protection, affordable housing and retirement housing. Work at the institute has been interrupted, because of Callan's legal troubles. "The last round hurt us bad," Callan said.

"I thought the institute was the perfect use of the land," Callan said. He said he could have been hurt by the town's perception that he was a developer and was using the institute as a tax dodge. In fact, One Arlington Institute paid $17,894.49 in property taxes to the town this year.

Callan had plans to formalize associations with other educational institutions including the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the Harvard School of Graduate Design.

Eight formal institutes meetings were held between November, 1986 and July 1987, he indicated. A special meeting with the Urban Land Institute is scheduled for September 15.

Police alert moped drivers of dangers

Police will be on the lookout for youngsters driving mopeds illegally, and they and their parents could face court action, warns Winchester Police Safety Officer Kevin Mawn.

A moped is a motorized bicycle with pedals that moves at a top speed of 25 m.p.h.

Massachusetts law states that only people 16 years or older with a valid learner's permit or driver's license may operate a moped, Mawn said many Winchester youth, too young to drive the vehicles legally, are operating them anyway.

"We have tried to alert the parents by taking the kids home and explaining the laws to them," Mawn said, "but it hasn't worked. We are seeing repeat offenders."

Mawn said the next step is to take the youths and their parents to court. Parents who permit their children to operate mopeds illegally may be held responsible, he said.

Mopeds can be dangerous, Mawn warned. They have no safety features or directionals. Youngsters without licenses do not know the rules of the road and could get hurt making illegal maneuvers, he added. Traveling at 25 m.p.h. with no protection, the underaged drivers risk serious injury.

Massachusetts requires that mopeds be registered with the Motor Vehicle Department.

Anyone with questions about registering or riding a moped may contact Officer Mawn at the Winchester Police Department.

POLICE LOG

Sunday, August 1

At 2:14 p.m. a woman called from the Costello Funeral Home on Washington Street to report suspicious activity on the funeral home grounds, according to police reports.

The woman said four men about 25 years-old were going through the garbage barrels behind the medical building. She said the men had been there before and she believed they were looking for syringes, according to police.

When police arrived at the scene, the men were no longer there, police said.

While unlocking a building on Cross Street for the day, a man found a paper bag with numerous needles and brown bottles and called police to turn it in at 9:23 a.m., according to police reports.

Police brought the bottles to Winchester Hospital for identification. The police found the bottles contained steroids manufactured in England and France, according to reports.

Hospital employees said the steroids, Deca Durabolin and Primobolan, were not available in the United States, police said.

While patrolling on Wilwood Street at 2:55 a.m., police noticed something had been spray-painted in front of Westside Field, according to reports.

Further investigation showed the words "Safe Sex" had been painted in capital letters on the wall, according to police reports.

Thursday, July 30

At 6:07 p.m., police received a call from a representative of Bonnell Motors on Cambridge Street. The caller reported a larceny, according to police.

When police arrived, they found a 1987 Ford Crown Victoria that had been ordered by the Registry of Motor Vehicles. The blue light bar and siren and public address speaker system had been stolen from the roof, police said.

The system is worth $1250. Bonnell employees searched the woods past the east side of the lot where the car was parked, but did not turn up the system. The representative said the theft must have happened sometime in the week before he reported it, according to police.

At 7:02 a.m. a Fernway Street woman called to report an attempted breaking and entering that had just occurred at her home, according to police.

The woman said she entered her home through the laundry-room door after watering her front lawn. Soon after that she heard what she described as someone making several attempts to force his way in through that door, according to police.

When she looked out of a window in her home, the woman said, she saw a man running down the driveway toward Fernway Street. She said the man was wearing a yellow short-sleeve shirt, blue pants and a purple hat, according to police.

Police then patrolled the area and noticed a white rental Ford about an eighth of a mile west on Fernway St. from the woman's home. A man standing at the side of the vehicle fit the woman's description, according to police reports.

The officer asked the man to come forward. The man said he was delivering telephone books.

The man, a Cambridge resident, did not have any personal or company identification, police said.

Police returned to the woman's home with the man. She identified him as the person she saw running from her yard. The man said he did not go anywhere near the door, according to police records.

Police asked the woman if she was sure she heard the door being forced several times. She said yes, according to police.

Police arrested the man on charges of attempted breaking and entering, according to reports.

Wednesday, July 29

At 4:52 p.m. a Sheridan Circle man reported an assault and attempted breaking and entering, police said.

The man told police he answered his back door and a black man tried to sell him magazine subscriptions. At the same time, the resident said, another man was trying to break in through the front door, but he could not because the screen was locked, according to police.

The Sheridan Circle man told police that when he said he did not want to buy any magazines, the man grabbed at his chest area and shouted obscenities at him, according to police.

Both men fled on foot toward Pickering Street, the man said. He said both the men were black and in their late teens or early 20's, 6 feet tall and had slender builds, according to reports.

A check of the area by police did not turn up the suspects, according to reports.

At 11:05 a.m. a Recreation Department employee reported a larceny at Leonard Field, according to police.

When police arrived, the employee showed them a 15-by-30-foot hole in the bathhouse front wall. The hole was once a window, but had been open for a while, the employee told police, according to reports.

The thief took two AM/FM tape players, one Toshiba and one Sanyo, that belonged to Leonard Beach lifeguards. They are worth between $75 and $100 each, according to police reports.

Tuesday, July 28

At 8:25 p.m. police went to the scene of a motor vehicle accident on Everett Avenue.

A 1979 Suzuki motorcycle driven by an Arlington Street man hit a black three-year-old Labrador owned by a Sheffield Street man, according to police reports.

The man and his wife, who was a passenger on the motorcycle, were taken to Winchester Hospital for treatment. The man said he was travelling east on Everett Street at about 30 m.p.h. As he rounded a small turn, he saw a dog in the middle of the road. The dog ran broadside into his lane. The man said he tried to cut away, but the dog continued to run into the motorcycle, according to police.

The motorcycle slid on its left side, throwing the man and his wife and causing them to slide along the street. According to police there were 100 feet of slide marks on the street.

Rocker heads for Azores

Pat Badger and the Extremes make it big

By NANCY VON LAZAR
Special to the Star

Pat Badger of Fletcher Street is on a roll.

A bass guitarist in a rock and roll band, he is experiencing tastes of fame. He is off on an all expense paid performance trip to the Azores, and at the same time, is showcasing for four major record labels with a fifth label showcase due after the Azores trip.

At 20 years of age, Badger is experiencing 3 professional highs. The band that is on this roll is the Extreme, a Boston-based heavy metal rock band.

"It's like one constant roller coaster ride-when there's an up, there's a bigger down," says Badger, commenting on what's going on right now in his life.

Badger, a Winchester resident since he was two years old, has always liked music and has made it work. He joined the Extreme about a year ago, filling a sudden vacancy and joining a group with a pre established crest of fame.

Under its former name, the Dream, the band made a song and video entitled "Mutha (Don't Wanna Go To School Today) The video became the most popular one of V66, a video channel with a Massachusetts base. This was pre-Badger. Enter a new guitar/vocals member of the band and enter Badger and commentators say the band's new sound is tighter and more funky.

They play gigs at Boston's hot spots for rock and roll like Bunratty's and the Channel. The band has played out-of-state performances in New York and Connecticut, but is best known in Rhode Island.

At the Living Room in Providence, the Extreme draws responsive crowds who show their appreciation by clapping, according to Badger. He explains that in Boston it's not cool to clap. The crowd likes the band so much that recently they all sang "Happy Birthday" to lead singer Gary Cherone.

Although the band has a devoted following in Rhode Island, Badger has his own devoted followers, some Winchester friends who come to hear him play every day. One of these friends, Jim Castagno, used the band's music in a slide show for a photography class project.

Badger has no traceable musical family ties. He attributes his early consciousness of music to his older brother Jimmy who constantly played records at home and played the guitar and sang, occasionally performing at Winchester school functions.

> "The business end of the music industry is almost more important than music, and there is a constant conflict between them."
> - Badger

In junior high, Badger began to focus more on music by playing records in his bedroom. He had tried acoustic guitar lessons and enjoyed rock and roll, but he wanted an electric guitar.

"I haunted my father for weeks for a cheap $100 electric guitar," Badger says. When he finally got the guitar, he could not put it down.

A group of Winchester students had a band and needed a bass guitarist. Badger volunteered, not knowing how to play, but learning before and during performances by watching the lead guitarist's fingers.

"I'd hear the right notes and might come in a bit late, but that's how I learned," he says.

That instinct, coupled with training, the discipline of practice and perfecting arrangements with the band members, has given him the artist's expression necessary for performance.

Although he studied theory and harmony for a semester after graduating from Winchester High School in 1985, Badger did not like it because it lacked the performance involvement and did not contribute to his hands-on learning of the music business.

"The business end of the music industry is almost more important than music, and there is a constant conflict between them," he says.

So on August 10, Badger and the Extreme are off the the Azores to appear at the international 4th annual August Wave Music Festival.

While he was not a member of the band when it appeared there last August, he says the event drew crowds starved for live music. "They were in the thousands, crowds so enthusiastic they barely let the players get off the stage in their clothes," he explains.

Prior to leaving for the Portuguese appearances, arranged through Nuno Bettancourt, the guitar/vocalist member of the band, Badger and the group will be showcasing for the following record albums: Epic, Arista, A & M and Capital.

"And there is a major fifth scheduled for after our return," he adds.

"There will be a lot of phone calls between here and Portugal," says Badger.

So he's on tenterhooks, waiting in anticipation for what might come. And he's a member of a group that received the outstanding ballot turn-in for the Heavy Metal Act of 1987 at the Orpheum held this past spring at the Opera House in Boston.

The band members are: Pat Badger on bass guitar, Paul Geary on drums-percussion, Nuno Bettancourt, guitar and vocals, and wild man performer Gary Cherone, lead vocals.

Winchester Art Association sees expanding membership

By PETER MAUST
Special to the Star

There has been a large increase in the membership of the Winchester Art Association over the past three years, says Christine Loomis, volunteer director of the art association gallery.

In 1983 and 1984, association membership included approximately 50 to 55 people. Now, says Loomis, the association boasts 125 members (90 percent of whom are working artists).

Susan Vrotsos, president pro tem of the art association, attributes the growth to the popularity of the gallery among members. "From the time we opened the gallery, the number of artists who wish to exhibit their work has increased," says Vrotsos.

Both Vrotsos and Loomis agree that the opportunity to display their paintings and sculpture is an incentive for artists to join the association. For every artist, adds Loomis, "the gallery affords us the opportunity to show what we can do."

The Art Association has been active for some time in Winchester. Vrotsos relates that the first exhibition of paintings by the group was in 1932. Members also displayed their works for many years in the public library.

The first gallery display by the group opened in a store front across Main Street from the present gallery in December 1983. After this building was knocked down, the Art Association rented its current space in May 1985, says Loomis.

The gallery displays new shows each month. Three shows every year are set aside for members. All paid-up members are allowed to exhibit one or two pieces of work.

A new show of works by members opened July 31 with the theme "summer madness." Loomis notes that "We've never had such a big response as this particular show."

Aside from the gallery and monthly shows, Vrotsos says the Art Association has a wide range of activities "including lectures, workshops, trips to museums, and critiques of member's works by visiting artists." The association also sponsors a yearly scholarship of approximately $2,000 that is awarded to a local aspiring art student.

Both Vrotsos and Loomis see the increase in membership as a continuing trend. Vrotsos says that some newer members are from outside Winchester, and Loomis claims "we get two or three new members with every show."

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Dick Murphy
The Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors

THE FINANCING CONTINGENCY

Residential sales agreements usually have clauses called financing contingencies. These allow the buyers to declare the contract null and void if they are unable to obtain financing. If you're buying a home, this may be the most important condition in your contract, and it's wise to read it carefully before signing on the dotted line.

Most financing clauses state that you have a set period, often 45 days, to obtain a firm commitment from a lender. They may also set deadlines for applying for a loan and require that you cooperate fully with the lender to provide information needed to complete your loan processing. If you don't get your loan approved on time, you may have to request an extension from the seller, or take very specific steps to void the contract and get your deposit money back. When you and your Realtor or lawyer are drawing up the paperwork for your home's purchase, be sure that you note all financing deadlines. Apply for your loan as soon as possible, and be diligent in providing any documents the lender requests.

If there's a move in your future, the real estate professionals at The Bixby & Porter Company Realtors are ready to serve you. Call us at 729-7000 or drop by our offices at 33 Thompson Street in Winchester.

Judie Muggia: her smile and savvy go well together

Editor's note: This is part of a series of in-depth portraits of prominent or accomplished town citizens that will run from time to time in the paper.

By WADE ROUSH
Special to the Star

One of the first prerogatives of a newly elected selectman in Winchester is to appropriate two file drawers down at Town Hall for personal use. The first thing Judie Muggia did as the selectmen's new chairman was to ask for a third.

"Most of the people who run for selectman are men, and they have an office somewhere outside their home and they have staff," Muggia says. "I don't." So every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday she appears at Town Hall and conducts business "out of any space that's free." In her extra file drawer is the document that keeps Winchester running from week to week: the selectman's meeting docket.

The hovering presence of the town's highest elected officer, even for three days a week, has made some town employees "very nervous," Muggia admits, but she says it has led to no major conflicts. No other selectman, at least, can boast of such regular and intimate contact with the machinery of town governance.

Muggia, the first woman chair of the selectmen in recent memory, has been building that intimacy with the community for a long time. After becoming active in the League of Women Voters during the 1960s, she chaired in 1972 a town center study committee that initiated Winchester Center's renaissance. She was elected to Town Meeting in 1978, and shortly thereafter led an executive committee that created the town's Chamber of Commerce.

She was president of the League in 1983-84, when a study on the need for after-school child care led to the creation of Kid's Corner at McCall Junior High School. Friends, saying she had the right background, suggested that she run for selectman in 1983.

"I said, 'You've got to be kidding,' " and immediately started thinking about it," she laughs. In 1985, she became the first woman to run for selectman in a decade, and succeeded in topping the ticket. She has been chairman since March.

As a town officer and community member, Muggia is a study in contrasts. She leads a full-time public life, but carefully insulates her home existence from the outside, preferring not to be interrupted during her gastrointerologist husband Albert's scarce off-call time. She is a Quaker, yet she says that she does not necessarily consider herself a pacifist.

She whizzes through selectmen's meetings as if the omnipresent cable TV cameras did not exist, but when being photographed alone she is extremely camera-shy. In an interview Muggia was relaxed and talkative, but the rubber band with which she fidgeted evidenced a constant nervous energy.

Born Judith Palmer to a Scots-Irish father and an English mother, she was raised in Brookline and trained as a nurse at Boston University. She married her husband at age 21. Albert, an Italian emigre who grew up in South America and studied at Harvard, brought the family to Winchester in 1960.

The Muggias have three grown sons and are now ensconced in their Winter Pond-view Dartmouth Street home, of which Judie, approaching age 50, says "They'll have to carry me out in a box."

Muggia says that running for office was a surprisingly all-consuming pursuit, but that "it was some of the best fun I've had in my life. It makes you think about what you really want to accomplish, what you really think the office is for."

Muggia compares her campaign experience to an art class in which she learned that "we do a lot of looking and very little seeing. It's the same way with the political process. You may think of yourself as a pretty directed thinker, but until all sorts of comments and questions come at you and force you to look at yourself ... you can't learn about making things happen instead of wishing things would happen."

Muggia says she campaigned on a promise that she would go into every decision "knowing everything that I possibly could about the facts involved." On issues currently before the town, such as the fate of the Woburn Loop, her answers are detailed.

The Loop "has become a political football" since Secretary of Transportation Frank Salvucci requested a future-use study of the property before any development occurs there, she says. "The troubles really started very shortly after we opted into buying the Loop. At that time, the deed stated that Mr. Salvucci, as head of the MBTA at the time, excised it as a transportation corridor. The comment now is that it was excised for MBTA, but not for all possible uses. This has become the battle royal."

"In terms of our representation at the State House," she says of State Sen. Richard Kraus and State Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh's conflicting stances on the Loop study, "our senator and our representative mix like oil and water. They simply do not approach things the same way."

"In my view nothing ever realistically would be developed in this area for transportation," Muggia says. "The average Massachusetts taxpayer should not want his or her money spent on this study."

Muggia calls Salvucci's proposal "a real thorn in the flesh." She says the town has done enough giving. "We have worked with the developers in creating plans that would limit the corridor to passive use.

"If the incredible happens and it is taken back as a corridor," Muggia says, cringing, "it will wreak havoc with development."

To Muggia, development is one area in which the town can hardly afford a setback. "I've been distressed with development since I chaired the town center study committee," she says. Winchester's Planning Board, as a group of citizens with varying degrees of expertise, has to deal with enormous problems, she says, and is prevented by its immediate duties from forming long-range policies.

"This is a town that should have had a full-time professional paid planner for years," she says. "People will say, 'We've lost all our free land anyway, what's the point in having a planner?' Well, towns are always evolving. It's never too late. It can be very late, but it can't be too late."

Since her election as chairman, Muggia has aimed to organize monthly meetings between the leaders of the various town bodies concerned with planning — the Housing Authority, the Planning Board, the selectmen, School Committee and Conservation Commission. Muggia hopes these "rap sessions" will point out "what's hot and what's not, as they say, what the attitudes are. Out of that, I was hoping to develop a long-range policy of growth and planning."

"One question I want answered right away," Muggia says, "is what do planners consider a valid balance between business property tax income base and private property tax income base. Are we going to become very unhealthy if less than 2 percent of our tax base is industry-business-oriented?"

In the absence of a town-wide board policy on industry, housing, condominium growth, and excising town property, Muggia says, the town lost valuable properties such as the Wyman School and three subsidized-housing properties.

"I seem to live, eat, and dream policy," Muggia says, "but it's really the foundation of orderly growth and planning."

On the state senate redistricting that will by 1988 put Winchester in a new district with Medford and Somerville, Muggia is resigned but still critical. "Given the process and the parameters that the House and Senate have worked with since the gerrymandering laws were passed a long time ago, Senator Kraus explanations were very good. The enormous objections, which I shared, came in the lack of information. I would expect our senator, as a routine matter, to notify the town ... he first heard rumors in April, and we simply didn't get those messages. I read it in the paper just the same as everyone else did."

"The possibility is that Winchester is a big enough voting block to be a courted vote" between Somerville and Medford, Muggia says, but "the fact remains that the kinds of needs that this town has compared to the kinds of priorities a major city has are really quite different. (Redistricting) could change things quite drastically."

As a longtime activist for women's issues, Muggia is strongly opinionated on pressing feminist concerns such as Judge Robert Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court and the effect it might have on civil rights and abortion decisions. Bork's stands on women's issues are "enormously conservative and, I think, very punitive," she says.

A court with Bork, Muggia says, could make the mistake of equating a woman's desire to control her own body with flippancy on the issue of abortion. She says she is "very strongly pro-choice, but I don't liken that at all to being pro-abortion. A woman's choice on how she handles her reproductive capacity ... is an absolutely private matter."

Muggia is an ardent supporter of women candidates for national office, saying, "I don't want to be hard on men ... but in my experience the women who do end up in public office are enormously more impressive in the aggregate than their male counterparts."

"Women still labor under the conception that because they perhaps have not been working in a paid job ... that somehow their experiences, their input does not make them fit for elective office, whereas a man because he has a degree in law or because he is a businessman is somehow more suited to make those kinds of decisions," Muggia says. "They're dead wrong."

On an issue closer to home, and one which she must confront every Monday evening — the composition of the board of selectmen — Muggia is as assertive. She says that the perceived factionalization of the board, with Selectmen Mark Lombardi and Frank Sopper frequently casting votes opposite to those of herself, Robert Deering and Thomas Schmitt, is a welcome result of its diversity.

"I think that the current board, for all the frustrations that are perceived by people that we all have with each other, is very representative," she says. "It's a cross-section of the town, and we just don't have a homogeneous town."

"There are those who find the whole democratic process enormously frustrating, and who feel they would make a wonderfully benevolent dictator. What people forget is that nobody ends up in our chairs without being put there by people who are voting. I think we're very representative, and I don't think there are apt to be split votes on very difficult decisions."

Muggia is concerned, however, that factionalization stemming from town officials' desire to please constituents retards progress toward town-wide policy objectives. "People will say, 'I'm not going to vote against that. I'm up for re-election this year.' That happens."

"You've got to decide whether or not you're going to diminish your long term effectiveness by bowing to a very high-pressure, narrow constituent feeling, especially on boards like the selectmen, the Planning Board, and the Conservation Commission that really need to take the long view."

These boards "need to be more concerned with policy than management." Muggia asserts. "I know there's disagreement on the board of selectmen with that and I can't help it. This town opted for a charter that sets up a town manager, and I am not going to manage the town. But I am going to watch the town manager every day of the week."

Of Winchester's approximately 11,000 registered voters, Muggia says, only 3,500 voted in the last town election, and despite such innovations as cable TV coverage, she thinks citizens are not adequately informed. Most people won't get involved "unless something happens to their pocketbook or their neighborhood that has a direct effect on their happiness. Their involvements don't include local issues."

To those who feel that "now they're here on a ship and they want to pull up the ladder" by opposing low-income, subsidized housing, Muggia says, "We're not being asked to cure Massachusetts' problems. If all 351 cities and towns pay attention to the feeding and housing of those who are incapable for whatever reason at the moment of feeding and housing themselves, then no one community will be inappropriately overburdened."

It is in order to pursue such issues as housing that Muggia says she would like another three-year term as a selectman. "I just love it, and all sorts of things are only half-baked after three years."

With a twinkle in her eye that makes her words less than convincing, Muggia denies any ambitions of running for a state-wide office. "I'm not sure I'd want to tie myself down to the kind of job that would keep me not only out of town but out of the house, intellectually. I know I would eat it up, but I like the local scene."

Muggia sums up her governmental philosophy with a lesson drawn from the Iran-Contra hearings. "I had very strong feelings about the Secretary of State's testimony regarding accountability in government. I'm not a Constitutional scholar, but I am married to an immigrant who was driven out of his home country, and those who have lived under other governments appear to me to be far more cognizant of the enormous value of accountability.

"We take an awful lot for granted in this country, and I think we're finding out that it takes very little to subvert the strongest constitution on the face of this earth. I hope that's what the majority is getting out of this."

Wine & Spirits slugs its way into the playoffs

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Winchester Wine & Spirits earned a share of the league regular season title with a 7-4 victory over Home Team Realty Sunday night in Winchester Men's Softball A League action at Ginn Field.

The game meant very little to Home Team since they had already clinched a playoff spot. But the win was important for Wine & Spirits because it assured them a bye in the first round of the playoffs.

Home Team players flexed their offensive muscles early as they used a couple of extra base hits to build a 2-0 edge. After Rudy Fiore singled to start the game, Ed Osterberg tripled to deep right-center field. Kevin Scully then mashed a ground rule double to knock in Osterberg with the second run.

But Wine & Spirits came back with a vengeance in the bottom of the inning. After Mark Lawson scored on Mike Walsh's sacrifice fly, Tommy Datillo tied the game on Doug Lawson's infield single. Offensive star of the game Bill Tocci came up next with the first of his three run-scoring singles and Wine & Spirits had the lead. John Gannon provided a three-run cushion as his single produced Wayne Lawson and Tocci to make the score, 5-2.

The game settled down after the first inning outburst but Wine & Spirits managed to sneak across a couple of runs in the third and fifth innings. In both instances, Tocci knocked in Datillo and after five innings, Wine & Spirits led, 7-2.

Home Team made its last charge at the lead in the sixth inning. J.C. Forbes broke the long scoring drought with a single to center to score Scully. Nick Mastromarino followed with a single to score Forbes and Home Team was temporarily back in business. But a double play killed the rally and Home Team was not heard from the rest of the game.

Wayne Lawson of Winchester Wine & Spirits makes an attempted grab, but base runner Paul Levesque of Home Team Realty is safe as Lawson misses.

Pisces Pantry slams Brewers

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Pisces Pantry used a nine run second inning to catapult themselves to an easy 16-1 victory over the Brewers in Winchester Men's Softball B League action last week.

The Brewers were not just playing for a Michelob Light. They were playing for four cases of beer courtesy of two other teams who wanted to inspire the 1-21 outfit against Pisces Pantry.

Unfortunately, a 10-0 third inning deficit took away their spirit and Pisces coasted into second place and a first round bye in the B League playoffs.

Steven Fields, seeing his first action of the season after recovering from a broken hand, led off the Pisces second with a single and scored on Paul Tonello's double to left center field. Mark Simon scored when Mike Bourke's throw got away from Jack Struthers at third base. The problems continued for the Brewers when, after Paul Corsano singled in a run, Tommy Struthers lost Kenny Green's fly ball in the sun, allowing Corsano and Rich Maggio to score and Pisces led 5-0.

The intensity level of the game began to unravel as Pisces continued its onslaught with three consecutive run producing hits. Bob Luz knocked in Green with a bloop single and Sam Higgins followed with a ground rule triple into the vines in left field. Brian Doherty delivered another run scoring single setting up the most spectacular play of the game.

Fields lofted a pop fly into shallow left field. Tommy Struthers and short stop Brian Farrell pursued the ball at full speed from opposite directions. Just as the ball landed in Struthers' glove, the teammates collided and the impact jostled the ball loose. As the two players lay on the ground wondering which planet they were on, Fields continued to circle the bases until Mickey Macone alertly picked up the ball and tired a strike to Tim Dannon at home plate to get Fields for the final out.

Pisces built their lead to 7-0 before the Brewers finally got on the scoreboard. With two outs in the bottom of the fifth, Dave George singled and John Maher followed with a screaming triple down the left field line to break the shutout.

Pisces coach Jay Hosmer made a surprise relief appearance, shutting down the Brewers in the final two innings while dazzling them with his El Triante delivery. In the seventh inning, Richie Struthers could not hold on to Higgins' long fly ball as he collided with the fence and the final two runs came home.

Marrone holds off Kingsmen in final

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Marrone Landscaping used tight defense and a steady offensive attack to down the Kingsmen and clinch the regular season title in Winchester Men's Softball B League action.

Following the 6-3 triumph, league commissioner Bob Amadeo presented a championship trophy to Marrone coach Rich Casilinuova, whose team finished with a record of 17-4.

All season long, Marrone has proved itself to be a dificult team to come back against once they have built a lead. The Kingsmen found this out first hand as Marrone amassed a 6-0 lead in the first five innings.

Marrone immediately seized the lead in the first inning as Joe Lang cracked a homerun to left. They built their lead to 3-0 in the third inning thanks to a tough bounce. With Mike Turner on first base, Artie Staffiere came up and lashed what appeared to be a single to right. But the ball took a surprise hop over right fielder Ernie Drougas's head and the single turned into a triple and Turner came home with the second run. Lang followed with a sacrifice fly and a three run lead.

Meanwhile, the Kingsmen offensive attack was stymied by the flawless Marrone defense. Marrone got another run in the fourth as J.R. Morton scored on Mike Bellino's infield grounder. They grabbed their biggest lead in the fifth inning as Staffiere and Lang hit run scoring singles which produced Frank DiPietro and Staffiere with the fifth and sixth runs.

The Kingsmen finally got on the board in the sixth inning. Peter Dizio added some spark to the offense with a home run to left which broke the shutout. In the seventh, the Kingsmen mounted their last stand. With two outs, Joe Cefalo started the rally with a single. Billy Hamilton roped a triple down the left field line to score Cefalo. Peter Ruggles came up with his day-glo orange bat and banged a single to center to knock in Hamilton and suddenly the game got interesting. But with the tying run at the plate, Dizio was unable to repeat his sixth inning heroics and the game ended.

Special to the Star

The Winchester Swim and Tennis Club continued its victory streak last week as the three and one swim team defeated Indian Ridge Country Club of Andover.

Despite the absence of many of its swimmers, the team still managed to win by 60 points. Jeff Maney and Patricia Williams were the outstanding swimmers in this meet.

The standout performers in previous meets were Kim Murray, Brian King, Suzanne Foley and Mark Pacheco.

Every swimmer and diver on the team has improved this summer and the team looks forward to their next meet against Russell Mills of Billerica.

Lombardi R.E. knocks over Theater Mobil

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Lombardi R.E. Development used back-to-back home runs in the third inning to blow open their game with Theater Mobil as they coasted to a 15-4 win in Winchester Men's Softball A League action Sunday night.

Lombardi will now advance to the playoffs while Theater Mobil will put away their gloves and cleats until next year. Gary Errico was an offensive force for Lombardi as he hit for the cycle and knocked in five runs.

After Errico's first inning triple gave Lombardi a 1-0 lead, they started to assume command in the second. John Mathson singled in Ron Amadeo and with two out., Tommy Cavarretta came through with a clutch single to drive in Mathson and Gary Greco giving Lombardi a 4-0 advantage.

Theater Mobil managed to break the shutout in the third but Lombardi blew the game open in the bottom of the frame. Errico started the onslaught with a cannon blast to left field as Ken Jacobson scored in front of him. Mike White followed with another home run and the game was now out of reach for the uninspired Theater Mobil team. Greco doubled in Mathson and Lombardi led 8-1.

Lombardi increased the lead to a whopping 12-1 in the fourth inning. The White brothers, Mike and Paul each knocked in two runs with singles. In the sixth, the lead ballooned to 15-1 as Errico was again in the thick of things as he blasted a ground rule double to drive in Jacobson. Paul Mathson joined the fun as he delivered Errico with a single before Amadeo completed the scoring with a double to drive in Mike White.

With the game well in hand, Lombardi coach Bob Amadeo felt it was safe to insert himself into the game as he caught the last two innings. Meanwhile, Theater Mobil coach Tony Gangi unveiled his secret weapon, bullpen ace Craig "The Can" West, who shutdown Lombardi in the seventh but it was well after the fact. Theater Mobil managed three more runs to make the final score, 15-4.

COMMENT

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Now that the fiesta is settled, it's time to make friends

The Italian Fiesta and Carnival, an event that should unite the community of Winchester, is in jeopardy of renting it asunder.

The argument between the Society of the Assumptioh of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the festival's sponsor, and the neighborhood around Leonard Field, the site finally settled on for the event, has become too bitter for the magnitude of the problem.

During the debate, the selectmen hurled accusations that in a cooler moment might not have been released.

Selectman Mark Lombardi said at Monday's board meeting that the earlier votes against the Leonard Field site were attempts to "kill" the festival while the EnKa fair was allowed an exception to operate on Manchester Field. He implied that the board was acting in a discriminatory manner.

He surely cannot believe that Selectmen Chairman Judie Muggia, who voted all three times against the Leonard Field location, would discriminate against Italians. She is married to one. Lombardi's statements ignored the reasoning of the other board members concerning the difficulty of regenerating Leonard Field after carnival goers have made it unfit for the use for which has been designated.

Some of the arguments put forward by the carnival's proponents were also needlessly aggressive and spurious. Emidio DiLoretto's attempt to wrap the festival in the American Flag is the sort of tactic one expects from Ollie North or Robert Bork.

When DiLoretto said, "It is wrong to have a few people discriminate against an organization that cherishes the United States Constitution," he managed to overlook the more than 100 signatures on the petition to have the fiesta moved. Moved, not killed.

Even in suggesting that the solution should be a matter of majority will makes a mockery of the central tenets of the Constitution, which guarantees the rights of the individual over the arbitary will of the state. The case has to be decided on its merits, not on the number of people on each side. DiLoretto is a lawyer. He should know that.

Another spurious argument put forward by some of the carnival's proponents stated that moving it to Shore Road would put their children in danger. They said they feared kids would fall in the pond and drown. There is probably more danger of that happening to an inebriated adult than a kid with his wits about him. Children young enough to fall in ponds and not know what to do next are supposed to be watched at all times, whether on a field or near a pond. That argument doesn't wash, so to speak.

On the positive side, John Mercurio is to be credited with making conciliatory gestures toward the Nathaniel Road crowd. His proposal to cut one day off the length of the fiesta was the right move. The shorter party will spare the field and the nerves of the neighbors.

He also provided a reasonable excuse for Selectman Thomas Schmitt to change his vote. Schmitt needed something to cover his otherwise inexplicable change of heart. To say "I think the people should have a chance to work out their problems among themselves" is an abdication of his responsibilities as a leader. The people came to him and the other board members because they needed an arbitrator not an equivocator.

Mercurio promised to see that his people help manage traffic, minimize damage and clean up afterwards. The town will be watching to see that those promises are fulfilled.

Clearly there is a conflict here that will not go away by wishful thinking. Now that the society knows how the neighborhood feels, they should begin to plan ahead to next year and find a better permanent site for the fiesta.

As far as the neighbors are concerned, the vote is in and the fiesta will take place at Leonard Field. They will have to make the best of it. Sporting behavior dictates that they be graceful about it and not exacerbate the already-raw situation. If they take a deep breath and join the throng, they might even have a good time.

And speaking of time, it is now time for both side to make up. The town is too small to contain grudges between neighbors.

Bless the children's faithful little hearts

By TERRY MAROTTA

Boston's Teddy Bear Lady died some weeks back, I read.

She was famous, the paper said, for her collection of almost 400 stuffed bears, whom she kept up nicely, and cared for, and even took to tea at the Ritz on certain special bear-related occasions.

I'm all in favor of gathering friends around this way, even if most of them are the stuffed kind. And reading of this lady's impressive collection sounded a certain answering chord in my own being.

I have several children, each of whom seems to receive on the occasion of every holiday, tooth extraction or innoculation, some form of stuffed animal.

Pencil and clipboard in hand then, I set out to do a survey of our own stuffed animal population.

Leaving aside the various humanoids, the babies and the china-headed dolls who perch with clinking semi-amputated china limbs on bookcase-tops, staring with wide astonished eyes at 20th century life, we have in this house, according to my census, the following stuffed love objects and professional cuddlers:

Seven bunnies, four elephants and nine doggies, one wearing a baseball cap, one a T-shirt reading Go For It, and one an expression suggestive of digestive unrest.

A bright green turtle, whose bad luck it is to have had his face loved off, so that his head resumbles a kind of three-dimensional comma appended in thoughtful pause at the end of the short punchy phrase of his body.

One parrot and a creature of indeterminate breed, somewhere between a badger, a dog and Herbert Hoover, who wears a tiny set of spectacles and repeats what you tell it in a distant electronic mumble.

Eleven My Little Ponies, some in rags, some in tags and one in a velvet gown, all pertly posing with their long silky manes, and all hoping for the currying and grooming skills of such children as there are dedicated to these arts today.

Five kittens, a swan and six mice.

Seven unicorns, those doe-eyed Pollyannas of the animal world who have become the totem of innocence and Don't-Tread-On-Me pacifism, and who probably not accidentally are the first hurled and stomped on in a fight.

A kangaroo and a racoon. A lion and a lamb (who do in fact lie down together). An alligator. Three snakes. Two squirrels and a frog.

Two pairs of monkeys, all hugging each other tightly with velcro fists. A very large pig bearing what appears to be the scar from an appendectomy.

And then there are the bears.

There are close to 30 bears in this house: three in bow ties; one in suspenders; one with a little fat body and a small head; one with a fat head and no body at all; two with dopey grins; one in a skirt; a set of twins with high waists and long dangly legs like Pee Wee Herman; and another 23 that are plain old bears, average bears, as Yogi used to say, normal bears, whatever that may mean.

Now these are all esteemed citizens of this domain.

They are sought out and consulted, complained to and even quoted at times.

They endure kisses and Band-Aids and bouts of soggy emotion. They listen much and speak little, as good as therapists, and their time comes free. They're there when you need them. They keep a fearsome confidence.

When I was small, I had a toy dog named Fluffy, who did this and more for me. He let me cut his hair, and never complained when it failed to grow back. He let me re-arrange his eyes, big soulful brown eyes which sat upon lethal spikes driven into his stuffed-straw skull.

I didn't have 400 of him like the lady from Boston. But one Fluffy was enough. Truth to tell, I came across him again in the course of this census. Bless such objects of childhood devotion. I say bless them for their faithful little hearts.

What will it take to get the Town Hall clock going again?

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

The House and Senate. The House and Senate are in recess until after Labor Day and are meeting only in brief, informal sessions.

During the lengthy consideration of the budget, the House held hundreds of roll calls. Our space limitations prevented us from reporting on many of these roll calls. During the next several weeks, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" takes the opportunity to take a more indepth look at House action and local representatives' previously unreported roll call votes on several amendments to the $11 billion fiscal 1988 budget recently signed into law by Governor Dukakis.

OUTSIDE SECTIONS—House 119-38, rejected an amendment requesting the opinion of the Supreme Judicial Court on the legality of "outside sections" in the budget.

Amendment supporters said these sections violate state law because they use the budget to change state laws and avoid the usual public hearing process.

Amendment opponents said the sections are legal and noted many relate to future budget years.

A Yea vote is for the amendment requesting the opinion. A Nay vote is against the amendment.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEES—House 126-29, rejected an amendment reducing funding for legislative committee services from $4.6 million to $4.1 million.

Amendment supporters questioned how many staff people this will include and where they will be working.

Amendment opponents said the money is necessary to hire professional staff members as the need arises.

A Yea vote is for the reduction. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

TRAVEL—House 126-27, rejected an amendment prohibiting any legislator from receiving more than $1000 for our of state travel expenses annually.

Amendment supporters said this will prevent expensive out of state junkets.

Amendment opponents said this would limit important fact finding trips.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

PACS—House 127-26, rejected an amendment striking the words "prior appropriation continued" (PAC) from some 31 legislative special commissions.

Amendment supporters said these PACs, which total $2.1 million, are simply patronage ridden slush funds which irresponsibly carry over unspent money from last year.

Amendment opponents said the money is necessary to allow these important commissions to finish their work.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

SPECIAL COMMISSIONS—House 124-30, rejected an amendment prohibiting any money from being spent for 35 special commissions unless a written report of the commission's accomplishments and expenses has been filed by July 1.

Amendment supporters said this will insure that these commissions are useful and necessary.

Amendment opponents said the commissions already file reports at various times and claimed the July 1 deadline is too restrictive and will create chaos.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

UNIFORM SENTENCING—House 121-28, rejected an amendment striking a $50,000 item for expenses for the Special Joint Committee on Uniform Sentencing.

Amendment supporters said there is no longer a need to study this issue because the House has sufficient facts and has approved a presumptive sentencing bill three times, even though it was later killed in the Senate.

Amendment opponents said further study is necessary until both branches pass a bill and Governor Dukakis signs it.

A Yea vote is for the $50,000 cut. A Nay vote is against the cut.

Saltmarsh voted no.

LOCAL AID COMMISSION—House 136-14, rejected an amendment striking a $50,000 item for a special commission on the current local aid distribution formula.

Amendment supporters said last year's commission made recommendations which were simply ignored by the House.

Opponents said the House adopted two key points of the commission and said another study could produce more results.

A Yea vote is for the $50,000 cut. A Nay vote is against the cut.

Saltmarsh voted no.

ABOUT TOWN

The Sub Station at 107 Cross St. has done it again. They filled their Jimmy Fund can four times in just a month. The police department distributes the cans to local merchants each year as part of the effort to combat childhood cancer. Winchester Police Chief John McHugh, left, and Safety Officer Kevin Mawn, next to him, pose for the camera before taking the filled cans from Carl and Mary Gizzi, owners of the store. Police chief runs for Jimmy Fund

Winchester Police Chief John P. McHugh will participate in the annual run for the Jimmy Fund sponsored by the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association on September 12 and 13.

Participating police chiefs will run from the New York state border to Fenway Park to raise money for the fund.

The statewide fund-raiser ends in Fenway Park, where all the participating chiefs assemble. Then they run around the ball park together. The Red Sox were among the first sponsors of the fund. The money goes to the Dana-Farber Institute.

The Winchester Police Department also distributes Jimmy Fund canisters to local businesses during the baseball season. Last year Winchester businesses raised $1000. The Sub Station on Cross Street has already filled four canisters, for a total of $300. The shop matches the amount put in by its customers to double the donations.

Anyone interested in sponsoring Chief McHugh in the Jimmy Fund run may contact him at the Winchester Police Department.

SENIOR NEWS

Jenks seniors stem the tide of time through regular exercise

By LEONOR RICH
Special to the Star

One of the most popular activities at the Jenks Senior Center is the exercise class three times a week instructed by June Cannon.

More than 150 men and women participate energetically and enthusiastically during the 45 minute periods and not one of them desires to miss the scheduled sessions.

The classes have almost tripled in size during the past 5½ years of the program, which began in 1982 with approximately 30 people. Because of the large numbers of participants and the need for space in which to stretch without touching someone on either side, the new auditorium is now the scene of the action. Between 60 and 75 people attend each class.

The exercises are not too strenuous, but they are geared by the instructor to serve as muscle toners with move ments done with a chair for support, both standing behind it or sitting down while working from head to toe. The participants never lie on the floor during any part of the program.

There are relaxing exercises, hand exercises using tennis balls to strengthen fingers and grips, towel exercises to strengthen arm and shoulder muscles, back exercises, stretching exercises, and vigorous walking exercises swinging arms to a musical accompaniment.

People feel the improved muscle tone at the conclusion of each period of activity and strength returns with regular training. Exercises are designed to improve circulation, especially for diabetics, helping those with back problems and other arthritic ailments, and increasing the capacity of the lungs through proper breathing.

Participants are aware of the need for exercising to maintain good health. Some have lost weight through the frequency of exercise. Others have realized the need to stop smoking in the interest of improved physical fitness. The entire program lies in with the offerings of the Health Committee. The three weekly sessions provide for meeting new friends in an atmosphere of cordiality which has developed a very cohesive group of both men and women who are avid attendees.

Under the able leadership of June Cannon, a most interesting exercise program entices an ever increasing number of participants. Born in South Carolina, June's personality has the friendly characteristics of the sunny Southland.

Her major at college was psychology, an excellent background for the important work that she is doing. She served in Washington, D.C., as director of volunteers at the National Orthopedic Hospital, working with teenagers. She was later attached to Social Services at a State Charity Hospital in Vicksburg, Miss., as director of volunteers, working with long term care patients.

She has volunteered for 25 years with various Red Cross chapters, having received intensive training at West Point during her husband's teaching assignment there for a period of three years.

Her residency in Winchester during the past six years has been one of community service at Jenks Senior Center; in church work, through service on the American Red Cross Board of Directors, and being actively involved in several organizations in the town.

Winchester seniors are fortunate, indeed, to have a person of June Cannon's caliber in a leadership position at Jenks Senior Center, where she is helping people to maintain physical fitness.

The fair is in the air

The annual Fall Fiesta Fair is just around the corner at the Jenks Senior Center on Oct. 7 and 8.

Plan to get some holiday shopping done where selections can be made from a wide variety of offerings. There will be booths for aprons, bakery products, books, dolls, games and toys for children, electrical items, gifts, handcrafts, jewelry, knit goods, Men's Boutique, Women's Boutique and White Elephants.

The raffles will be active on the Ford Escort Pony car, the afghan, and special items at various booths will be on raffle.

A snack bar will provide relaxing moments to rest and socialize while munching and enjoying a cup of coffee or tea. A catered dinner in the new "Grand Ballroom" will be continuous from 5 to 7 p.m.

The intake from this fair must top all previous fairs in view of the greatly incresed operating expenses of the center as a result of the new addition to the building. Raffle tickets on the car are now available at the reception desk at the center.

Angelo Giannetti and the Ways and Means Committee need the staunch support of every senior to ensure a successful financial venture.

Make saleable items, donate cooked goods for the bake table, round up White Elephants, find materials for appropriate gifts, costume jewelry, electrical items, books and boutique articles. All donations will be greatly appreciated by the hard-working chairpersons.

Items may be brought to the center on weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., since there is now a good storage area on the lower level. Pick-ups can be arranged by calling the center (721-7136).

Meals on Wheels

The Meals on Wheels program sponsored by the Winchester Seniors Association and many local organizations provides an exceedingly valuable service to those who are homebound.

Patients can leave the hospital sooner and senior citizens may stay in their homes independently for a longer period because nutritious diets are provided.

Meals on Wheels is a non profit organization delivering one hot dinner transported in an insulated chest, ready to eat, and a cold supper five days a week, except on holidays, at a very modest charge to Winchester residents.

The program contributes to the health, comfort and dignity of the recipients.

Approximately 30 patrons are served weekly from the kitchen of the Winchester Hospital under the direction of the staff dietician. The kitchen staff prepares and packs the meals.

Volunteers working individually or through volunteer organizations, driving their own cars, pick up the meals at the Winchester Hospital and deliver them to the clients.

The volunteers are given an orientation by the program coordinator, who works out of the Jenks Senior Center. They are committed to a regular schedule, weekly, or by-weekly, or monthly in accordance with available time to give to the program.

The program coordinator works closely with the dietitian at the hospital to accommodate to any doctor's recommendations as well as to personal preference. The coordinator is employed by the Meals on Wheels Advisory Committee on a part-time basis to administer the program. She recruits and orients the volunteer drivers, bills and recipients and consults with families, doctors and agencies.

Meals on Wheels is funded by individuals, businesses, civic groups and churches that underwrite the minimal expenses of operating the program. The EnKa Society, Church Women United and the Rotary Club all have been essential to supporting the program.

There is a need for additional volunteers to carry on this vital service. Contact Marilyn Georgis at her home before 10 a.m. at 729-4646 to offer services as a volunteer driver to deliver meals to the homebound.

The time expended will be approximately 1½ hours.

Glass showcase sought for center

A glass showcase is needed at the center for the display of articles made by seniors in the various art and craft classes. Some will be for sale.

If the center is called (721-7136), arrangements will be made for a pick-up.

Angelo Giannetti, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, is eager to provide for an exhibit of creative articles made by seniors.

The Pond View trip needs more people

The second daytime trip to Pond View Restaurant in Kingston, N.H., on Aug. 12 must have more people sign up in order to meet the cost of hiring a bus.

This repeat of the first trip because of the large number of people on the waiting list was an experiment that will not be expedient to repeat in a future scheduling.

After the meal at Pond View, the bus will proceed to the Manchester Shopping Mall for an hour of browsing. Call the center immediately for a reservation. (721-7136).

Monthly Saturday night dance

The Saturday Night Dance at the Jenks Senior Center will resume on Aug. 8 after the July recess.

Dick Brogna and his band will provide both song and music from 8 p.m. to midnight, encouraging all to participate in ballroom and line dancing. The room is air conditioned to give comfort if the temperatures still soar.

Light refreshments are available. Anne Feuss, chairperson, and her assistants will help to make the evening an enjoyable one.

Hey, look at this.

Lucia's prepares a huge wine cellar in expansion

By WADE ROUSH
Special to the Star

Quietly, slowly, with infinite patience, Filippo Frattaroli has been working an Italian revolution in his Mt. Vernon Street basement.

Using his own design and his own hands, the proprietor of Ristorante Lucia has transformed dead space into a re-creation of an Italian piazza, replete with marble, brick, arches and water-spouting statues. When complete, it will expand to 294 the number of seats for diners who come to sample Lucia's Italian fare. The restaurant now seats 112.

But Frattaroli's expansion, underway for two years now, stems from a higher ambition than merely to feed more people. He wants to educate them.

Now that the years-long project is complete and the town has granted the expanded liquour license Frattaroli needed to operate in the space, visitors may feel that they are in a bacchanalian museum more than a restaurant. For surrounding the piazza will be room upon room full of Italian wines, 10,000 bottles in all, and hundreds of books on wines.

Frattaroli calls it an enoteca, a library of wines. In each of 20 small rooms he will collect wines from a distinct region of Italy. Each room holds bookshelves and is decorated with a panorama from that region. Frattaroli hopes that customers will stroll about the piazza, stopping to absorb something of his festival of rose, bianco, and just about everything in between.

Right now Frattaroli is in the process of stocking his enoteca, having wines shipped from vineyards that will do so, dispatching buyers to those that will not. The finished collection, he says with pride, will be rivaled by few places on earth, let alone in New England.

"I will become the biggest wineseller in Boston," Frattaroli says, but more than that, "We've got to do a unique job here. We want a place with good food, but we also want to make a place where people can learn about wine."

Frattaroli is sparing no expense in either department. A giant wood-heated oven that he shipped from Italy will be placed in the downstairs addition to the kitchen and will be used to cook fish dishes and gourmet pizzas.

The expanded space will necessitate a larger staff, but it will also make room for the Friday and Saturday-night overflow of customers, Frattaroli says.

The intricate marble and brick work, the granite-topped tables and the tiled floors are all Frattaroli's creations. "I do everything to my own plan. I do my own stuff," he says. On the cost of his work, he will say only "I make a dime, I spend three dimes back... we want the best."

Frattaroli built the original Lucia's from the ground up 10 years ago in Boston's North End, and won culinary plaudits from major publications. Now he is absorbed in the restaurant's Winchester incarnation, while his family runs the old place.

He says the expanded restaurant will create its own clientele. "When I opened in the North End, there were over 75 Italian restaurants there. People told me I was stupid. But I did really well and I am still one of the best in Boston. This is a unique place, and I think its uniqueness will draw customers in."

"We've got a big future," Frattaroli says with confidence. "This town should be proud of a place like this."

liquour licenses granted to restaurants in Winchester. Maximilian's Cafe owns another, and the third, previously owned by the Dover Grille, was revoked in June by the selectman and is currently up for grabs.

Copy Deadline

Contributions for publication submitted by 4 p.m. Monday will be considered for that Thursday's paper.

Contributors are requested to submit typed, double-spaced copy.

Submission by the deadline does not, however, guarantee publication the same week, as final decisions on what to include each week are made based on space considerations.

Every attempt will be made to place time-sensitive copy in a timely manner.

Carolyn Latanision and her son Ivan are the creators of an exhibit of paintings now showing at the Abbot Public Library in Marblehead.

Mother and son exhibit works in Marblehead

The July invitational exhibit in the gallery at Abbot Public Library in Marblehead of works by Winchester resident, Carolyn Latanision and her son, Ivan, has been extended through the month of August.

The library is located at 235 Pleasant St. (Route 114) and is open Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and on Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Carolyn Latanison is exhibiting 29 watercolor and casein paintings. Her work is represented in more than 20 corporate collections. Recently two of her paintings were acquired by Cabot Corporation, which owns a large collection of works of contemporary realism. She has exhibited her work throughout the greater Boston area as well as in New York, and has received many awards for it.

In June her Woburn studio was relocated and is now at 42 Pleasant St., Woburn. In addition to working there, she also teaches watercolor classes at the same location.

Ivan Latanision is exhibiting both black and white and color photographs in the show. He will begin his sophomore year at Rochester Institute of Technology in Rochester, N.Y., this fall as an imaging and photographic technology major.

One of his photographs was chosen for the 1987 Student Honors Show at R.I.T.

Ivan Latanision's photographs have been exhibited and received awards in juried shows throughout the area. He is a juried member of Cambridge Art Association as well as being a member of Concord and Winchester Art Associations.

WEDDINGS AND ENGAGEMENTS

Regina Cantella

Regina Cantella marries David Ryter

Regina Marie Cantella and David Mark Ryter were married July 19 at the Harvard Memorial Church in Cambridge.

Rev. James Haddad and Rabbi Neil Kominsky officiated at the double-ring ceremony. A reception followed at the Marriott Hotel in Burlington.

The maid of honor was Mary Ellen Cantella of Winchester, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Ann Marie Mitchell of Stamford, Conn., cousin of the bride, and Nancy Leland of Winchester; Lea Decoteau of Stoneham; Laura Garcia of Brighton, and Elizabeth Smedley of Needham, friends of the bride.

The best man was Alan Ryter of San Francisco, brother of the groom.

Ushers were Edward Ryter of Brighton, brother of the groom, and James Blum of Newton, Brian Tarbox of Honolulu, and Keith Van Sickle of Santa Clara, Calif., friends of the groom.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Joseph Cantella of Winchester, graduated from Simmons College and is a private physical therapy consultant.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel S. Ryter of Newton Highlands, graduated from MIT and Harvard University Business School. He is vice president of marketing at Pacer Software Inc.

After a trip to Hawaii, the couple will live in Hopkinton.

Elizabeth Bartus marries Jeffrey Cahill

Dr. and Mrs. Stanley A. Bartus of West Hartford, Conn., announce the marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth Ann Bartus of Boston, to Jeffrey Scott Cahill of Winchester, son of Mrs. Elaine Cahill and the late Mr. F. Joseph Cahill, June 20 at the Church of St. Timothy in West Hartford.

The Rev. Francis O'Neill and the Rev. Stephen Foley officiated the double-ring ceremony.

A reception followed at the Hartford Golf Club in West Hartford.

The maid of honor was Anastasia Bartus of West Hartford, the bride's sister. Bridesmaids were Christine Marie Bartus, the bride's sister, Kathleen Cahill of Winchester, the groom's sister, Mary Eileen Foley, a friend, and Elizabeth Herbert, a friend, all of West Hartford.

Junior bridesmaids were Mary Katherine Bartus and Stephanie Bartus, the brides' sisters, both of West Hartford. The flower girl was Amy Klembelm of Indiana, the bride's cousin. The ring bearer was Danny Meminick of Indiana, the bride's cousin.

The best man was Christopher Cahill of Winchester, the groom's brother. Ushers were Michael Cahill of Winchester, the groom's brother; Matthew Bartus of West Hartford, the bride's brother; Daniel Joslin of Auburndale, a friend; Ronald Dokus of Malden, a friend, and Dennis Sullivan of Northampton, a friend.

The bride is a graduate of Northwest Catholic High School in West Hartford and Fairfield University. She is currently employed by the Eye Research Institute in Boston as a public information assistant.

The groom is a graduate of Winchester High School and Fairfield University. He is a third year student at the New England School of Law and is employed as a research analyst by the state Legislature.

Elizabeth Zadworny marries Daniel Holmes

Dr. and Mrs. John Zadworny of Longmeadow announce the marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth Eileen Zadworny, to Daniel Parsons Holmes, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Parsons Holmes of Fairlane Terrace and the late David Ballard Holmes, August 1st at St. Mary's Church in Longmeadow.

A reception followed at the Marriott Grand Ballroom in Springfield.

The bride is a graduate of Smith College and the Syracuse University College of Law.

The groom is a graduate of Winchester High School, Dartmouth College and the University of Virginia School of Law.

The maid of honor was Meredith Zadworny of Fairfield, Conn. Bridesmaids were Mary Ann McCarthy of Longmeadow, Katharine Buckley of Washington, D.C., and Amy Zadworny of Longmeadow.

The best man was Bradford J. Holmes of Boston. Ushers were Christopher Morgan of Boston, Jeffrey Stein of Winchester and George Tuckner of Cambridge.

After a wedding trip to France and Switzerland, the couple will live in Milton.

Elizabeth Zadworny

Debra Capua

Debra Capua to marry Donald Lowke

Mr. and Mrs. Peter G. Capua of Winchester announce the engagement of their daughter, Debra Lee of Nashua, N.H., son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin E. Lowke of Vernon, Texas.

Capua graduated from Winchester High School and Burdett School.

Lowke graduated from the University of Texas and has resided in Nashua since 1959.

Both are employed by Computervision in Bedford.

An August wedding is planned.

PEOPLE

Winn receives Golden Poet Award

Maureen A. Winn of Winchester received the "Golden Poet Award" for the second year.

The award is part of the World of Poetry's annual contest. Last year Winn earned the award for her poem, "Lost Horizons," about architectural barriers. This year she won for "My Problem," a poem about the lack of handicap access restrooms on airplanes.

Winn's poetry concerns the problems experienced by the handicapped and personal and emotional experiences.

The following poem was submitted by Maureen A. Winn:

My Problem
En route to Boston via Tel Aviv and Heathro
I sat watching you 490 strong just get up and go

Thinking, for the first time in my chair bound life how I envy your mobility
How much you take for granted this agility

Without even thinking about it you are able to relieve your bladder
With each hour I become a little more uncomfortable and sadder.

It somehow seems odd that there is no solution to my problem of internal biology when sitting dehydrated I gaze in awe of the size of a 747 or Concorde and their sophisticated technology

Surely it's a shame that our sophistication can't dream up a bathroom design that would allow everyone to experience the feeling of relief divine

Pothier attends leadership week

Brian T. Pothier, son of Ray and Gayle Pothier of Mayflower Road, attended the Leadership Institute at the University of Illinois Conference Center near Monticello, Ill., July 23 through 31.

Pothier was one of 126 students chosen nationwide by Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity, several sororities and the Air Force Academy for their campus and organizational leadership, desire to reach higher levels of personal achievement and willingness to help others do the same.

Pothier is a student at Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

"We do all the basics drycleaners do, we just do them better."

For more than 38 years Faulkner's Cleansing has served the cleaning needs of Winchester residents and has built up a reputation for quality workmanship that has made them a trusted name in drycleaning and has made many Winchester residents lifelong customers.

Faulkner's not only drycleans all the usual items including pants suits, dresses, and coats, and cleans and presses shirts, but they also go one step further. Faulkner's inspects every article of clothing and replaces buttons or sews seams at no charge.

"We do all the basics that other drycleaners do, we just do them better," explains owner/proprietor Francis Hardy.

As far as service is concerned Faulkner's Cleansing offers something we tend to associate with past decades — door to door service. At no extra charge Faulkner's will pick up and deliver your drycleaning to your house.

Every Tuesday and Thursday their truck goes through Winchester for convenient door to door service. There is no extra charge for this convenience and customers can arrange for free pick-up and delivery by calling Faulkner's Cleansing at 665-6300.

In addition to cleaning all the usual items, Faulkner's also cleans various household items including shpcovers, draperies, and bedspreads. They are also experts at cleaning both suede and leather garments.

And, if you don't have the space around your home or apartment to store seasonal garb, Faulkner's offers storage for anything from furs to wools. Box storage is available in which you receive a large box to store your clothes which are cleaned and pressed just prior to pickup, and ready to wear when you retrieve them by calling Faulkner's Cleansing several days in advance.

For quality workmanship and the customer satisfaction which has been the trademark of Faulkner's for more than 38 years, opt for convenient door to door service at no extra charge, come into Faulkner's at 165 Franklin St., Melrose, or just pick up the phone and call them at 665-6300.

Faulkner's Cleansing is open Monday through Friday, 7:5, Saturdays, 8:1.

NEWS NOTES

Lifeline provides extra security

A lifeline unit could save a person's life.

Lifeline, a personal emergency telecommunications system, allows individuals who are medically at risk to remain in their homes with the assurance that help is near.

This system connects a subscriber's phone with the emergency response monitor in the Winchester Hospital Emergency Department. As soon as the alarm sounds, the hospital emergency room calls the subscriber. If there is no answer, responders, who live nearby and have previously agreed to respond in case of emergency, are sent to check the patient.

If the subscriber has a life-threatening medical condition, the local rescue unit is called to bring the patient directly to the hospital for care.

Subscribers do not have to be confined to their homes. Some subscribers work all day but want to know that should something happen at night, they will be able to summon help.

Most subscribers are elderly and live alone. However, Lifeline also serves infants at risk of SIDS (Sudden Infant Death Syndrome) and handicapped persons of all ages.

Subscribers pay a monthly fee of $15. Persons are also encouraged to sponsor someone who would otherwise be without it.

Brochures explaining the service and applications for a Lifeline are available at Winchester Hospital's Social Service Department, 729-9000, Ext. 3041.

Transfer Station stickers are now available

Transfer Station Stickers are now available for sale in the office of the Board of Health in the Town Hall or at the transfer station.

Stickers for automobiles will be sold at the Board of Health Office. Stickers for trucks and vans, whether they are commercial or for private use, must be obtained at the office at the transfer station. A registration must be presented in order to obtain a sticker.

The sticker price has been increased this year to $5 per sticker and the stickers will expire in September, 1989. In order to assist those residents who are not able to obtain the stickers at the Board of Health office during normal office hours, special dates have been established: Saturday, Aug. 22, between the hours of 8 and 1 at the transfer station; Monday Aug. 24, at the Board of Health office from 8 to 8 and Saturday, Aug. 29 from 8 to 1.

Cable fails at Selectmen's weekly meeting

Technical difficulties during Monday night's meeting of the Board of Selectmen prevented its broadcast on the town cable TV network.

Drew Bouldin, community services manager for Continental Cablevision of Winchester, said "We attribute the problem to an equipment malfunction. Troubleshooting during the meeting failed to find a specific cause; our entire local staff was working on it, but we were unable to get the meeting back on."

Bouldin said a page explaining the difficulties was transmitted to viewers during the normal meeting time. He apologized for the lack of coverage, and said the problem would be corrected before the next selectmen's meeting.

Continental cablevision is bound by an agreement with the Board of Selectmen to televise all its meetings, Bouldin said.

Dump site development causes controversy

Ferrari said Leary filled the sandpit "as a courtesy" and that there was "no exchange of money whatsoever."

Then in the spring of 1981, according to Morgan and other neighbors, truckloads of liquid or clay-like material began to arrive at the site, where workers dumped them into a small ravine. Morgan said that the material sloshed and dripped from the trucks as they drove up Rock Avenue, and he claimed that every night Ferrari would cover the road with a chemical powder to soak up evidence of the operation.

Ferrari said he spread calcium chloride and water on the road as per a town request to prevent dust, but that no liquids or chemicals were dumped. "I don't recall seeing any trucks dripping anything, and if I had I would have stopped them," Ferrari said.

Morgan said, however, that he followed the trucks to the liquid material's point of origination, a railroad siding in Cambridge. He said the material was being brought to the siding by railroad car from a hazardous-waste pit near the Alewife T station in west Cambridge.

Records show that the Board of Health knew of the dumping operation since at least late 1982. A Nov. 30, 1982, letter from the board notified Ferrari that he would have to comply with town landfill regulations, which took effect that Oct. 22, by obtaining a $5 permit. Those very regulations prohibited the dumping of demolition wastes "...including pipe, concrete, asphalt...and industrial and commercial wastes."

According to Winchester Health Director Joseph Tabbi, the Board of Health is obligated to seek injunctions against known illegal dumpers or to take steps to open an investigation. He said that since he had not been director at the time of the operation, he did not know why no action was taken.

Early in 1983, Morgan began writing to the state attorney general and to the Board of Health requesting that the fill material be tested and removed. Although it forwarded his complaints to DEQE, the attorney general's office made no direct reply, Morgan said. Meanwhile, according to Morgan, the Board of Health "reneged" on a verbal agreement to chemically test the landfill.

According to Morgan, former Board of Health Chairman Lawrence Quigley publicly promised after a contamination incident on Amberwood Drive that the board would require testing of any area that a citizen had reason to suspect was contaminated. After Morgan requested such testing at the Rock Avenue site, the board denied his plea. In an apparent Catch-22, the board decided at its Feb. 14, 1983, meeting that "no testing be done by the Board of Health unless evidence of toxic material be found on Mr. Ferrari's land," according to the minutes.

In April 1984, DEQE recommended that the Board of Health require Ferrari to "excavate sufficient holes...to expose the types of materials disposed," and that either the material be removed or the site be properly assigned as one containing wastes and covered with loam and grass to prevent seepage of rainwater.

In July 1984, Ferrari engaged the environmental assessment firm of Hidell & Eyster and Associates of South Weymouth to test the site for hazardous materials. According to Morgan, Ferrari hired the firm at his urging and that of the Board of Health. Ferrari said he did it on his own initiative. "The land had to be tested for bank financing, it was a process I would have to go through anyway," he said.

Instead of following DEQE's recommendations to excavate, Hidell & Eyster conducted test borings of the site in August 1984, in which a tube was rammed as far into the ground as possible. According to a preliminary report from the firm, the borings would "limit the disruption of the site, permit greater depth of penetration in search of ground water levels, and provide undisturbed samples."

Often the pipe was stopped by the concrete debris at as little as nine feet deep. Although one boring conducted in an area without debris showed no groundwater to a depth of 37 feet, Morgan and DEQE are agreed that the borings did not go deep enough on the site itself to rule out the presence of groundwater.

In the area of the ravine where Morgan said the liquid waste was dumped, Hidell & Eyster found a moist zone of "oily contamination" that chemical analysis showed to consist of petroleum hydrocarbons, cyanides, and phenols in "minimal concentrations." Further tests in the spring of 1985 showed that there was little or no leaching of these chemicals through the fill.

The cyanide found in the oily soils was concentrated at 2.4 parts per million, 48 times the level permitted in fresh water. A final report from Hidell & Eyster called this contamination level "high but not a hazard at the concentrations reported...If the site is clay capped, this concentration of cyanide should not be a problem."

The firm concluded that the metals and chemicals were of "such low concentrations...and of such small quantity that removal is not necessary nor would it benefit the environment in any quantifiable way."

Morgan, however, was not satisfied with these results. Although the site's new listing by the DEQE requires that further investigation take place within a year, Morgan is pressing for quicker action. At least one avenue is already closed: the Middlesex County District Attorney's office told Morgan in July that it could not prosecute the matter. "Your remedy, if any, lies with the state and local agencies or in civil suits," Assistant District Attorney James Howard wrote to Morgan.

Morgan, who says he cannot afford costly civil litigation, is therefore back where he started.

The town's response to Morgan's complaints has been appropriate, according to Chairman of the Board of Selectmen Judie Muggia. "In so many other instances, the action has been suited to the complaint," she said. "What makes this different from all the others?"

Muggia said that it is "very nice" that Morgan would like to see the fill removed, "but if it doesn't come within the parameters of what constitutes a forced removal because of a health danger, that's not going to happen."

A Rock Avenue resident who asked that his name not be used said that real estate brokers have told him he will have difficulty selling his property as long as the dump is across the street.

Meanwhile, Muggia says the town can choose to sell Ferrari the Woburn Loop property he needs, "but that in no way carries a permit to do one day's worth of development on that property until he meets the demands of DEQE." The town's control over Ferrari's plans is limited to building restrictions, she said.

Institute sues town

not need a permit to use the land as an institute. However, Randall said, according to Winchester's zoning bylaw section 4.4, he did need one for the auxiliary use, his family's home.

Callan's attorney, John J. Griffin Jr., filed the land court suit against the town after Gallagher ordered Callan to stop using the land as a single-family residence on May 5, 1987. Gallagher inspected the property that day and found that, despite the ZBA decision of November 1986, the Callan family did live on the property. Gallagher also said he did not find any evidence of the institute on the property.

Gallagher filed an application for a complaint against Callan in Woburn District Court on June 2. The charge is violation of zoning bylaw section 4.4, or use of SC1 zoned land primarily as a single-family residence. If the court finds the complaint valid, it can fine Callan for every day he remains on the property.

Callan does not deny that he was living on the property. He claims he has the right to live there, because he is the director of the institute and because the institute is an allowable use of the land as it is zoned.

In his appeal to the ZBA on July 21, Griffin said the board's decision of November 24 "was expressly limited to one issue." That issue is whether or not One Arlington Institute was a non-profit organization when the zoning enforcement officer (Gallagher) made his original decision. It did not rule on the use of the land as a residence, Griffin said.

At the ZBA meeting of July 21, Callan charged town officials with discrimination, saying some of his Mexican employees had been harassed by town officials and police. Neither Callan or Gallagher would comment on those charges.

The ZBA unanimously upheld Gallagher's decision that Callan was using the land illegaly.

At a later interview, Callan said his family is extremely upset. He said he "can't comprehend why the town is doing this to his family."

Callan and his family lived on Olde Village Street for two years before buying the property at One Arlington St. and they never had any problems.

He said he has made every effort to accommodate neighbors by limiting the traffic at the property. "We're so low-key, the town has accused us of not existing," Callan said.

Callan added that, even if his family did not live at the institute, someone would be there. "I can't abandon the property. There would always have to be someone on the property."

The Board of Selectmen also expressed confusion about the use of the property. During an October 6, 1986, meeting, Boston Edison representative Edward Chisholm requested permission to install a conduit on Arlington Street. Chisholm said the conduit would provide service to One Arlington St., because the electrical service was inadequate.

Chisholm said Callan's contractor would do all the digging and Boston Edison would make the pole-top connection.

Judith Muggia, a member of the board at that time, said she was uncomfortable with permitting the conduit because "although this has nothing to do with the zoning, week by week and month by month, all sorts of approvals that impinge on this purported institute are going through before the board has any information about what is transpiring on that property," according to the minutes of that meeting.

Board member Francis Sopper said he wanted to wait until the ZBA made a decision before voting.

Chairman Wade Welch said he did not think there was a relationship between the ZBA decision and the electrical conduit.

The final vote was 3-2 with Mark Lombardi and Sopper voting negatively.

Callan saw this as another attempt by the town to make things difficult for him. The conduit was to be used for air conditioning, a commercial range and a dryer.

Fiesta will take place on Leonard Field generated by the fiesta to the roar of the crowd at a baseball game and suggested that the neighbors "overlook it."

Selectman Robert Deering, however, said that baseball and the fiesta were like "apples and oranges" and he reiterated his opposition to the siting of the carnival.

Bonad Road resident Susan Greenblatt said that although she lives a block away from the field, the carnival made it sound as if there were "several live bands in our back yard."

But another neighbor, Daniel Chane of Forest Street, said the fiesta "performs an important function in this town. ... I hear the noise too, but I like it."

Mary Pronsky of Washington Street said, "I plead with the neighbors to try to be sympathetic and tolerant for 48 hours. I think we lose a part of ourselves if we allow the carnival to die."

Selectman Schmitt cited two reasons for his newfound sympathy for the fiesta. "First, the society made an attempt to consider the concerns of the neighborhood by reducing the carnival to two days. Second, I think people should have a chance to work out their problems among themselves."

Schmitt warned that the society would have to carefully monitor this year's activities, and he said that his vote Monday in no way dictated what his stand would be when the society applies for a permit again next year.

In the near future, however, Schmitt says "I don't know what new information (neighbors) could bring to bear that would change my view."

Chairman of the Board of Selectman Judie Muggia opened the hearing in Italian, saying "Il l'ora per la conferenza" (It is time for the conference). She said the board had received an extraordinary amount of public input on the issue over the past week.

Immediately before the vote, Muggia said to townspeople, "Feelings have begun to run very high...I know you all live in the same neighborhood, and I hope everybody leaves able to continue being good neighbors." Muggia was against the permit in all three votes.

The contentiousness she was attempting to stave off, however, had already worked its way onto the board. Last week, Selectman Lombardi accused the selectman who voted against the fiesta of attempting to "kill it off."

He said the regulations on playing-field use had been created specifically to quash the Italian Fiesta, and that the clause allowing the board to make exceptions was included so that the EnKa fair, which operates on Manchester Field, could be spared.

Muggia said, however, that EnKa's permit was granted "long before" the policy change was made. She called Lombardi's allegations "not valid and not fair" and said the scheme he outlined was "never even discussed...that's unconstitutional."

Scmitt acknowledged that "this thing could get dragged on indefinitely if people want to do it." He said he was "guaranteed to make enemies" no matter what his decision had been.

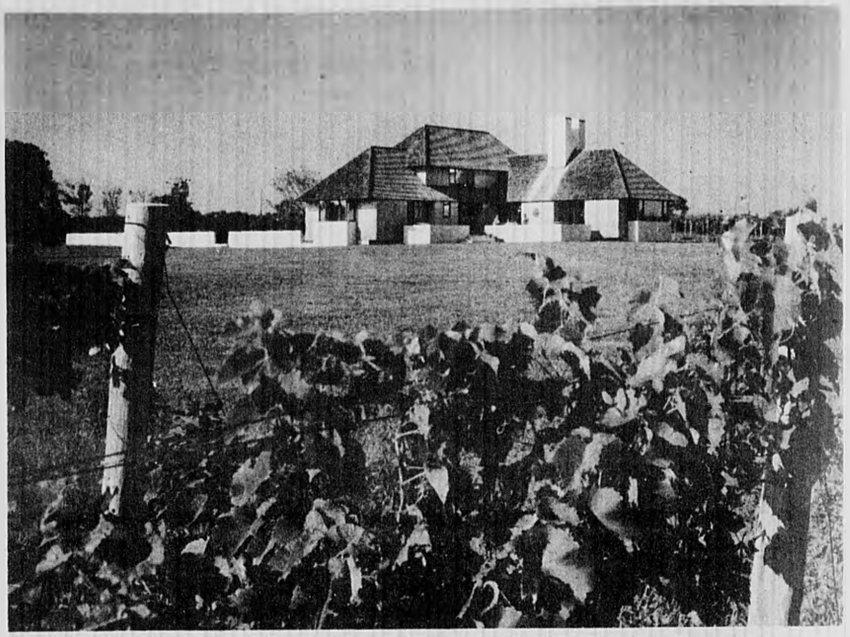
What To Do

Story by William Clifford

Local wineries produce fine wines



Sakonnet Vineyards in Little Compton Rhode Island won a gold medal for its 1985 Restaurant Blend. (photo by Steve Rosenthal)

On a recent trip to Europe I was asked repeatedly, "Which are your best American wines?" The world is beginning to notice the wines of America.

The answer to this question is easy enough if one is permitted to name a couple of hundred, but it would be out of the question to tick off half a dozen. We now have too large a wine industry with too many diverse accomplishments to allow for a simple reply.

Once the question was put to me in a different way: "What part of the country do your best wines come from?" That posed no problem. But no sooner had I said "California" that I wanted to add, "and many other interesting smaller regions."

Most of us who write about wines have given due attention to New York State, Washington State, Oregon, and a few other parts of the country. Recently I have been favorably impressed by wines from Virginia, Maryland, Ohio, and even Texas. I shouldn't say "even" because I can well remember Dr. Konstantin Frank telling me, 20 years ago, that fine wines would one day be grown in Texas.

At the moment, I am particularly interested in New England. My mind is on this somewhat unlikely climate because I was one of the judges at the 1986 New England Wine Competition, held last November 1st in Boston. We tasted a total of 84 wines in some 34 different categories. How about that for proof of diversity!

One reason for all the different categories is that many of the wineries are young, experimental, and still finding their way. Some of them invent a new category almost every year.

The somewhat inhospitable New England climate induces one grower to focus on French-American hydrid grapes while another struggles with European viniferas, one to make fruit and berry wines while his neighbor tries valiantly to ripen his grapes, one to sweeten the vat for popular consumption while another produces dry wine for connoisseurs.

We awarded nine gold medals to seven different wineries, listed here in the order presented for judging: grape wines first, then fruit and berry:

1985 Restaurant Blend (dry white), Sakonnet Vineyards, Little Compton, Rhode Island.

1985 Seyval Blanc, Hopkins Vineyard, New Preston, Connecticut.

1985 Vidal Blanc, Sakonnet.

1984 Chardonnay, Haight Vineyard & Winery, Litchfield, Connecticut.

1986 Autumn Blush (medium rose), Hamlet Hill Vineyards, Pomfret, Connecticut.

Harvest Red (sweet) Commonwealth Winery, Plymouth, Massachusetts.

Coastal White Pear Apple (medium) Bartlett Maine Estate, Gouldsboro, Maine.

After Dinner Peach (sweet), Nashoba Valley Winery, Bolton, Massachusetts.

Blueberry Dry (medium), Bartlett.

We also awarded six silver medals to four of the same wineries:

Commonwealth for its 1984 Chardonnay Dana Vineyard and its Cranberry Blush (sparkling sweet).

Nashoba for its Sparkling Apple and Upland Red Blueberry Pear.

Hopkins for its 1985 First Blush, and Haight for its Covertside White (both medium sweet).

I live not far from Hopkins and Haight, and so know these two wineries better than most. In addition to Hopkins' gold-medal Seyval Blanc, I like its Yankee Cider Apple Wine.

Haight makes some excellent Rieslings, over and above its superior Chardonnays. I prefer the white wines to the reds from both wineries, but that's no suprise down East.

We designated the Nashoba Valley After Dinner Peach as Best of Competition, an honor that says something about the skill of Nashoba's winemaking and the climate of New England relative to wine grapes and other fruits.

After the judging I went to dinner at Seasons, the elegant restaurant in the Bostonian Hotel, which maintains a truly impressive all-American wine list. This hotel and its restaurant share the same ownership and many of the same goals as the Park Terrace Hotel and its Chardonnay Restaurant in Washington, D.C., whose extraordinary stock of older California vintages is famous across the country.

At Seasons I began with an aperitif of Korbel Brut, the brand of sparkling wine served there by the glass. Then came a bottle of 1984 Crosswoods Chardonnay, followed by a bottle of 1980 Hanzell Pinot Noir—the latter chosen with the good advice of the hotel manager, whom I asked to name his own favorite Pinot Noir from the list.

These wines accompanied a diner of lightly grilled quail, oyster soup with hominy, monkfish with an assortment of fancy vegetables, and cranberry ice cream. My favorite dish was the oyster soup, which made use of hominy to impart the flavor of corn kernels without the toughness, plus a seasoning of chives and crisp slivers of fennel. It was a noble bowl of oysters.

The Seasons listed only two New England wines, but I was delighted to find the inaugural bottling of Crosswoods Chardonnay because it is unquestionably one of the finest wines ever grown in the cool Northeast. I had in fact looked for it at the New England Wine Competition, but after tasting my way carefully through the five Chardonnays under consideration, I knew it hadn't been entered.

Crosswoods is a small winery at North Stonington, Connecticut, dedicated to making wines primarily from its own 30 acres of classic vinifera grapes. Owners Susan and Hugh Connell planted their first vines in 1981 and proceeded to convert four 19-century dairy barns into a modern 20,000-gallon winery.

Crosswoods' winemaker is a native Connecticut Yankee named George Sulick who studied at Fresno, then worked for David Bruce and Bisceglia in California before joining the Connells. His first harvest was 1984.

Crosswoods did not enter the New England Competition because it had previously shown the 1984 vintage, and the 1985 was not quite ready to be judged. Also, production is so small—700 cases of the 1984 Chardonnay, and only 600 of the 1985—and the winery's reputation suddenly so great that the wines quickly sell out.

Besides the now-famous Chardonnay, Crosswoods' 1986 harvest has yielded a Merlot, a Gamay Noir, and a popular-priced proprietary blend named Scrimshaw, made of Chardonnay, Vidal Blanc, Riesling, and Gewurztraminer grapes.

Two years ago a precipitant Providence, Rhode Island critic asked, "Is Crosswoods the Jordan of the East?" Not exactly. But I'd say that this winery is likely to win a gold medal in any show it cares to enter.

What To Do

Story by Susan Hershey

Wine lovers appreciate finer things

To the wine connoisseur, life must seem rosey most of the time. No matter what crisis or celebration arises, there is always an extraordinary selection of tempting wines to chose from...if you know about wine.

This novice (very novice) oenologist set out to learn what she could — to redefine her tastes — to do her part to help, as Richard Elia would say "to refine our civilization."

According to Elia, publisher and editor of the Wine Quarterly, an informative and superbly presented magazine, published in Winchester "wine is the most civilized thing in the world. It can only be as good as nature will give you and if you like wine, you should be a scholar, an academic."

"Americans have created an elitism around wine."says Elia,"The French say about a bottle of wine,open it, drink it, you'll like it."

People have been drinking wine for more than two thousand years, according to Myra Waldo, author of The Pleasures of Wine. They drink it because they enjoy it. It is the purest of all drinks, containing only crushed grapes.

When water was dangerous to drink because of impurities, people turned to wine as a healthy alternative and as a special taste treat.

Elia suggests that the two most desirable wines are Bordeaux and Port, although it is clear that personal tastes differ among wine lovers. "People will kill for a 1963 Port," says Elia.

"The color of Bordeaux can be deep purple or rubyish. The bouquet is important. The perfume announces itself with perhaps a dominence of currents or grapes, maybe violet or cedar,"continues Elia.

Alec Waugh, on the other hand, says in In Praise of Wine that Burgundy is the king of wines and claret the queen.

He suggests that champagne is the supreme wine for middle age. Not only because we are then better able to afford it, and are no longer intimidated by headwaiters, but because of a change in our metabolism.

Waugh quotes a passage from a travel book he published in 1952: Middle age has its own rewards; its own matured [illegible] styling preferences. A taste for champagne is one of them. In my youth I had dispised it as a vulgar ostentatious drink."

Waugh explains that the bubbles in champagne are drops of liquid agitated by escaping carbon dioxide and are a natural by product of fermentation.

Although France probably produces most of the finest wines in the world, Germany is also well known for her wines, which are mostly white. Italian wines are mainly red and next to France, Italy devotes the most acreage to producing wine. The per capita consumption is believed to be the highest in the world in Italy, about fifty times that of the United States.

French wines have been classified to make it easier for the wine drinker to chose the proper wine. Germans must know how to read the labels.

Hot sunny Spain has always produced wines and exported them to other countries. The majority of Spanish wine is sherry, a blended product using different types of wine, produced only in southern Spain.

Port, from Oporto, Portugal, according to Waldo, is one of the unique wines of the world. Port is inimitable, she claims.

Elia explains that Madeira is the most immortal wine. It lasts the longest and has a high alcohol con

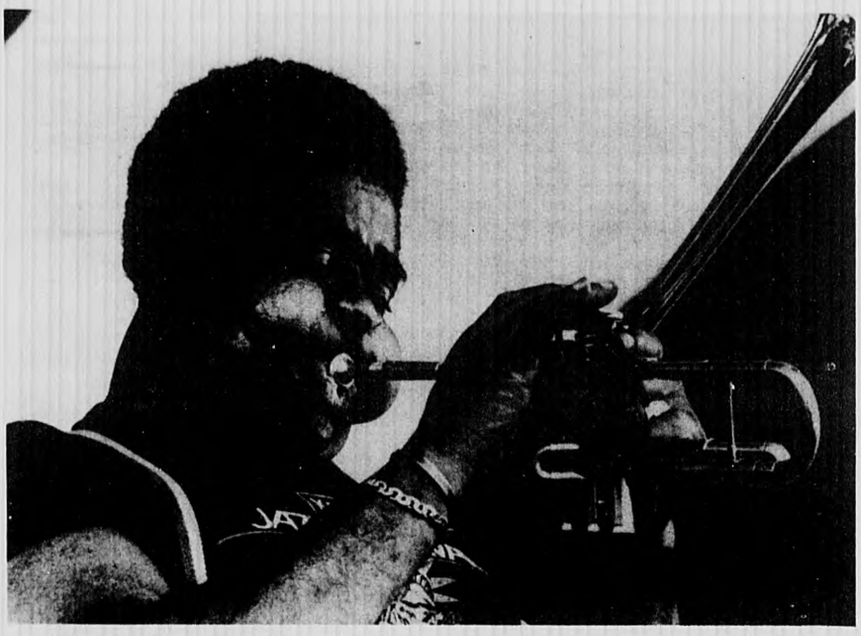
What's On The Boards?



The Dizzy Gillespie Big Band performs on Aug. 16 at the Newport Jazz Festival, Newport, Rhode Island.

Jazz: shake the

Jazz greats at Newport

The JVC Jazz Festival Newport, R.I. comes alive Saturday and Sunday, August 15 and 16 at Newport's Fort Adams State Park with afternoons that will highlight jazz greats Dizzy Gillespie and his Big Band, Nancy Wilson, George Benson, and the Crusaders featuring Joe Sample and Wilton Felder. Featured along with these enduring legends will be young stars Wynton Marsalis, Kenny G., Michael Brecker, Stanley Jordan, Branford Marsalis, and Dianne Reeves.

A living legend, That's trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie, the father of be-bop, who will celebrate his 70th birthday year at Newport on Sunday, Aug. 16. Recreating his famous big band of the 1940's, Gillespie continues to embellish his revolutionary union of traditional swing with African and Latin rhythms that shook the music world. With his lightning fast playing and showmanship, Dizzy Gillespie and his Big Band promise to make this year's festival especially memorable.

Cleo Laine

Song stylist Nancy Wilson, master of jazz, pop, blues, and gospel, will work her special magic at Newport on Saturday, Aug. 15. Ever since her first hit Guess Who I Saw Today? Wilson has thrilled audiences with a silky voice and flawless delivery. Over 40 albums later, voted Best Female Vocalist by Downbeat and Playboy jazz polls, Nancy Wilson is hotter than ever.

First, critics hailed him as one of the world's greatest jazz guitarists. Then, in 1976, he made the most successful jazz recording of all time. Today, 11 years after Breezin became the first jazz album to go double-platinum, George Benson continues to explore new musical directions. Benson's consummate lyrical master of the guitar is only matched by his expressive, one-of-a-kind vocals. George Benson, who recently completed an album collaboration with guitarist Earl Klugh, will appear at the JVC Jazz Festival on Sunday, Aug. 16.

The Crusaders, coming to Newport on Saturday, Aug. 15, have been an important jazz & soul staple for over three decades. With the dynamic saxophone of Wilton Felder and the unmistakable, often-limited keyboard of Joe Sample, the Crusaders' music continues to break new ground and delight audiences and critics alike. Their new album, The Good and Bad Times, features Nancy Wilson (performing with her trio that same day at Newport) on vocals.

An extraordinary array of young, innovative, energetic and audience pleasing talent will grace the Festival this year.

An uncompromising genius, trumpeter Wynton Marsalis has been called one of jazz's brightest hopes, for his artistry and for his musical integrity. Performing on Saturday, Aug. 15, Marsalis has encouraged a whole new generation of young musicians with his unprecedented commercial success and critical acclaim.

The brilliance of fusion saxophone superstar Kenny G. draws upon all genres of music. His single Songbird, off the album Duotones, is one of the hottest records in America this summer. Kenny G. will bring his unique blend of R & B on Aug. 15.

Stanley Jordan is the first guitarist to employ full-time the famed touch-technique, whereby both hands instead of one are used to articulate notes, arpeggios, and chords on the fretboard of the guitar. The result is a harmonically rich, multi-layered sound that resembles not one, but two or three guitarists playing simultaneously.

Jordan brings the standards of legends like Miles Davis and Thelonious Monk to life in a new medium, and also stabs into the future with his own compositions. Stanley Jordan will appear solo on Aug. 15.

An artist whose time has come this summer with the release of his first album as a leader, tenor saxophonist Michael Brecker will appear on Aug. 16. Termed by many the preeminent studio saxophonist of his generation, Michael Brecker has credits on over 400 albums. In the late 60's, Brecker was instrumental in the early development of jazz/rock fusion with the group Dreams, and has since worked with such diverse talent as Chick Corea, Frank Sinatra, John Lennon, Charles Mingus, Bruce Springsteen, Quincy Jones, George Clinton, Herbie Hancock, as well as his brother, the trumpeter Randy Brecker.

The versatility of saxophonist Branford Marsalis, appearing Aug. 16, has broken barriers and opened doors. From swing to Sting, Branford is accomplished in all musical contexts. He proved his jazz chops in his brother Wynton's quintet, on his own recordings, and in rock superstar Sting's Dream of the Blue Turtles project.

Detroit-born vocalist Dianne Reeves comes to Newport on Aug. 16. With a three-octave range and a graceful balance of sultriness and classic cool, she is a favorite of musicians like Clark Terry, Stanley Turrentine, and George Duke, each of whom she has performed with.

These young musicians have in common a respect for jazz roots that qualifies them to be the standard bearers for a new generation of jazz giants. At the 1987 JVC Jazz Festival in Newport, they will join enduring legends Dizzy Gillespie, George Benson, Nancy Wilson, and the Crusaders featuring Joe Sample and Wilton Felder to make an extraordinary weekend of music.

This is a Newport Jazz Festival produced by George Wein and sponsored by JVC, one of the world's largest manufacturers of high quality audio and video products.

Tickets for the Festival are now on sale at all major ticket outlets including TICKETRON and Strawberries Record Stores. Admission is $20 per day in advance ($22 day-of), or this year for the first time a 2-day pass for $36, available by mail-order only from PO Box 605, Newport, RI 02840. For more info. call (401) 847-3700.

North Shore Celebrity Series continues

Two of the top names in the contemporary music world, Cleo Laine and Neil Sedaka, and the 1981 Tony Award-winning best musical 42nd Street are on tap at the North Shore Music Theatre as the 1987 Celebrity Concert Series and Broadway in Beverly Series continues.

Songstress Cleo Laine appears at the North Shore Music Theatre for one performance only at 8 p.m. on Thursday, August 6. Tickets are $20.

Laine will be joined in concert at the North Shore Music Theatre by her husband, composer/conductor/performer John Dankworth.

Neil Sedaka appears in concert in Beverly on August 7 and 8 for three special performances. A pop star in the 1950's, Sedaka was the creator of such hits as Calendar Girl and Breaking Up Is Hard to Do. In recent years, he has been represented at the top of the charts again with such hits as Love Will Keep Us Together and Laughter In the Rain.

Neil Sedaka appears at the North Shore Music Theatre at 8 p.m. on Friday, August 7, tickets $20; and at 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. on Saturday, August 8, tickets $22.50.

Still running on Broadway, 42nd Street, a musical extravaganza in the biggest Broadway tradition, will open on Monday, Aug. 10 and continue through Aug. 22. The show invites you to "come and meet those dancing feet" while listening to those great musical standards by Harry Warren: 42nd Street, The Lullabye of Broadway, We're in the Money, Shuffle Off to Buffalo, and You're Getting to Be a Habit With Me. Based on the 1933 Warner Brothers/Busby Berkeley film classic, 42nd Street is the crowning achievement of the late, great director Gower Champion.

Performances are Monday through Saturday at 8 p.m., with 2 p.m. matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. Ticket prices are $17 Monday through Thursday, $18 on Friday, $20 on Saturday evening, $15.50 for the Wednesday matinee, and $14.50 for the Saturday matinee.

The North Shore Music Theatre is located directly off Exit 19 of Route 128 in Beverly. For information or to order tickets, contact the box office at 62 Dunham Road, Beverly, MA 01915; 922-8500.

Historical journey in dance

The Berkshire Theatre Festival's third production in the Unicorn Theatre is The Dancing School by and with Leah Kreutzer. The concept for this dance/theatre piece originated at the BTF in 1985. Kreutzer then developed The Dancing School further at the request of Ellen Burstyn and Peter Masterson in 1986 at the Actors Studio in New York.

The Dancing School takes the audience on an historical journey starting with the social conventions and constraints of the 19th century and ending with the free and personal self-expression of the 20th century. The Dancing School began as an exploration for Kreutzer. An exploration of dance and herself, the dancer.

"When I move," Kreutzer relays in the script, "I don't want to be a metaphor. I want to be a real character." This exploration has allowed Kreutzer to reveal deep, passionate feelings about something she has done all of her life. "I'm a dancer," Kreutzer says, "and I speak with my body."

The Dancing School is directed by Benjamin Barber with sets by Lino Toyos, costumes by Daniele Hollywood, lighting by Michael Chybowski, and sound by Brent Evans.

The Dancing School has a new opening date of Friday, August 7 and runs through August 15 in the Unicorn Theatre at the Berkshire Theatre Festival. Performance times are Monday through Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. Tickets are $8.50 and can be reserved by calling the BTF Box Office at (413) 298-5576.

The final production in the Unicorn Theatre will be Blue Window by Craig Lucas and it will run August 29 through August 28.

Abyssinia trys out

The new soul-stirring gospel, musical Abyssinia, will try out at the Goodspeed-At-Chester/The Norma Terris Theatre, opening on Tuesday, Aug. 11 for four weeks only, through Sept. 6.

Paul Anka

Abyssinia, a heart-stirring story of faith, hope and the power of love, centers around a Southern farm girl named Abyssinia who is blessed with a beautiful voice and the ability to heal others. Performances are Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m., Saturday at 5 and 9 p.m., Sunday at 5 p.m., with a Wednesday matinee at 2:30 p.m.

The Norma Terris Theatre is dedicated to the presentation of musicals-in-progress and it is there that audiences may see a production develop day by day. It is customary, on designated evenings, to have talk back discussions after the performance between the audience and the author, composer and director.

Season subscriptions for the 1987-88 season at Goodspeed-at-Chester are available now at the Goodspeed Opera House box office in East Haddam, CT 06423. Also planned for the subscription series is Butterfly, about young, contemporary romance in Japan, on stage Nov. 10 through Dec. 6, and Suds, a humorous love story, scheduled for May 17 through June 12, 1988.

For Goodspeed-at-Chester season subscriptions, or for single tickets to Abyssinia, call the Goodspeed box office at (203) 873-8668.

Barbara Cook

Cook's performance memorable

REVIEW

Thirty years ago come December, a young, pert and winsome Barbara Cook opened on Broadway opposite Robert Preston's Harold Hill in Meredith Willson's landmark musical The Music Man, originating the role of Marian, the librarian, for which she is probably best remembered. Earlier shows preceded, the short-lived Flahooley and Plain And Fancy, and others followed, namely She Loves Me, Candid and The Gay Life, as well as straight dramatic leads. But, as Miss Cook reflects graciously, "It was always Shirley Jones who got the juicy roles in the movie musicals of the day!"

The talented singer and actress continued with leading roles in the Broadway revivals of Oklahoma, Carousel, The King and I, Show Boat and The Glass Harp. A bit older, a bit wiser, and a bit less svelte, Miss Cook in recent years has concentrated on a most successful career as a concert and recording artist, both here and abroad.

At the North Shore Music Theatre for their Broadway at Beverly '87 series, Miss Cook presented her award winning solo concert performance, to the delight of her many fans. Her performance has the aura of sophistication associated with the smart, chic supper clubs of yesteryear. (Indeed, some of you may recall her early days with Guy Guarino at the late Darbury Room in Boston.) Her voice, always formidable, has grown and developed over the years and is now at the peak of its maturity. No song is too difficult or too great a challenge for her voice, truly a finely-honed instrument!

Miss Cook is backed by five fine musicians plus an absolutely sensational musical director and piano accompanist, Wally Harper. A show in himself, Harper literally bounces out of his seat, hair flying every which way, during the more raucous numbers. He is also responsible for all the fabulous musical arrangements. In Harper, Miss Cook truly has nabbed a gem!

Miss Cook's program runs the gamut, from ballads to blues to jazz to bop, all executed with equal aplomb. To add a personal touch, she intersperses nostalgic tidbits, recalling a time when Noel Coward visited backstage accompanied by Marlene Deitrich, or, when responding to a knock on her dressing room door, she found tall, handsome Gary Cooper standing there.

The veteran performer opens with the rousing Sing a Song With Me, followed by a super arrangement of the Arlen and Mercer classic Come Rain Or Come Shine. Three Gershwin tunes come next, the classic The Man I Love, the plaintive Soon, and the standard A Foggy Day, beautifully essayed. This is succeeded by a sensational rendition of Sweet Georgia Brown, one of the evening's highlights.

A consummate artist, Miss Cook alters pace with Glad Rag Doll and Coward's poignant If Love Were All. After a humorous aside about ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — You could learn a valuable secret that prepares you for a profitable new beginning. Your popularity peaks, take the initiative and deal with the public. Go over your budget — you're in a much better position financially now.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — You can clarify your ultimate goals in career, pressures lift and social life sparkles. Trust your hunches — you can make a major breakthrough if you're persistent and determined. Pay attention to your personal appearance.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Your intuitions are right on target so follow through on first impressions. Wishes could come true, your romantic life sparkles — be sensitive and alert to possibilities. A recent reverse could ultimately work to your advantage.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — The accent is on travel, education, communication and a family reunion is possible. Pay attention to your rights in career, keep options open and don't give away something for nothing. A good financial offer could come your way.

LEO: (July 23 to Aug. 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Break through bureaucratic red tape regarding taxes, licenses and other people's assets. Concentrate on publishing, education and collecting necessary information. Be patient and something apparently negative could turn in your favor.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — You can reach agreements with mate or partner through affectionate discussion. A joint financial venture can be successful when harmony prevails. Break away from limitations — advertise, travel and communicate your bright ideas.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Good time to upgrade your surroundings in the workplace. An associate could make romantic overtures. Be realistic about relationships with mate or partner — face facts! Be generous, not petty, about joint financial matters.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — Domestic adjustments are highlighted and may mean a change of residence. Romance and your creativity are accented — don't let unrealistic expectations lead to feelings of disappointment. Finish up a work project.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Concentrate on long-range ambitions and get cooperation from a parent or authority figure. Demonstrate reliability and contact decisive, dynamic people who recognize your potential. A love affair could gain momentum now.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — A time to make serious, long-term commitments for future success. Free yourself from burdens that don't really belong to you. Don't force issues regarding property, real estate and domestic matters — avoid confrontations.

AQUARIUS: (Jan 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — It's time to re-evaluate finances and be alert to new ways to increase your income. A close relative could give good advice. Complete projects in process, beautify your base of operations and entertain in your home.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Make new, important starts in new directions that will use your full potential. Look your best, expand your influence and step into the spotlight. Stick with your budget, run errands, make phone calls and catch up on correspondence.

Comedy queens in Cambridge

observational and sometimes autobiographical wit to Catch A Rising Star in Harvard Square through Saturday, Aug. 8. Joining the headliner will be Bill Campbell and Ron Lynch.

Described by Newsweek as one of the new Queens of Comedy and hailed by others as one of the more successful female comics today, Siskind learned her craft growing up in a very funny family (My brothers always took me out with them but I would have had a better time if they had punched a hole in the box).

For eight years Siskind has built a solid reputation from Boston to L.A. taking her audiences through the backwaters of the mind while exploring the neurotic personality. "I would like to fall in love again, meet someone special. Someone I could seriously take for granted. Someone I could look at in the morning and say you're not what I had in mind."

Bill Campbell is a founding member of what today is known as Boston Comedy. Helping to establish Boston as a leader in the development of comic entertainers, Campbell has been performing headline acts throughout the New England area since 1980. A fixture at all the local comedy clubs in Boston, Campbell has also worked across the U.S. performing in concert with many top acts such as Michael Franks, Roy Orbison and Gil Scot Heron.

Ron Lynch has been involved with comedy most of his "natural life." Entering the real world with a completely useless Masters in Theatre, Ron became a part of a comedy team, Bob & Ron. The team entertained radio audiences for five years while also touring the United States with their live act. In 1981 Ron formed the improv group temporary relief, which had a one year run at the Charles Playhouse, Boston.

All shows at Catch are All Ages Shows. Headline comedy is presented every Tuesday through Thursday at 9 p.m., Friday at 8:30 and 11 p.m., and Saturday at 7:30 p.m., 9:45 p.m., and midnight. Cover charge ranges from $7 to $10. Sunday and Monday Catch presents Comedy Showcase/Open Mike Night at 9 p.m., with a cover of $3. Music is presented Tuesday through Thursday at 11 p.m., highlighting Blues Jam with Larry Carsman on Tuesdays, Heidi and the Secret Admirers on Wednesdays, and a special guest on Thursdays. There is no cover at 11 p.m. weeknights.

Catch a Rising Star is located at 30 JFK St., Harvard Square, Cambridge. For tickets and information call 661-9887.

Peg O' My Heart plays at the Nickerson Theatre through the end of August.

Nickerson presents Peg

The Nickerson Theatre, Norwell's year-round professional theatre, will launch its summer season with the musical, Peg O' My Heart beginning a five week run this week.

The production is directed by Larry Carpenter, artistic director of the American Stage Festival, Milford, N.H. The musical is based on the 1912 comedy by J. Hartley Manners who wrote the original play as a marriage proposal for the noted actress Laurette Taylor. Adapted from the original script by Mr. Carpenter, Peg O' My Heart has music and lyrics by David Heneker.

Heading the cast in the title role is Ann Morrison, who performed the lead role as Peg in the London production which ran for 10 months. Jan Miner will perform the role of Mrs. Chichester.

Other notables in the case include George Ede, as Jarvis. Mr. Ede appeared on Broadway with Claudette Colbert and Rex Harrison in Aren't We All? and with Vanessa Redgrave in Lady From The Sea.

Davis Gaines plays Sir Gerald Adair. Mr. Gaines recently made his New York City Opera debut singing the leading role in Sigmund Romberg's New Moon.

The British-society types are played by Joel Blum as Henry; Jeff Brooks as Alaric; Marilyn Caskey as Ethel; Suzanne Dawson as Bennett and Jonathan Simmons as Christian.

Peg O' My Heart continues at the Nickerson Theatre through August 30. Performance times are: Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m.; Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m.; Sunday at 7 p.m., and matinees at 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. There will be two Saturday matinees at 4 p.m. on Saturday, August 22 and August 29.

Prices are $17 for weeknights, matinees and Sunday performances, and $19 for Friday and Saturday evenings.

The Nickerson Theatre is easily accessible off Route 3, South, Exit 14 and free parking is available on the grounds. For tickets and further information, call or write the theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, P.O. Box 272, Accord (Norwell), MA 02018, 871-2400.

What To Do

Story by Barry Hughes

Illustration by Carl DiRocco

Hidden patterns emerge:

Harmonics converge

If your heart yearns for a good sign, hang on to your hats -- Harmonic Convergence is upon us.

What is it? Good question. It's an event. A happening, as we used to say in the 60s, and it's happening soon, on August 16 and 17.

Harmonic Convergence sounds like a coming together of some sort and a harmonious one at that.

An informal survey of the neighborhood revealed little. We talked with a woman who's studying ancient Greek at Harvard this summer ("I'll bring my harmonica; when is it?"); a Williamstown doctor friend ("It sounds weird to me."); a local psychic and teacher with a huge following in the Boston area ("It's like a 5000 year full moon.")

The Cosmic Muffin, who handles astrological matters for radio station WBCN, the Rock of Boson, didn't return our call. The doc from Williamstown said that CosMcMuffin sounds like a breakfast special at McDonalds. An astrologer who advertises in the Yale Alumni Magazine, surely a sign of changing times, disclaimed any Harmonic Conversion Information. "I'm strictly from the Western tradition."

A local scientist took time out from working on an organic solution to the cranberry bog blight to say "it sounds like a typical New Age terminological highjacking."

"Never heard of it," said the information director at the Smithsonian Institution's Astrophysical Observatory. We'd told her that some of the planets were lined up in a grand trine -- what about that?

Sensing our disappointment in her reply, she switched us over to James Cornell, public affairs officer at the Observatory, who had an interest in archaeological aspects of astronomy. We told him about the Mayan calendar predicting the end of time, or at least a break in the action this month; that the planets were going to be in special alignment.

"I have no idea what you're talking about," said Cornell. "The Mayans predicted the beginning of time and the end of time but they didn't stick around for it. Perhaps you should ask a Mayan. There are a few of them left in the jungle."

By now it seemed clear that the key to connecting with the H.C. was unlikely to be found in the scientific community as we now know it. But our search led to the writings of Jose Arguelles, a writer and visionary from Colorado with a strong academic background and bloodties to the ancient Mexicans.

Arguelles wrote The Mayan Factor: Path Beyond Technology, in which he interprets the Mayan teachings and their great calendar. He makes a case for a new science, forecast by the Mayans, which will help us undo our disregard for the earth as a living organism.

"We'll give up the belief that we are separate from and superior to nature...You can view the spread of civilization from 3113 B.C. to the present as a wave...," he writes. "August 16-17 marks the point at which this wave peaks. A new energy and a new momentum enter in..."

Arguelles believes that this August signals the beginning of time of social and spriritual transformation. He predicts a brief period of what the native American prophecies call the stage of purification (1987-1992), at which point we'll begin a period when humankind and nature synthesize.

So we have ancient Mexican prophecies and Hopi mystery teachings and the Toltec god-king Quetzalcoatl, Lord of the Dawn, promising the end of the world in August, 1987. He supposedly made this prediction over a thousand years ago. And he said he might come back to be a part of it. That should be in the calendar section of any newspaper!

We have some end-of-the-century prophets who say old prophecies are about to be realized, that the age of materialism is ending; we're being guided toward personal, planetary, even galectic harmony.

Shirley MacLaine is promoting the event in her Connecting the Higher Self workshops. Newsweek has picked it up. Johnny Carson made a bad joke about it.

There will be a new energy in the air and we'll be able to feel it if we choose to. That's quite a prophecy. Perhaps it's worth looking for a place to gather at sunrise on the 17th of August, 1987.

Organizers expect 25,000 people to gather on California's Mt. Shasta. The International Sacred Sites Festival is pointing people toward special gathering places all over the world, including Stonehenge and Machu Picchu. National Public Radio will broadcast a three-hour Harmonic Convergence radio program on August 16 to its over 300 network stations (WBUR, FM 94 in Boston).

Chaya Sarah Sadeh, who founded the Healer's Resource Center to "help bring healing into the mainstream," feels a special excitement about the Harmonic Convergence. "A five thousand year cycle of war and strife is ending," she said.

"An age of wisdom and peace is about to be ushered in. Aug. 16 and 17 is a time when we can all celebrate and participate in this observance of what is essentially a spiritual revolution."

Sadeh suggests that people prepare for the Harmonic Convergence by fasting and meditating on the days leading up to Aug. 16-17. There are Monday evening healing circles at the Healer's Resource Center (Porter Sq., Cambridge, 7:30-9:30) for those who want to join others in a conscious preparation for the event.

William Sarill is another local health practitioner with a foot in both the scientific camp and the new age. He has published papers on general relativity and founded the New Genesis Institute, a Cambrtidge-based scientific research oganization.

In response to the question, "What in the name of King Quetzalcoatl is a harmonic convergence?" Sarill had a lot to say.

The Mayan prophecy, in the first place, fortold the twentieth century shift from one galactic beam of energy to another. In physics the harmonic convergenc e is a phase transition in which matter transforms from one state of organization to another. Sarill feels we are getting prepared for new kinds of organizational behavior—that previously hidden patterns are emerging in which the planetary mind is becoming aware of itself. Our role as human beings is to connect with each other and the earth and to become more aware of our mission to bring about planetary change.

Sarill knew what a grand trine was, by george. Planets aligned in an equilateral triangle; all fire signs— a grand fire trine. A key astrological event.

Why gather on the morning of the 17th, we asked. "To bring down to earth the special flow of cosmic energy; to sense intuitively the deep connection between mystical experience and the reality of modern science."

Quetzalcoatl reputedly taught a religion of love that stressed opening ones heart to the light. The Aztecs took him too literally, performing crude ritual surgeries and holding the victims' hearts up to the sun. Imagine trying to explain to a grouchy Aztec preiest with a sharp stone knife that there'd been an error in scriptural interpretation.

Whether the harmonic convergence is right up your idealogical alley or smacks of kooky—spook, we can greet the Aug. 17 dawn in a spirit of healing love -- a spirit that transends belief systems and may be our best hope for surviving to see a new age.

For further information on what you can do or where you can go call the Healers Resource Center in Cambridge at 864-1989 or write Healing Our World, P.O. Box 6111, Boulder, Colorado 80306.

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

The Key, a watercolor by Lisa MacBride, is on view in Modestino Gallery's Four For The Summer exhibition.

Gallery filled: variety reigns

There's not an inch to spare in Modestino Gallery's space at 426 Broadway, Cambridge.

Donna Calleja's quiet, monumental oil pastels on one wall face Lisa Macbride's fragile, intricately patterned watercolors on another. The Summer, on exhibit at the gallery through Aug. 30. Hung between their work are the bright and opaque watercolors of Saika Radakovich and the small delicately layered pencil watercolor and oil pastel works of Jeanne Gray.

Whispering their presence among the larger works, Gray's pictures are marked by a light touch that has the same momentary quality of her subjects. Blossoms fall and float through the warm pink air of Autumn Dogwood. The moment is fleeting and leaves the impression of having been seen from the corner of one's eye.

In contrast to Gray's diaphanous surfaces are Radakovich's agressive colors and hard-edged shapes. Emphasis is on de[illegible] dustrial, with no references to nature at all. Shapes, often black-outlined, interrupt a hot color field with angular repetition and insistence on their artificiality.

The artifice of Macbride's works is of a different order. Pattern is used toward a decorative effect, comparable, gallery director Frances Grandinetti points out, to medieval illuminations. Although no [illegible] embellished. Portraits and still lifes are bordered with active design formed by a motif repeated — most often with some variation.

The configuration of the border carries over into the painting of the subject it encloses. Still lifes are enveloped in mounds of printed cloth which in some cases spill over into the border. Clothing in the artist's self portraits is distinguished by arabesque appliques and winding floral motifs. The visual counterpoint for all this patterned activity is frequently an area of the paper [illegible] luted pigment wash.

In some cases the patterned curtains pull back or the wallpaper stops and the picture's shallow space is penetrated by a fragment of a street scene from a Balthus painting or a hilly medieval landscape. The borrowed imagery lends support to a metaphysical reading of the paintings that takes them beyond decorative tour de force.

Calleja's simplified, solid still lifes seem very still indeed, especially in the shared gallery space with Macbride's fluid, transparent paint and active surfaces.

A strong light from one side gives Calleja's few fruits, flowers, vessels and seashells a spare but striking drama, reducing value [illegible] same time their shapes align themselves along vertical and horizontal axes and an architectonic ordering of the whole takes place. Egyptian-like in its stability and massiveness.

When the light behind the warm whites and umbers is pale blue, it is like an Early Renaissance painted sky. And the noiseless, frozen-still objects, softened by the dry surface and crusty texture of the oil pastels [illegible] fresco painting. These works have a presence that sets them apart from the surrounding visual activity.

See Four For The Summer noon to 8 p.m. Thursday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and by appointment. Call 868-7206.

The gallery features, simultaneously with the exhibition, the inlaid colored earthenware vase forms of [illegible] amist Ritvalliisa Ojanen.

the staging of Jeannette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy musical numbers, she discusses her idol and mentor Mabel Mercer, a memorable meeting with her, and pays fond tribute in her beautiful interpretation of Rogers and Hart's He Was Too Good To Me. Carol Hall's touching Ain't Love Easy and a second Rogers and Hart tune, notably rendered. Wait Till You See Him, close the opening segment.

The major snag in the first portion of the program appeared to be the balance of the sound system which made Miss Cook's upper register and strong projection sound shrill. Fortunately, the problem was rectified during intermission.

Miss Cook opened the second and stronger segment of her program with Irving Berlin's novelty I Love a Piano, followed by the Dietz and Schwartz standard I See Your Face Before Me, returning to Berlin for Change Partners.

Certainly one of the high points of the evening, anxiously awaited by the audience, were Miss Cook's reprises of her memorable songs from Broadway shows: Till There Was You from The Music Man, Mr Snow from Rogers and Hammerstein's Carousel (she portrayed Carrie in the New York City Center revival), and Ice Cream, He Brought Me Ice Cream from She Loves Me. Two novelty tunes followed, Ingenuine, and a unique comedy number by Bernstein, who was also responsible for the lyrics along with Comden and Green, a jazzy, uptempo tune titled I Can Cook Too.

Two years ago Miss Cook appeared in a concert version of Stephen Sondheim's Follies with the New York Philharmonic (recorded live by RCA and winner of a Grammy Award) and from that work she gave a soul-searching rendition of Losing My Mind. Simply wonderful! (Miss Cook is blessed with the vocal dexterity that Sondheim's work demands and she essays the song with such ease and grace that she should consider an all-Sondheim program!)

As the final selection of the program, Miss Cook (and Mr. Harper) bring down the house with an ingenious arrangement of Carolina In The Morning, with Miss Cook singing the melody and Harper playing the chords of a familiar pop rock song before segueing into harmony with Miss Cook. Audience response was warm and appreciative and Miss Cook returned for encores. A delightful performance by a artist who is certainly definitive of the best of Broadway! (closed.)

Monadnock presents Mozart

Monadnock Music, well-loved for their annual performances of Mozart concert operas, will present The Abduction from the Seraglio in the Peterborough Town House, New Hampshire, on Saturday, August 15 at 8 p.m., with Jeanne Ommerle, Edward Randall, the Monadnock Music Orchestra and the New England Conservatory Chamber Singers, all under the direction of conductor James Bolle.

The performance brings together many of the artists who made this spring's The Magic Flute such a success. Edward Randall, who stepped in at the last second to take Jordan Hall by storm, will make his official Monadnock debut. Jeanne Ommerle, well known for her performances with the Handel & Haydn Society and the Opera Company of Boston, will prove once again why she is such a favorite of New England audiences. And Charles Merrill will again provide his own droll narration of the comic proceedings.

New-comers to Monadnock Music include Philippine soprano Lani Misenas-Padua, who studied at Julliard and worked with the Goldovsky Opera Workshop. She helped inaugurate the Opera Company of the Phillipines, singing the Queen of the Night under the direction of Sarah Caldwell.

Tenor Gregory Mercer has received critical acclaim performing for such companies as the San Francisco Opera and Chicago Lyric. Bass Richard Johnson performs regularly with Milwaukee's Florentine Opera, the Milwaukee Symphony and Opera St. Paul.

Tickets are $18.50 for perferred seating and $13.50 for general admission. For ticket information and a complete concert schedule call 603/924-7610.

All star cast in Anderson revival

Four stars of stage, screen and television will play leading roles in a revival of Robert Anderson's I Never Sang For My Father, the final production of the Berkshire Theatre Festival's season in Stockbridge.

This production of I Never Sang For My Father, which is the first to be sanctioned by the author since the play's Broadway run in 1968, will be directed by BTF artistic director Josephine R. Abady. It previews on Tuesday, Aug. 18, has its official opening night on Wednesday, Aug. 19, and runs through Saturday, Aug. 29.

Daniel J. Travanti, the star of television's Hill Street Blues, and Mary Kay Place, best known for her role in the critically acclaimed film The Big Chill and from TV's Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman, will play opposite veteran actors Dorothy McGuire, familiar from her extensive classic films, such as Three Coins in the Fountain and Gentleman's Agreement, and Harold Gould, most recently seen with Katherine Hepburn in the TV movie Mrs. Delafield Wants to Marry, and also remembered as Valerie Harper's father on TV's Rhoda.

Also in the cast of I Never Sang For My Father are William Cain, Scott Kanoff, Sonja Lanzener, Edward Penn, Jeni Royer and John Wylie.

I Never Sang For My Father is a touching and bittersweet look at the interpersonal conflicts that arise in family life.

Sets for the production are being designed by David Potts, with lighting by Jeff Davis and costumes by Linda Fisher.

Performances of I Never Sang For My Father are Mondays through Fridays at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 5 p.m. and 9 p.m. There are matinees every Thursday at 2 p.m.

Tickets range in price from $10 to $19, depending on performance day and seat location and are now on sale at the BTF Box Office. Major credit cards are accepted and tickets may be charged by phone by calling the Box Office at (413) 298-5576.

Butler opens at ASF

The American Stage Festival in Milford, NH is offering a play to tease, shock, and delight theatregoers as its third production of the season, Joe Orton's outrageous and biting comedy What The Butler Saw, running through Aug. 15.

Tony Award-winning actor Ron Holgate returns to the ASF to portray the zany and trouble-beset Dr. Prentice, a psychiatrist who has his own hospital and an examination couch built for two. Mr. Holgate created the role of the egotistical Italian tenor in Opera Buffa at ASF two seasons ago.

Judith Roberts, who played opposite Holgate in Opera Buffa and portrayed Hamlet in Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead during the ASF's 1985 season, performs the role of Mrs. Prentice, the psychiatrist's wife, who happens to

What To Do

Morning mist kisses the grape to make vintage wine tent. Recently a 1780s Spanish galleon was discovered off the coast of South Carolina. In its bow, several cases of Medeira were discovered. Due to the natural refrigeration, they had been perfectly preserved.

Wine is also produced in central and eastern Europe, Africa, South America and in the United States.

As an expert on wine, Elia is frequently called to France or to California to taste the wines for the growers. He looks for telltale signs."Velvet in your mouth,"says Elia,"is a good sign."

The best wine writers in the world are currently writing for Elia's magazine, the Wine Quarterly. Many of the Masters of Wine from England are regular contributors.

To become a Wine Master takes several years in the wine trade and a series of rigorous exams, explains Elia. Women are now just getting into it. There are about fifteen to twenty women wine masters, and six of them write for his magazine.

Richard Elia, currently a Winchester resident, explains that his love for wine "started as an affectation" and came directly from reading Victorian novels. He grew up in Dorchester, the son of immigrants as he tells it. His father, a wine drinker, shared, just a little, with him at an early age.

He began tasting wines in the early sixties and at first started a newsletter, which eventually evolved into the beautifully laid out magazine he publishes today.

"Abroad wine merchants are thought of as prestigious jobs. Here, in the liquor business, you find a rough neck crowd. Many people in the business made it big during prohibition. Farmers have never been respected in this country. If you behave clumsily, you're called a farmer, a hick. Europeans respect grape farming."

Seven or eight years ago, Patsy Ives, wife of David Ives at Channel 2, organized a wine auction to raise money for the station.

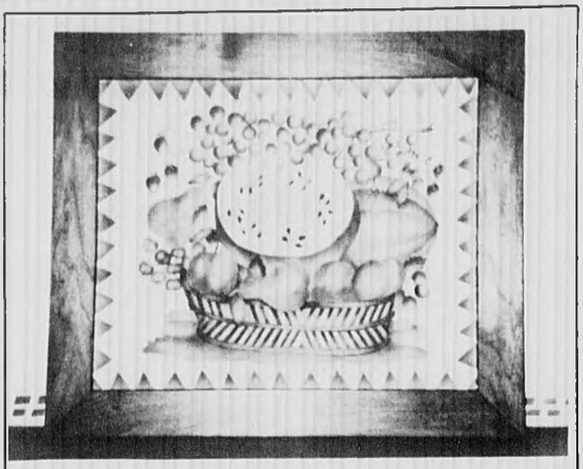
Elia was called upon to run the auction and today he handles three auctions: the rare wines auction in March at the Ritz Carlton Hotel; the fine wine auction which is pretaped in May and the general wine auction, which is broadcast live from Channel 2 in June.

Elia says that wine is the most saleable, auctionable item in the auctioning business today.

Whether Elia is rummaging around in local cellars looking for a rare or great vintage wine or travelling the world, interviewing the Rothchilds or tasting wine in the Nappa Valley, he concerns himself with wine and only the best.

"When all things come together, the sun and the heat, the cool of the evenings, and the mist in the morning kisses the grape, then you have a vintage wine. This only happens one or two years out of 10, says Elia, a college professor who exudes a special love and respect for wine. His unabashed interest in, admiration for and knowledge of the wine culture appear to be Elia's invaluable contribution to refining our civilization.

The Quarterly Review of Wines is published in June, September, December and March. A subscription costs $9.95 a year. Write o QRW, 24 Garfield Ave., Winchester, MA 01890.



Theorem Painting, a popular 19th century art form using stencils to paint on cloth, will be taught on Aug. 8 at the Codman House, Lincoln. Call 227-3956.

have a penchant for seducing young men.

The young man who wins the attraction of Mrs. Prentice, Nicholas Beckett, is played by Scott Bryce, who appeared in Hobson's Choice at the ASF during the 1981 season.

The young woman who shares Dr. Prentice's examining couch, Geraldine Barclay, is played by Julia MacKenzie. Ms. MacKenzie has appeared in Rhymes With Evil, The Unexpected Guest, The Comedy of Errors, Hobson's Choice, Inherit The Wind, and Squabbles at the ASF.

Louis Turenne portrays Dr. Rance, a government inspector who arrives at a most untimely moment in Dr. Prentice's office. Turenne played the masterful games player Andrew Wyke, in the recently concluded Sleuth.

Add to the ensuing mayhem a policeman in his underwear and you have all the ingredients of What the Butler Saw. Robin Chadwick returns to the ASF in the role of Sergeant Match. Past ASF credits include A Tale of Two Cities, The Unexpected Guest, and Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead. Chadwick has worked for many years in theatre, film and television in England.

What the Butler Saw provides, among other things, an unorthodox view of British medical practice. Larry Carpenter, Artistic Director for the ASF, directs this production. Responsible for set design is Mark Wendland, who designed scenery for the ASF's Rhymes With Evil and A Tale of Two Cities.

The ASF is located on Route 13 North in Milford, NH, ten miles west of Nashua. For tickets and information call the box office at (603) 673-7515.

PENNY— JUST wanted to say how you make my day! Everyday you cheer me, love to have you near me!- Giles. 8.6

JOJO! ! We missed you! We are glad that you are back and we're especially glad that you didn't go to California or right now you would be curled up in a ball in some abandoned room with an empty beer can in your hand surrounded by a bunch of derelicts. But instead you get to be in room curled up in a ball with a full beer in your hand surrounded by derelicts who are your friends. P.S. You owe us $7,954 for the collect calls made from Billerica. We love you JoJo. Meg's house 8.6/8.20l

CHRISTOPHER— You are my life, my love, my hopes, my dreams. You make me happy and you are my best friend. Nothing else matters when I am with you. Just thinking of you makes me smile. I love you and I will always love you. Yours forever-N.W.W. 8.6l

ELLEN— SO happy that we're back together. This time we will work out, I guarantee it! I always loved you. - Ed 8.6/8.20o

"THEN YOU Sense a Change, All Your Dreams Are Strange. Love Comes Walking In "— Steve— With all that's happened recently, I just want you to know, I'll never stop loving you. It's just too bad that things don't seem to be working. Love always, Barbie, (pastry face!) 8.6o

Good News for the Weekend Mechanic

Audi 5000S Sedan

If you do your own repair work, do the job right with genuine Audi replacement parts. First of all, they fit, so if you take your Audi apart Saturday morning, you know the parts you bought will get you back on the road without another trip. Second, every part has a 6 month 6,000-mile limited warranty. At Audi, we care as much about your car as you do.

CAR CARE CORNER
By Dan Hogan, Service Manager

The tools for specific jobs: torque wrench for tightening bolts to exact specifications, test light for checking electrical connections, grease gun with adapters for chassis lubrication, jack stand; work light, funnel for adding engine oil; flexible spout funnel for adding transmission fluid; fuse puller for the safe removal of burned-out fuses; rubber mallet for replacing wheel covers and hubcaps and for pounding out body dents, oil-filter wrench for removing slippery oil filters. Don't sacrifice quality to save money; cheap tools wear out faster and may damage car parts. If you purchased all the tools mentioned your total expenditure should be less than $150.

The technicians at PETER FULLER OLDS are ASE certified. We keep a computerized history of all cars serviced here to notify you of preventative maintenance. Open 8-5. Tel. 924-8100. M/C, Visa & A/E accepted. We are located within walking distance to public transportation. Come to PETER FULLER OLDS, Watertown Sq. "Olds National Service Award Winner."

Taking a look at single-family homes around the Boston area

by Karl "Chip" Case
Associate Professor of Economics,
Wellesley College

Economics in the 80's

For the last two years the press has been filled with articles on the explosion of real estate values in the Boston and New York City areas. Nearly all these articles are based on median sales price data generated by the National Association of Realtors and released monthly in a publication called Existing Home Sales.

Those data show, for example, that the median price of existing single family homes sold grew 38 percent in the New York City area during 1985. In the second quarter alone, the median sales price in Boston rose from $108,600 to $131,000; that's an increase of over 20 percent in a single quarter which translates into an annual growth rate of over 100 percent.

The Boston market seems to take off sometime during 1983. In that year, the median home price was less than two thirds of the comparable figures for San Francisco and just 17 percent above the national average. Two years later, the median sales price in Boston is up to $144,800 which is 94 percent above the national average and actually 2 percent higher than the San Francisco figure of $141,000. That represents an increase of 73.3 percent in just two years during a period of very low general inflation. That represents the most rapid increase recorded in any city since the NAR has been keeping records.

BECAUSE I WASN'T SURE that I believed those numbers, I pulled together a sample of more than 1500 multiple sales (houses that had sold more than once) from official records in five very different towns: Lexington, Malden, Stoneham, Wellesley and Quincy. Without going into detail, the data show that the NAR figures are not far off.

First, there has been a very rapid increase in the value of single family homes in the Boston area which has accelerated sharply in the last two years.

Second, the boom is not confined to any one segment of the single family housing market; the rates of increase were remarkably similar in all five towns with Stoneham actually leading the pack.

Finally, it is important to know that what we are experiencing is not part of a national housing market boom; only the New York City metropolitan area seems to be experiencing comparable increases. In the United States as a whole, the median sales price of existing single family home has actually increased 7 percent less than prices in general since 1981. Many cities including Albany, Houston, Cincinnati, Miami, San Jose and others have seen actual declines.

Two questions remain. What lies behind the recent acceleration and how long will it continue?

THE "FUNDAMENTALS" ARE NOT THERE: Analyses of the housing market always begin with the fundamental determinants of housing supply and demand: population growth, employment, income growth, interest rates, taxes and construction costs. Unfortunately, there isn't much of a story in those numbers in the last three years.

The population data show that the boom can hardly be explained by a great influx of people. Indeed, the population of Massachusetts has only increased 1 percent during the decade while the U.S. population grew over 10 percent. Massachusetts grew more slowly than the U.S. in every one of the last 10 years.

The employment numbers are even more surprising. In 1982, 1983 and 1984, when the boom was starting, employment growth in Massachusetts actually lagged behind the nation. In 1985, there is an upturn, but that is well after the housing price acceleration had been firmly established.

Personal income per capita in Massachusetts has grown more rapidly than in the country as a whole for eight of the last 10 years, but the difference is not dramatic.

If new construction became sufficiently more costly, it would also push up prices. Unfortunately here we have another dead end. The Boeckh bulding cost index shows that since 1980, construction costs have risen less rapidly than inflation in the U.S. and that in Massachusetts, construction costs grew nearly 50 pecent less than in the U.S. overall.

MANY PEOPLE WOULD LIKE to blame the current inflation on falling mortgage rates. There is no evidence, however, that lower mortgage rates have contributed significantly to the recent run-up. First, the average mortgage rate in Boston was 14.91 percent in May of 1984 when the housing boom was well under way. That is not far below the 1982 peak and it is actually higher ghan it was in 1980. Even as late as May 1985, the average rate in Boston was over 13 percent; taking inflation into account, that's a higher real rate than we had in 1982. The sharp declines have only been in the last few months.

It has been suggested by some that lower property taxes from Proposition 2½ may have been capitalized into higher property values causing the boom. This argument is silly. First of all, very few pay lower tax bills than they did. In Wellesley, for example, property tax bills have actually changed very little while property values have more than doubled since the vote. Even if property taxes were eliminated, it would explain just a small fraction of the actual run up in prices.

HOUSING AS AN INVESTMENT: It is important to think of housing demanders in two ways. First, they are consumers: that is, they buy housing because they need a place to live. Second, they are investors looking for a good rate of return.

A substantial body of work by economists on financial markets and international exchange rates has focused on the impact of expectations of asset values. The full return to any asset has two parts the income which it directly generates and any appreciation in its value that occurs. A common stock, for example, generates dividends and can increase in value over time generating capital gains for its owner.

It is easy to show mathematically that when capital gains become anticipated, asset values can grow at an accelerating rate; the anticipated gains make the asset worth more, buyers increase their bids, and the ball is rolling. Economists refer to these explosive spirals as "expectational bubbles."

The housing market is, in many ways, even more likely to generate "bubbles" than the stock market or the bond market. Because no two housing units are identical they are difficult to value precisely; buyers and sellers are forced to rely on "expert" judgements. These judgements come from real estate agents who presently watch the market carefully.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS operate on a fixed percentage commission basis which has not changed substantially over many years despite the enormous run-up of housing prices. That means that the incomes of agentss constant turnover rate, a 50 percent increase in realtor incomes.

Agents also want to list houses; when an agent lists a house he gets half the commission even if he doesn't make the sale himself. If agent A tells you your house is worth more than agent B and information is imperfect, it is rational to list with A. Real estate agents know this.

Thus, the primary information filter for the market has a large incentive to generate inflationary expectations. There is an enormous volume of anecdotal evidence that the behavior of real estate agents biases price upward: "What is my house worth?". . . "Well, the house down the street sold for $100,000, why not try $120,000 and see what happens?" If prospective buyers become convinced that next week the price will be $140,000, we are off to the races.

When we think of home buyers as investors, it is easy to see how easy it might be to generate positive expectations. First, real estate has been an enormously profitable investment over the past fifteen years when everything else was wildly cyclical. Anyone who has owned a home over the last ten years has made a small fortune despite some recent setbacks.

Also, the big upward movements have lasted for several years. Thus, even if one knew that the California explosion would come to an end and ultimately burst, getting in early enough would have been perfectly rational the potential gains were enormous.

There is also something to the notion that people do not believe that real estate values can fall. People who own homes in California will tell you that the value of their property has not fallen despite strong evidence to the contrary. Some hid the declines in "take back" financing deals. People also hold their homes off the market for long periods to get "what it is worth."

HOW LONG WILL IT LAST: One final issue remains. If the Boston market is locked into an expectational spiral, how long can it go on? Unfortunately, there is no way to know. As Paul Samuelson puts it:

"I have long been struck by the fact, and puzzled by it too, that in all the arsenal of economic theory, we have absolutely no way of predicting how long such a (bubble) will last. To say that prices will some day fall back to earth after they reach ridiculous heights represents a safe but empty prediction. Why do some manias end when prices nave become ridiculous by 10 percent, while others persist until they are ridiculous to the tune of hundreds of per cent?"

There may be at least some clues, however, in comparing housing cost and income. If we calculate the monthly payment required of the "median" home buyer as a fraction of "median income" in the Boston area, that figure is 47 percent (that assumes the current 10 percent mortgage rate). Believe it or not that number has not changed much since 1981; the very recent sharp drop in interest rates and the steady increase in income has just offset the run-up in prices.

For the nation as a whole, the figure is only 27 percent. At the top of the housing boom in California in 1981 the exact same figure was 71 percent. So, if our bubble goes as far as California's before it bursts, there is room to grow

BUT THE EXTRAORDINARY RATES of increase of the last few years cannot continue for a very long time. If interest rates remain at 10 percent, continued growth in home prices of 25 percent per year would put us at California's 71 per cent ratio in less than two years.

Town to get poll funds

Winchester will receive $975.36 reimbursement from the Commonwealth to offset the increased cost of extended voting hours during the March 8, 1988, presidential primary, State Auditor Joseph DeNucci has announced.

DeNucci said that $374,344.69 will be distributed to 350 of the state's 351 cities and towns.

"A 1983 law setting standardized polling hours statewide from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. means that many of the Commonwealth's citizens will have additional time to vote," DeNucci said. "It also means the cost of polling has increased for cities and towns."

It is the responsibility of the Auditor's Division of Local Mandates (DLM) to ensure that cities and towns are reimbursed for any expenses incurred from legislative mandates. Under the polling law, communities must send documentation of their additional election costs to DLM for review and certification before being forwarded to the Secretary of State's Office.

The Town of Lincoln, the only town that will not receive assistance, will again use volunteer poll workers and, therefore, incur no costs.

The funds range from $54,640.44 for Boston to $38.70 for Monroe.

Seatbelt law affects children

Effective Aug. 9 children under 12 will be legally required to buckle up, according to a new version of the 1982 Massachusetts Passenger Safety Law.

This change, which extends protection of children under 5 to include all elementary-school-age children, makes Massachusetts one of only four states requiring safety restraints specifically for older children. The

Settlement with company nets town $17k

A company that sold water pipes containing a suspected carcinogen to Winchester and 38 other Massachusetts cities and towns will pay $3.95 million in reparations this month, according to the state Attorney General's office.

Johns-Manville Corp. of Denver, Colo., manufactured and sold the vinyl lined asbestos cement pipes between 1969 and 1980. The pipes contained tetrachloroethylene (TCE), a solvent used to attach the vinyl lining. Although it has not been conclusively linked to cancer in humans, TCE is chemically related to known carcinogens.

Winchester installed more than 12,000 feet of the pipe during the late 1970s, according to Director of Public Works Dominic Serratore. Tests in 1980 showed that TCE was leaching into drinking water in certain areas, and the town implemented a program to reduce TCE concentrations. The DPW will use its $17,059 portion of the settlement to offset the cost of the modifications.

Under a previous settlement, the affected municipalities would have received $4.25 million gradually over a period stretching to the year 2003. An investment firm has agreed to purchase the settlement, however, and the communities will receive cash within two weeks, according to Tim McNaught, a spokesperson for the attorney general.

"Local authorities were purchasing pipes only to find that the product posed a potential health hazard," said Attorney General James Shannon in a prepared statement. "Fortunately, there were remedies that could be and were taken, but not without considerable expense. The settlement we have obtained will enable these cities and towns to recover the cost incurred in protecting the public health."

The settlement marks the end of a three-year suit on behalf of the Commonwealth. Shannon's office filed against Johns-Manville in bankruptcy court in February 1984. The trial began in September 1986 and the $4.25 million settlement was reached the next month. It took another year, however, to arrange payment of the damages.

Winchester homes selling more slowly

By SUE SHOR

Winchester's housing market has been touched by the recent slowdown in the real estate industry, but it has not felt the effects as strongly as other Massachusetts towns and cities, according to Winchester realtors and bankers.

William Caci of the Home Team said Winchester has not been seriously affected, although he admits that sales have been slower than average this summer. "Winchester rides through the dips pretty well," he said.

Ann Blackham of Ann Blackham and Company Inc. agrees with Caci about the effects on the town. She said the recent slackness in the market is a reaction to last year's unusual activity. "There was a pent-up desire for housing and when interest rates went down, people took advantage of it," she said.

Interest rates are higher now than they were in the summer of 1986, but

Housing Authority gives out rental subsidy certificates

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

The Winchester Housing Authority (WHA) has in hand 62 applications for the 25 federally funded Section 8 housing vouchers the authority has available, Executive Director Jeremiah Keefe said at a meeting Monday night.

Keefe said the WHA has given out nine vouchers already. One family has found a home and the other eight are looking. Keefe is verifying the financial information of the other applicants before distributing the remaining 16.

The Section 8 program is designed as a rental subsidy for families living in privately owned housing.

The WHA has also distributed eight state-funded Chapter 707 subsidies that serve the same purpose as the Section 8 vouchers. Keefe said the eight are in use and one emergency voucher from Tewksbury is also in use in Winchester.

In addition, the WHA owns two units of state Chapter 705 family housing in Winchester that it rents below market level. The authority is working on five more units, one each on Lockeland Road and Cambridge Street and three on Palmer Street.

"For a town the size of Winchester and with a population of about 20,000, I think that's very representative," Keefe said of the number of housing subsidies in Winchester. The total dollar value of the funding is $207,000 a year, he said.

The five units of Chapter 705 housing are in the planning stages. The WHA expects to have complete plans to Building Inspector Arthur Gallagher by Sept. 8. Keefe said the authority might need variances at the Palmer Street site as a result of a new zoning law that changes the way the height of a building is measured and the setback on the parking lot.

If a variance is needed, which the authority will not know until Gallagher has issued or denied a building permit, the authority will have to take the matter to the Zoning Board of Appeals. This could hold the building up for a month, but authority Chairman John Riga said the construction could still be done before the winter.

Keefe said the Executive Office of Communities and Development has approved the additions the town asked the WHA to make on the buildings. At the Cambridge and Lockeland sites the authority has added wraparound porches, and at the Palmer site the additions planned are terraces or patios, decking on the Wedge Pond side of the site and brick on the sides of the building facing the condominiums and elderly housing abutting the property.

The Conservation Commission examined the sites and decided that the land does not fall under their authority.

House proposes land bank

By PETER MAUST
Special to the Star

A controversial bill designed to help communities buy land for public use resides in the House Ways and Means Committee, where it awaits debate during the fall legislative session.

House bill 5545, described by Sen. Richard Kraus as "a sales tax on real estate," would allow communities throughout the commonwealth to levy a transfer tax of between ½ and 1 percent of a property's price at the time of sale. The tax would be paid by the seller.

Each municipality would control the revenues and use them to "acquire, maintain, hold and manage open land and low and moderate cost housing." Use of the funds would be overseen by the Executive Office of Communities and Development and the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, according to a recent status report by the Winchester Town Meeting Committee on Low and Moderate Income Housing.

Winchester's state legislators differ in their opinions about H.5545. Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh opposes the bill. He argues that "the timing is poor," and that the bill will force real estate prices even higher in an area where they are already among the highest in the country.

Saltmarsh adds that the state should not enact a law that will go against the recent trend of tax cuts. The current strength of the economy, Saltmarsh contends, is partly due to tax reductions. "We shouldn't start imposing taxes when we've just gotten rid of a lot of them," he says.

Kraus, who worked on the bill while it was in the Joint Committee on Taxation, supports the measure. He sees it as an opportunity to encourage land conservation by local communities and support the development of more low and moderate income housing. He points out that similar measures already have proven their worth and have been "extraordinarily successful on the islands of Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket." The islands have put aside land exclusively for conservation purposes.

Kraus adds that as communities develop and available land becomes scarcer it "is terribly important to devote some land to public use." He says the tax will not be especially burdensome since, unlike a real estate tax, it will only apply when a land owner sells a piece of property.

Saltmarsh agrees with the importance of having public land available, but says a real estate sales tax is a poor way to go about it. He argues that "Massachusetts does more than most states in the country" to achieve this goal and there are already many ways in which the state encourages conservation and helps provide low-cost housing.

The two legislators also differ on the prospects of H.5545 being enacted. Kraus says, "I think if the Republicans and the house leadership allow it to get to the floor it will be adopted." Saltmarsh comments, "I don't think its prospects are that good. I hope they aren't."

Woman discovers black tap water

York Road resident does filter test, to her dismay

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Janet Kett says she has been having problems with her water ever since she moved to York Road eight years ago.

The water pressure is low, she says, and the water is not clean. She installed a booster pump to raise the water pressure in her home. She has also been using filters for her washing machine, shower and drinking water. This year she added a stainless steel, in-line filter to strain the water before it gets to the pump.

Kett said that two weeks ago her husband cleaned their filter in the morning. She said she watered the lawn, but that was the only extra use of water she had that day. Later she went out and upon returning found that the pump was making a strange noise.

A check of the filter, the one her husband had cleaned 11 hours earlier, made the problem clear: the filter was clogged.

"We have a neglected, antiquated water system," Kett said. "I realize I am at the end of the line and I am seeing the worst effects, but I pay my taxes. I pay my water bill."

Kett's home is serviced by the Middle Low water system. Water Department Operations Manager Edward Grant said that Middle Low is on the low end of acceptable pressure levels. The pressure problem is compounded by York Road's status as a dead end street.

Kett counters Grant's claim that the water pressure is at acceptable levels by questioning his timing. She said she called the Water Department at 7:30 one evening because her water pressure was extremely low. By the time the department responded at 9:30 p.m., the pressure was back to normal, she said.

"He tells me we have enough water pressure to fight a fire," Kett said. "I guess we'll have to schedule all our fires at night."

The problem is worst in the summer, both Kett and Grant agree, because of a heavy water draw. Matthew Sakakeeny, an 11-year York Road resident, said he also has a filter for his drinking water and washing machine.

Kett said that at the end of one summer, before she installed the in-line filter, there was bacteria from the water growing in strings through the openings in her shower head. She said without any filtering system the water has a swampy smell.

Sakakeeny said his washing machine and shower head get clogged up without the filter because of what he called rust and sediment in the water.

The Water Department's solution has been to flush the system by opening a hydrant on York Road so the sediment is forced out.

Kett equated this solution with "putting a band-aid on a gaping incision. We really need a systematic flushing of that part of town to flush it out." The flushing helps, but the problem returns and gradually gets worse, requiring that the flushing be done regular basis, she said.

Kett said Grant told her she was causing her problem by using a booster pump. The pump pushes the sediment through the pipes and into the sink, shower and washing machine, he said.

But Sakakeeny said that once, while the department was flushing the system, "blobs of mud came out of the hydrant."

Kett, Sakakeeny and Grant all agree that there is a problem on York Street although they disagree about the intensity of the problem. Grant said state testing showed no chloroform or bacteria in the water. Kett said that's because the sample was taken soon after the system was flushed. She has scraped a sample of the sediment from her in-line filter and plans to have it tested.

The only long-range solutions are "looping," or connecting York Road's pipes with those on other streets so the water would not hit a dead end, or connecting the street to one of Winchester's two other systems.

Grant said condominium development in the area may facilitate the changing of York Road from Middle Low to East High, a system with a higher pressure level.

Board of Selectmen member Frances Sopper suggested a systemic use of pressure and vacuum to suck the dirt out of the pipes. Kett said the idea sounds like a good one to her, but no one has done anything to put it in motion.

Until the system is flushed, or the York Road residents are switched to a higher pressure system, the only solution, Grant said, is the flushing that is done now.

POLICE LOG

Sunday, August 9

A Winford Way man called police at 9:44 a.m. because his 1986 Volkswagon Jetta had been broken into during the night, according to police reports.

The two passenger-side windows and the right front driver's-side window and the right rear fly window were smashed, according to reports. A Sony radio and cassette tape player worth approximately $250.00 and a few cassette tapes were missing, police said.

The man told police the theft must have happened after 11:30 p.m. the previous night. The neighbors did not hear anything usual, according to police reports.

At 12:18 p.m. a Jefferson Road man called police because the radio was stolen from his Audi 5000, according to police.

The car was parked in front of the man's house. He said the theft must have happened between 5 p.m. and 10 a.m. the next morning. The radio is worth between $400 and $500, according to police.

Saturday, August 8

At 1:15 p.m. a Winchester Nursing Center employee called police to report that her wallet had been stolen from her handbag, according to police.

The wallet contained an unknown amount of money, credit cards, the woman's license and check book.

The woman described the man as tall and thin with reddish-brown hair, a yellow shirt with a Hawaiian emblem on the front. She said he might have been wearing blue pants, according to reports.

The man sat behind the victim in the dining room at lunch. She said she saw him later walking around in the corridor that leads to her office, police said.

The woman noticed her wallet was missing 20 minutes after seeing the man in the hall. A check of the building and area showed no sign of the suspect, according to police.

Friday, August 7

At 2:50 p.m. police responded to a call of downed electrical wires on Hillside Avenue.

A Somerville man driving a truck backed into the street to make a delivery. He said he had no problems backing in. When he backed out again, the box of the trailer caught on wires from a Boston Edison pole. The truck pulled wires from several area homes and snapped the pole off at its base, according to police.

The driver theorized that after unloading the truck, the trailer box, relieved of its load, became high enough to catch on the wires, police said.

Wednesday, August 5

At 10:10 a.m., police responded to an accident call on Main Street.

Arriving at the scene, police saw a tractor-trailer up against a light pole. The driver, a Somerville man, told police he hit the pole with the truck, according to police reports.

The impact of the accident broke the light off the pole. There was no damage to the truck, according to police.

Steve Rudolph will perform his "Magic and More" show Aug. 19 at the Junior Library to celebrate the end of the Summer Reading Program, "Swords and Sorcerers, Castles and Kings."

Summer reading program ends with celebration

The Winchester Public Library's Summer Reading Program, "Swords and Sorcerers, Castles and Kings," ends Monday, Aug. 17. To celebrate, all those children who completed the quest (read at least 10 books during the summer) are invited to a celebration party on Wednesday, Aug. 19, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Steve Rudolph's "Magic and More" show, refreshments (including punch donated by Burger King of Stoneham), and the distribution of award certificates will highlight the party, according to Children's Librarian Heidi Zeibig.

Rudolph, a former music teacher and professional musician for more than 20 years, combines elements of illusion, mime, music and puppets in a show aimed at delighting both the eye and ear.

This year's Summer Reading Program is the largest ever held at the Winchester Public Library. More than 500 children signed up, pledging to read at least 10 books during the summer. By last Friday almost 200 had completed their reading, adding their names to those in the display case outside the Junior Library.

The program officially ends Aug. 17, when the Junior Library is open from noon to 8 p.m. so children who have completed their books but not yet reported in are urged to do so.

NEWS NOTES

Rain brings relief from worst effects of summer dry spell

By Nancy Rabinowitz
Special to the Star

The heavy rains that fell Sunday night brought some relief from the dry spell afflicting Winchester and the surrounding cities and towns, but "We are going to need substantially more," says Dominic J. Serratore, director of the Department of Public Works.

According to Serratore, the rain added 6 to 7 million gallons of water to the reservoirs. One inch of rain equals approximately 5.2 million gallons of water, he calculates.

Serratore said that fewer people will be using water for their lawns in the period ahead, decreasing the demand for water. He also said that the rainfall also lessened the danger of fires.

But problems still exist. To combat the shortage in its main reservoir, Winchester is taking steps to comply with the water watch still in effect in Winchester and the surrounding cities and towns, including Stoneham and Woburn, that use the north, south and middle reservoirs.

The Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA) has limited the amount of water that may be pumped from Spot Pond in Stoneham, the main water supply, from 6 million gallons a day to 2.5 million gallons a day, according to Ed Grant, water operations manager.

The reservoir system is set up like a chain, with one flowing into the next, starting from Quabbin Reservoir near Amherst in Western Massachusetts.

Town residents pay approximately 85 cents per hundred cubic feet for water.

The pumps, which normally run 24 hours a day, now run only eight hours a day, according to Grant. In the last two months, there has been less than 3 inches of rain, as compared to last year at this time when Winchester had received up to 11 inches of rain.

"Rain would be appreciated," said Grant.

Grant isn't the only one who would appreciate some rain. A Winchester resident who didn't wish to be named commented, "I went to great lengths to plant Kentucky grass, and it all turned brown. Actually, in some ways it has worked to my advantage. I haven't mowed the lawn in three weeks."

Sam Lifschitz who is a longtime resident of Winchester, isn't worried about the water watch. "I don't worry about the water in Winchester. I have traveled across New England and the water is better here than anywhere else. This isn't anything different than what has been going on for 100 years," said Lifschitz.

According to Peter Phippin, a hyrdogeologist for the Water Resources section of the state Environmental Management Department, the average rainfall in the state for the month of July was just 1.34 inches. Last year, the average was 4.71 inches for July. The average surplus for the state for the year to date is .92 inches. In Massachusetts, the normal amount of rainfall for one month is 3.5 to 4 inches. "Water levels are usall lowest in the fall," said Phippin.

The northeast region overall is 5 inches in surplus this year, according to Phippin. However, with the Quabbin, "It takes months and months of normal or above rainfall to fill a reservoir that large. The time of the year that the rain falls is another important factor. When you get a lot of rain in the summer a lot of it is absorbed by the trees and grass, and does not make it to the reservoirs."

TOWN HALL OPENINGS

Three vacanies currently exist on the Permanent Building Committee, one each for an architect, building contractor, and citizen at large. Two of the terms are for three years, expiring in 1990, and one is for two years, expiring in 1989.

The Permanent Building Committee serves as the town's Designer Selection Board and supervises design and construction of building projects specifically assigned by vote of Town Meeting.

Interested applicants should submit a letter to John J. Sullivan, Town Moderator, Town Hall, Winchester, MA 01890.

Farm school founder publishes book in verse

By MARY JEAN WEYLMAN
Special to the Star

This is the first in a series of articles on Elsa Wittet by Mary Jean Weylman, a Winchester resident and friend of the Wittets.

The Senior Citizen Fiesta Fall Fair will feature one of its own members as a fledging author and poet in residence on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 7 and 8.

Elsa Wittet of Forest Street, wife of Howard Wittet, will display and autograph copies of her just published book, "Hoof Beats From Forest Crest Farm." This collection of narrative verses tells the true adventures of a few of the most famous ponies and horses that were a part of the farm and nursery school run by Mrs. Wittet for 24 years.

Wittet has a long history of working hard to make her dreams a reality. In her youth, she only gazed wistfully from the sidelines while others rode the horses she so admired. It was only after college and earning her first pay check that she could afford the lessons she yearned to have.

Owning a piece of property large enough to have a horse was also but a pipe dream. She was 35 and married when that opportunity presented itself. Even then, the old farm on Forest Street needed far too much work; owning animals was out of the pocketbook range. The saga that unfolded included much hard work before any horses came to Forest Crest Farm.

Her summer camp, Nursery School and farm are chronicles in Winchester history, bits and pieces shared by many local residents not just of Winchester, but a number of nearby towns as well.

Wittet has taken life's strange twists and turned them into something special. Her book, written for the age group she loved and served for so long, captures the spirit of the animals she loves best: horses and ponies.

Many who went to Farm School will recognize familiar names: Chitquita, Mickey Mouse, Smoky, Buster, Benny, Winky, and the beautiful Arabian horse, Wittet's special favorite. They are there in verse, and captured with the ink drawings of Scott Landry, a new graduate of Winchester High School and in the pictures of William Ryerson, the Boston photographer.

The stories, pages right out of Winchester history, are for all ages, those who can remember the past, those who knew Farm School, and those who enjoy animals.

Wittet, a member of the MSPCA since her childhood, exhibits in her work, her devotion and affection for the world of animals.

Elsa Wittet follows a few of her summer campers on a walk through a field in a photo taken in the early 1950s.

ABOUT TOWN

Town luminaries to address renovation kickoff

A ceremony will be held Monday, Aug. 17 at 10 a.m. to observe the commencement of the interior renovations of the Town Hall.

Speakers will include: Judith Muggia, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, W. Chadwick Maurer, town manager, Susan Keats, chairman of the Town Hall Building Committee and William Rowe, architect at Rowe Associates, the designer of the renovations.

The Town Hall Building Committee recently authorized the signing of a contract with Manseo Construction Company of Woburn for $3.744 million for the interior renovations of the Town Hall.

The interior improvements started Aug. 10 and are expected to be completed in 18 months.

The committee recently returned to Town Meeting requesting an additional $1.23 million to complete the project. Town Meeting appropriated the additional money, bringing the total project cost to $5.95 million.

Recreation to hold benefit car wash for playground

The Winchester Recreation Department will sponsor a car wash Saturday, Aug. 15, from 9 a.m. to noon behind McCall Junior High School.

There is a $2 minimum donation. All proceeds will go to the Ginn Field playground fund. The department will be giving away free balloons.

AN OFFER SELLER CAN'T REFUSE

Most people assume that the highest bidder will always get the nod from a home seller, but in many situations this is not the case. The highest bidder does not always win. A smart seller will often accept a lower offer from someone who is certain to qualify for a mortgage rather than worry about a financially shaky buyer who might not even qualify for a loan to consummate the sale.

If the market is one where homes don't stay available for even a short time at the asking price, the buyer might want to make the offer one that will be hard to refuse. For example, sellers are very impressed if you can strike the finance contingency clause from the contract. (This is the clause that releases the buyer from the contract without losing the deposit if he cannot qualify for a mortgage.) However, do not even CONSIDER scratching the mortgage contingency clause unless you have the cash on hand to complete the transaction.

Marjorie Moore is one 'housewife' who never seems to be at home

Editor's note: This is part of a series of in-depth portraits of prominent or accomplished town citizens that will run from time to time in the paper.

By WADE ROUSH
Special to the Star

Who really runs Winchester? Asked point blank, Selectman Mark Lombardi has said it is the selectmen. The chairman of that body, Judie Muggia, has countered that it is the town manager. In more contemplative moments, however, both have said that it is really the volunteers who make the town work.

By volunteers, they said they meant the skilled, energetic, caring townspeople who give their time to staff the boards, the committees, the parents' groups, and the activist organizations that maintain the machinery of governance and the community spirit. They meant people like Marjorie Moore.

A Winchesterite of 24 years and a participant in more community activities than even she can remember, Moore is anything but the typical housewife that she labels herself. She relates a college story from her daughter, who once tried to explain to friends that her mother was a housewife. "'How can she stand being in the house all day?' they asked her. 'Oh,' she said, 'she's never at home.'

Born in New York City to a mother from Woods Hole and a father from Texas, Moore came to the Boston area to go to college and has stayed here ever since. She studied romance linguistics at Radcliffe, met her husband Stephen at Harvard, and lived in Arlington and Medford before settling in Winchester.

The Moores have three "more or less" grown children and one grandchild, Emma, whom Marjorie babysits several days a week. All three children went from Winchester High School to Harvard College.

Moore joined the League of Women Voters shortly after arriving here because, she says, "that was the way to find out what was going on in town." She went on to become active in other organizations, including a town Bicycle Study Committee, Town Meeting, Cub Scouts, Girl Scouts, the Women's Association and the choir at the First Congregational Church, Church Women United, Winchester Trails, the City Mission Society, and the Winchester Public Schools libraries, to name a few.

Moore explains that her governmental debut, election to Town Meeting more than a decade ago, was serendipitous. "My husband was a Town Meeting member before I was. I would sit at home and listen on the radio to the meeting; I considered that it was the best show on the radio. However, I always told him how I thought he ought to vote and I was mad at him when he voted the other way."

"One day I had a phone call from my husband at work, and he said, 'On the train today someone told me they saw it in the Winchester paper that this is the last day to take out papers to run for town meeting, and in our precinct there are not enough people running to fill the vacancies. So please go down and take out papers and get your own vote.' "

Ever since, Moore and her husband have been running against each other for their Precinct 4 slots, but both have remained members.

"Finally it got to the point where I was getting more votes than he was," Moore says. "Last year when we redistricted, I was in the top eight, which meant I got a three-year term, and he got a two-year term, so from now on we won't be running against each other."

For years, Moore says, her prime concern as a member of Town Meeting was the protection of the school budget. Until the advent of Proposition 2½, she says, "it was a stiff fight."

Now Moore, one of Town Meeting's more vocal members, says "I don't have any special hobby horses I ride. Once in a while something comes up I know about...I usually try not to speak up unless I think I have something to contribute."

"There are certain people who seem to think that Town Meeting needs to know how they stand on every issue. I don't see that at all," she says.

One of Moore's areas of knowledge and concern is the environment around town. Winchester Trails, in which she is active, leads area youths on guided tours through Middlesex Fells and other wild areas. She led Girl Scout troops on similar outings for seven years. Consequently, she has developed an acute awareness of Winchester's relationship to the wilderness.

"It seems, coming in from outside, as though Winchester is rural because of these pastoral greens surrounding it. But hardly any of them belong to Winchester, and because of that Winchester has no control over them. And Winchester does not own a great deal of open land itself," she says.

"A lot of us value the open land" more than unchecked development, she says. The Conservation Commission has worked hard but unsuccessfully to preserve such areas in the town, she observes. "Open land is in large part the difference," Moore asserts, between Winchester and communities like Somerville.

Moore says she is "really interested" in the fact that Winchester will have to work politically with Somerville and Medford thanks to the recent redistricting of state senatorial districts. "My son and daughter-in-law live in Somerville...I'll have to get a hold of them and find out what the scoop is!"

"We have been very happy with Senator Kraus. He has represented in many ways attitudes that Winchester supports," says Moore. "I don't know what it's going to be like working with a person from Somerville."

On the renovations to Town Hall that will cost the town some $1 million more than expected, an issue she spoke up about at a recent special Town Meeting, Moore says, "I don't see that there is any choice" but to go ahead with the project. "It's unfortunate that Winchester got into this situation, but we had a tower that was falling down. If it had been possible to get the whole contract worked out at the beginning, for exterior and interior work, we might have avoided this, but because we had to work fast to get the tower repaired before winter came on, we went ahead with only half the project."

"Long-term plannning might have foreseen and forestalled what happened, if we had been thinking ahead in years past," Moore says.

Thinking ahead is another of Moore's current interests. "The League of Women Voters happens to be studying long-term planning, and investigating just how much long-term planning is going on in Winchester. So far as we can see, there is not a great deal."

At the special Town Meeting, Moore related a cautionary tale about the demise of the Winchester High School swimming pool. "At the time that we were building the present high school, there were people who were unhappy about going ahead with that, and there was a referendum that delayed it. The result of delaying it was that building costs had gone up so much that we had to go back to Town Meeting for more money...then it turned out that even that money was not enough. The result was that we went ahead and built the high school without a swimming pool."

"I can't help feeling," she says, that because of a lack of long-term thinking, "the same thing could happen with the Town Hall."

The change that Moore has watched during her years in Winchester has been subtle, she says, and not necessarily linked to increasing development or revitalization. "After we had been in town for a little while, I was shocked to discover that Jewish people were not welcome here. I was rather sorry to think that we had bought a house in a place where my friends wouldn't be welcome to live. But there was a Fair Housing Committee that was working at the time to open up housing in Winchester, and I am pleased to say that that has long since ceased to be an issue."

Moore's church, the First Congregational, currently lends space to Winchester's first synagogue, she adds.

Although Moore says she is "only a housewife who has been a League member for a long time and been going to meetings and listening to people talk," she has well-defined views on issues farther from Winchester.

"One issue I feel strongly about is Nicaragua. I feel very unhappy that the government of the United States is making me a murderer," Moore says. "I am paying for the murders of people like Benjamin Linder, who was down helping the people in Nicaragua to build a dam so they could have electricity. Because he was helping the people, the Contras singled him out and murdered him. They shot him in the head after they had crippled him so they could get close enough."

A League member from Winchester, Barbara Lee, is now working in the same village where Linder was shot, Moore says. "At any time we may find out that the Contras have murdered a girl from Winchester. Maybe people will pay more attention to that."

"Nicaragua is not just an undeveloped Third World country. It is a place that has its own culture, and a place as valuable and important as the United States, though not so large. To see what has happened to it, and to realize that our country is responsible for murderers, upsets me a great deal."

Moore is also opinionated on nuclear power. "Until the world has figured out a way to dispose of the waste that comes from nuclear power, I think we have no business creating it. We are mortgaging our children's futures if we do. This kind of problem is something no one thought about when they were building the plants."

Moore's environmental concerns led to her efforts to organize and run the Household Hazardous Waste Collection days in Winchester. "We were very pleased to find how responsibly people regard this. There's always the fear that people are just taking these things and dumping them. Last spring, it turned out that in one of the four hours we had allotted, the entire space was filled up." There will be another waste collection effort this fall, she said.

Moore says that she keeps running for Town Meeting because "we really need reponsible people that want to see the best things that the town needs voted for," and her statement could as well apply to her spirit of volunteerism and community involvement. "Sometimes I worry that people run for Town Meeting in order to vote down everything that costs money," she says. "There need to be people who are willing to give time to consider seriously the different problems that come up, with responsibility."

William Bishop

Bishop receives bank promotion

Robert B. Nickerson, president of Winchester Savings Bank, announced that William F. Bishop has been promoted to consumer loan officer.

Bishop is responsible for the organization, management and coordination of all the bank's consumer loan activities. Prior to the promotion he was the bank's collection manager.

Bishop began his banking career as a teller at the Atlantic Savings Bank and advanced into collections as a consumer loan collector and collections supervisor.

He resides in Malden.

Tripoli becomes member of Volvo Gold Sales League

Chris Tripoli of Winchester has earned membership in the Volvo Gold Sales League by selling 250 new Volvos.

Tripoli works at Lee Imported Cars in Wellesley. He has been with the dealership since 1984.

Mahoney named Haig advisor

Charles A. Mahoney of Winchester was named a national adviser in Republican Alexander Haig's presidential campaign organization, "Haig For President."

Haig announced his candidacy March 24. His campaign met the requirements for federal matching funds.

Kurnick wins weavers' contest

Faye Kurnick of Winchester, was awarded second place for her handwoven blanket in a competition sponsored by the New England Weavers' Seminar. Her four by six foot plaid wool blanket was woven in a twill technique.

Kurnick is a member of the Weavers' Guild of Boston, one of 15 New England weaving guilds which hosted the 17th biennial conference at Amherst July 20 through 23. More than 230 weavers and spinners from New England, New Jersey, New York and other areas of the nation as well as Canada and New Zealand participated in four days of lectures, special interest groups, weaving demonstrations, swap sessions and a fashion show.

Eighty-two weavers submitted 120 pieces to be judged in the competition. Following the award's banquet on the evening of July 21, the juried exhibit, which was the highlight of the seminar, was open for viewing by members of the guilds and the general public.

James Orlin

Orlin becomes professor at MIT

James B. Orlin of Taft Drive has been named a professor of management at MIT.

Orlin received his bachelor's degree in 1974 from the University of Pennsylvania, his master's from the California Institute of Technology and a master's of mathematics from the University of Waterloo in 1976. He completed his Ph.D at Stanford University in 1981.

He joined the MIT faculty in 1979 and was promoted to associate professor in 1983. During 1984-85 he was a visiting professor and Fulbright Fellow at Erasmus University in Rotterdam and at the Stichting Mathematical Center in Amsterdam.

He was selected by the National Science Foundation for a Presidential Young Investigator Award, 1985-90.

Orlin has been a Winchester resident since 1981. His wife, Donna, daughter, Jennifer, 3, and son, Benjamin, newborn, keep him company when he is not rolling back mathematical frontiers.

Air Force Capt. James H. Ferrera is back from overseas. He completed six years as a meterologist Aug. 4 and flew over with his wife, Diane, from Torrejon Air Force Base in Spain. Ferrera will work in the family business in Canton and reside in Norfolk.

SCHOOL NEWS

Four make dean's list at Bowdoin

Ralph B. D'Agostino Jr., '88, of 5 Everett Ave., David W. Donahue Jr., '87, of 4 Alesworth Ave., Katherine M. Shao, '89, of 6 Alben St. and Jennifer L. Tobiason, '90, of 6 Hillside Ave. have been named to the dean's list at Bowdoin College on the basis of their scholastic achievements during the spring semester of the 1986-87 academic year.

Bowdoin students are given one of four grades: high honors, honors, pass, or fail. Those named to the dean's list received grades of honors or high honors in all regularly graded courses and satisfactory or credit in all other courses.

Sevigny named to dean's list

John Sevigny of Sargent Road has been named to the dean's list for the fall-1987 semester at Curry College in Milton. The list is based on spring-1987 averages.

Three graduate from Middlebury

Three Winchester residents graduated from Middlebury College in Middlebury, Vt., May 24.

Sarah B. Hebb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Hebb Jr. of Jefferson Road, received a bachelor of arts degree in psychology.

Timothy J. Howard, son of Mr. John H. Howard of Gardner Place and the late Mrs. John H. Howard., graduated cum laude with a bachelor of arts degree in biology.

Patricia M. Ricciardelli, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Louis Ricciardelli of Foxcroft Road, received a bachelor of arts degree in Spanish.

Bob Lobell of Channel 4, left, talks with Jason Boone about "Stress Management — a Lifelong Process" at the final taping session of the video program.

Bob Lobell hosts educational video program

Bob Lobell of WBZ-TV Channel 4 recently hosted a six-part educational video program entitled "Challenges and Choices."

The project, which brings together work from Winchester, Arlington, Bedford, Burlington, Lexington and Woburn high schools, was funded by Bank Five.

An advisory board formed by Bank Five Vice President of Marketing Robert Collins and consisting of representatives of the six communities coordinated the project.

Each school was responsible for scripting and producing one part of the video program. The students got help from teachers and experts in their communities.

The video series will be ready for distribution to schools and libraries in the fall.

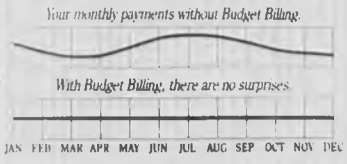
Budget Billing can make this month's electric bill...

When your electricity usage changes every month, so does the size of your electric bill. That's why Boston Edison offers a "no surprises" Budget Billing plan to its residential customers.

When you sign up for Budget Billing, you're charged the same amount for your electricity every month, no matter how much you use. The amount is based on your average electricity usage over the previous 12 months, and is adjusted upward or downward periodically, depending on your actual usage.



...The same as this month's electric bill.

Budget Billing won't save you money, but it will let you spread the payments for your higher summer or winter electricity usage over the entire year. So there's never a surprise on your bill, no matter what the season.

Budget Billing is available to non-electric heat customers. We also offer a budget plan for our electric heat customers.

To sign up for Budget Billing, call Boston Edison at 1-800-322-4060.

After all, life is full of surprises. Your electric bill shouldn't be one of them.

Marrone Landscaping takes commanding lead in series

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Marrone Landscaping built an early lead then held off the surging Bulldogs with some sterling defense late in the game to seal a 6-3 triumph in Winchester Men's Softball B League playoff action at Ginn Field.

The Bulldogs waited a little too long to make their move against a team which is extremely dificult to play catch-up with once they have staked themselves to a lead.

Marrone put across runs in each of the first three innings and they appeared to be on the brink of a rout. Bobby Nutile knocked in Mike Turner for the first run in the first inning. In the second, Mike Sarracco hit a sacrifice fly which brought in Tommy Voltero and when shortstop Ken Bercel mishandled J R Morton's grounder, Turner scored his second run and Marrone led, 3-0.

Marrone continued to build their lead in the third inning. Mike Bellino's sacrifice fly scored Artie Staffiere then Voltero smacked a single to drive in Joe Lang. Sammy Bellino rounded out the inning with yet another sacrifice fly that brought in Al Nasson with the sixth run.

Down 6-0, the Bulldogs started to peck away at the lead in the bottom of the third inning. Keith Ford's fielder's choice grounder scored Bercel with the Bulldogs first run and one out later, Mike Moran singled in Walter Ferreira to decrease the Marrone lead to 6-2.

The Bulldogs creeped even closer in the fourth inning. With two outs, Ricky Roczinski lashed a single which produced Doug Stanton and the Bulldogs were now trailing by only three runs, 6-3, with three innings still left to play.

But the Marrone defense would take over at this point as every Bulldog bid for a base hit was denied by the solid glove work of the Marrone outfield. In the sixth inning, Turner and Staffiere made back-to-back great catches on Bulldog line drives and effectively took away any momentum they might of had at this point. Fortunately for the Bulldogs, they will get more chances to come back in this best of five semi final series.

Royal Cleaning trips Pisces in pivotal third

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Royal Cleaning blew open a tight game with a seven run sixth inning as they shut down Pisces Pantry, 8-2, in Winchester Men's Softball B League playoff action Monday night at Ginn Field.

The victory gave Royal Cleaning a 2-1 lead in the semifinal best-of-five series and it put Pisces Pantry's backs to the wall as they now have to sweep the final two games to advance to the championship series.

Royal Cleaning took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when with two outs, Kevin McCleod roped a single that brought in Bob Campbell. They had a chance to expand their lead in the third inning but Pisces Pantry right fielder Paul Tonello made a leaping grab of a Bob Callahan line drive which seemed destined to be a ground-rule double. This would be the last real scoring opportunity for either side until the sixth inning.

As the game wore on through the middle innings, it seemed that one of these teams was going to break out of the scoring deadlock since both were getting in good whacks at the ball.

In the sixth, the roof caved in on Pisces Pantry as the Royal Cleaning hits began to drop and the defense became unraveled. Callahan got his revenge and this time Tonello could not reach his line drive and the ground rule double knocked in Steve Queen with the second run. Then with two outs, Steve Kenney ignited a rally with a single which drove in Paul Fay. Henry Connor followed with another single which delivered Callahan with another insurance run.

After Royal Cleaning helped themselves to a 4-0 lead, Pisces Pantry helped them build an 8-0 lead as a pair of errors opened up the floodgates. First, an error at shortstop allowed Campbell to score, then, with the bases loaded, McCleod singled to drive in Kenney and Connor and the final run came across when the ball got away from the left fielder.

Pisces Pantry went quietly in the seventh until with two outs, Kenny Green singled. Bob Luz came up next and smashed a two-run home run to left-center field to avert the shutout. Sam Higgins kept the rally alive with a triple before Royal Cleaning finally shut the door.

Bellino's Pizza slices Winchester Wine & Spirits in series opener

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Bellino's Pizza took no prisoners Monday night as they clubbed Winchester Wine & Spirits, 14-3, in the first game of their best-of-five series in Winchester Men's Softball A League playoff action.

Robert Bermanti was the offensive star of the game for Bellino's as he smashed two home runs in the first three innings and collected six runs batted in for the game. Wine & Spirits was never in this one after falling behind 4-0 in the first inning, then 10-1 in the third.

Bellino's came out swinging in the first inning as the first five batters had solid hits. After Richie Joyce singled and Jay Bermanti doubled, Peter Bermanti singled in Joyce but Jay Bermanti was cut down at the plate. Robert Bermanti then blasted his first home run to left-center field to increase the lead to 3-0. One out later, Richie Feeney doubled to drive in Lenny Manupelli and Bellino's had its 4-0 lead.

Wine & Spirits got one run back in the second as Doug Lawson hit a sacrifice fly scoring Bill Tocci, but Bellino's Pizza wasted no time putting this one away in the top of the third inning.

The third inning assault was again spearheaded by the Bermanti brothers as Jay and Peter got on base and Robert drove them home with a towering home run into the trees and over the fence in left. Feeney again knocked in Manupelli with a double and John Reardon kept the rally going with a single that delivered Paul Stevenson. The scoring finally ended after Jimmy Grenier hit a sacrifice fly but not before Bellino's had amassed a 10-1 lead.

Wine & Spirits put across a pair of runs in the fourth as Mark Lawson scored following an overthrow at third base and Tommy Datillo came home on Mike Walsh's sacrifice fly. However, they were unable to sustain any kind of momentum throughout the game and when the Bermanti brothers knocked in three of four runs in the sixth, the contest was hopelessly out of reach for Wine & Spirits.

New tennis shop opens

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

A grand opening was held this past Sunday for Mixed Doubles, a tennis and activewear shop located at 887 Main St. here in Winchester.

Mixed Doubles is the first shop of its kind to be opened in Winchester. It features one-day racquet stringing, free instructional videos, which can be viewed in the store, plus a full line of the latest tennis and sportswear for both men and women, including hard-to-find sizes.

Owner Marie Koutoudakis of Woburn held the open house, which included prize drawings for a Wimbledon tennis racquet, a jogging suit, a tennis watch, and a free Staco visor with any purchase. The grand opening lasted four hours.

Tufts Athletic Director Rocky Carzo of Winchester coached a U.S. Football College All-Star team to a sweep of two games against the Italian All-Stars during a tour of that country from July 16 to 26.

Carzo's team prevailed 18-6 in a game played in Savona and 14-3 in a nationally televised game played in San Benadetto.

Lombardi R.E. pushes Bellino's Pizza to the limit before playoff elimination

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Bellino's Pizza used a five-run fifth inning to break open a close game as they went on to win the third and deciding game in their series with Lombardi R.E. Development in Winchester Men's Softball A League playoff action.

Two big errors on the part of the normally strong Lombardi defense team opened the doors for half of Bellino's scoring output. The Bellino's defense was a little crisper and their ability to hit in the clutch was the difference in the 8-2 victory.

Bellino's grabbed the lead in the third inning with a two-out rally which produced three runs. Richie Joyce singled in Timmy Claugherty with the first run and he moved up to second base on the throw home. Jay Bermanti came up next and hit a ground ball which should have been the final out of the inning. But the ball was overthrown, allowing Joyce and Colin McEchorn to score and Bellino's led, 3-0.

Lombardi came back in the fourth inning with a pair of runs to cut the deficit to one. With one out, Gary Errico doubled to left and advanced to third on Mike White's single. Paul Mathson then put Lombardi on the scoreboard with a base hit which scored Errico. White scored when shortstop Peter Bermanti had trouble with Ron Amadeo's grounder and Lombardi was back in the game.

However, Bellino's took command in the fifth inning. With the bases loaded, Peter Bermanti made up for his error by beating out an infield single which scored Claugherty. Robert Bermanti followed with the key blow of the ballgame. He hit a hard single to center which managed to elude the Lombardi outfield for a two-base error, allowing three runs to score. Paul Stevenson delivered Robert Bermanti with a sacrifice fly and Bellino's went on to coast the rest of the way.

Bellino's Pizza now will advance into the semifinals which will consist of a best of five game series.

COMMENT

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Every benefit has its liability

Many years ago the Chinese created the concept of Yin and Yang.

Yin, derived from roots meaning moon, shade and femininity, represented the passive principle. Yang, a word that came from the roots for sun, light and masculinity, represented the active principle.

The Chinese depicted the interrelationship of these two elements as a circle with two identical, opposite-colored, paisleys swimming around each other, each with a dot of the other's color in the place where the eye should go.

The dots are critical to the concept. They depict the idea that in weakness lies strength and in strength, weakness.

Anyone who plays chess is familiar with this idea. At the beginning of the game the board is evenly balanced: the two opposing armies are of perfectly equal power.

If one player attacks with his queen deep into the other's territory, he leaves a gap in his defense that the other can take advantage of.

The attack creates a weakness. The defensive posture hoards strength. A bit of weakness lies in strength, a bit of strength, in weakness. Yin and Yang.

The West hasn't had much time for Yin and Yang. Meditation is left to the marginals, and arcane logical thinking to the ivory-tower scholars.

But there is an aspect of this ancient oriental idea that applies very much to our modern Western lifestyle, and it has to do with machines and mechanization.

A machine is seen as a labor-saving device, something that adds to the comfort and well-being of its user. But for every plus, there is a minus.

Take the simple example of plumbing. It is much easier to turn on a tap than walk to the well to draw water by hand. What is lost, however, is the exercise that keeps the body strong and the social interaction down at the community source.

These two themes, the loss of physical and social activity, recur throughout modern mechanized society.

No one is advocating that we go back to using public wells, but there are other, more ominous human-machine relationships.

A lot has been said about cars in this column, and here is yet more: While it is true that cars enable people to travel further than they otherwise would, by driving they lose the healthy exercise of walking and the comfort of sharing in the smaller, more familiar community that lies within a day's journey on foot. Cars soften and alienate.

Many communities used to participate in the collective activity of farming. Strong, healthy people worked and lived together. Now machine operators harvest thousands of acres of land alone while urbanites jog to stay fit.

And machines are responsible for a loss of mental activity as well.

A certain young man recently graduated from high school with honors in English. He misspells words that fourth-graders should be able to rattle off in their sleep. When asked how he could even get out of high school, much less with honors in English, he replied, "I've got a spelling program in my computer."

If the electricity ever goes, his whole education is out the window.

Many children who never master the multiplication tables are learning to punch a calculator. Maybe they can get along in today's society, but who is going to push back the mathematical frontiers? Not they.

And there are people who seriously believe that with a word processor, they can become great authors. The machine is no smarter than the person, and a computer will never generate Shakespeare.

In the area of music, disco and its descendants are now generated and played by computer programs. The steady beat of the synthesized drums and bass shows no sign of hesitation, doubt or warmth. For a human being to play a string of 16th notes evenly and with perfect timing is an extraordinary feat. A machine cannot do otherwise, but its sound leaves the listener cold.

Telephones enable people to do more business, but telephones also provide the access by which the world can harass the subscriber.

There have been a number of recent "improvements" in telephone service. Call waiting allows the user to take another call while maintaining a first conversation. This convenience allows the continual interruption of conversations. "Can you hang on a minute? There's someone on the other line," has become the cry of the hour.

People used to be able to take the phone off the hook if they wanted some privacy. Now there is no excuse. The network is inescapable. Once a caller has managed to leave a message on the machine, not to return the call would be insulting. They know the message was received.

The benefits that modern machinery confers are not unalloyed. There is that little dot of Yin in our Yang, and we had better not forget it.

Teachers should be appreciated

By TERRY MAROTTA

A long time ago, I took a job teaching to put my husband through graduate school. Two years, I figured, and it would be on to grad school for me, too.

But somewhere in there, the sense of duty deepened into devotion; and I knew suddenly that the work I was doing in that old third-floor classroom was more important than any work I had done in my life to that point.

For seven years, I taught high school all day and corrected all night. Because it was never enough to just put a grade at the top of a paper with a token comment next to it; for I was a teacher of English, which meant a teacher of the art of written expression, and by extension the art of critical thought. It took hours to plow through a set of students' compositions, arguing always for the unadorned, the precise and the cogent in their writing.

When I became pregnant in my late 20's, I knew I couldn't keep it up. So ten years ago this summer, I quit the job I loved most in the world. I walked away for good from the chalky potent magic of the classroom.

I write this column now, and my life is a pleasant one. I get invited to give talks to civic organizations and cultural societies, and sometimes when I look in the eyes of the people I'm talking to, and they look in mine, it's almost as powerful and rewarding as what I knew in the classroom but not quite. Because if you came to teaching at an early enough stage of your development, and if you learned as your charges learned, growing in understanding even as they grew, then very likely you are still a teacher inside and always will be, even if like me you haven't stood before a blackboard in more than a decade.

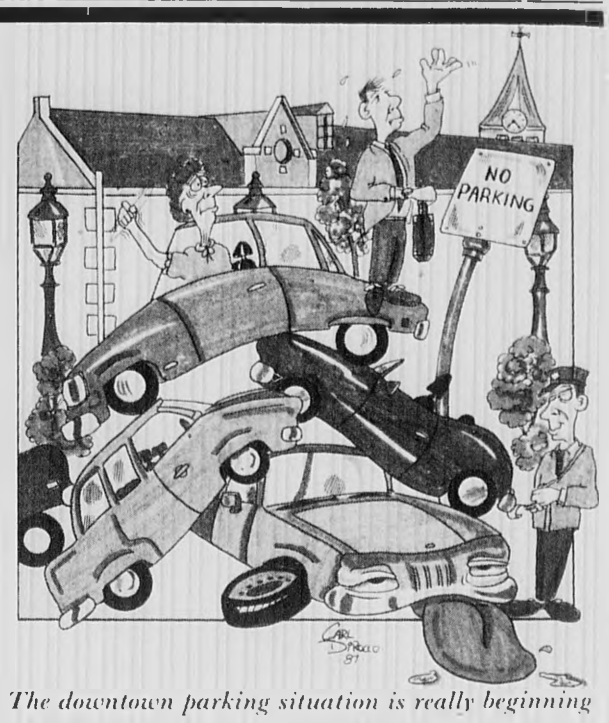
Hundreds of thousands of Americans have started their working life in the classroom. Scratch a lawyer and you'll often find an ex History teacher; scratch an engineer and she'll be, underneath, a teacher of Math. I have a friend due to graduate from Dartmouth soon who has been granted a one-semester tuition remission as a Physics major in a program whereby she will teach half-time for that semester in one of the local schools. She means to do this in the fall. But will she teach again, I wonder? Or will she, like so many of us, file away her rank book and her lesson plans, along with some fine warming memories of all she accomplished or was on the verge of accomplishing with the 100 or so students that passed under her influence?

The articles and news stories proliferate: there is a crisis in American education. Last winter in a special White Paper, Tom Brokaw reported on a study showing that college students ranked teaching 22nd out of 26 possible career opportunities. The profession is not valued by our society and the result is clear. The Japanese turn out kids who embrace their work and believe in its worth and can recite dozens of lines of poetry from memory in a foreign language. Our kids can't recite the Preamble to the Constitution.

Some solutions are obvious: give merit raises to the good teachers; fire the bad ones; and honor those veterans who stay in the front lines, working away, year after year, on the flawed raw material of human nature. Solutions beyond these? Press into service some of those ex-teachers like me, lingering still in a gentle state of mourning for the classroom, and invite them to teach a class; or take a sabbatical from their present employment perhaps, funded in part by those employers, and teach full-time for one year. Call it a public service. Call it a privilege. Call it a gift to the future from any one of us in any walk of life who ever yearned to inch back the darkness of ignorance.

Sometimes in the old days, presenting the kids with material that wasn't in the text, I'd watch them look up from their doodled-upon notebooks with sharp eyes and ask, "Will this be on the test?"

The truth is, it's all on the test. And we as a society will fail that test if we can't do better—soon—in the classrooms of this Republic.



The downtown parking situation is really beginning to get out of hand.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Select chair dots i's and crosses t's

TO THE EDITOR:

I can't be sure Winchester residents will recognize the woman portrayed much too kindly, I think, in last week's paper, but in any case, may I point out a few comments that suggest credit not due?

I have loved my involvement with both the League of Women Voters and the Chamber of Commerce and both are large groups of involved people. I'd like to think the LWV Town Center study was a valuable reference, but our "renaissance" is entirely due to the chamber fund raising program, supported by countless citizens and the Town Meeting matching funds vote, which resulted in the hiring of John Connery and the results we all enjoy today. Marcia Saltmarsh and Neil Harte led the chamber committee.

Second, I enjoyed very much being on the original chamber board and executive committee, which were led by President Bob Nickerson. He appointed me chair of the Sign By-Law Revision group whose members, Alan Eyden, Paul Mahoney, Henry Quill and Kevin Ryan did all the work!

Finally, my sojourn at Boston University was somewhat brief before I transferred to the Massachusetts General Hospital for my degree in nursing.

Many thanks for allowing me to point these things out — so many of us worked so long and hard and happily for the results, the credit should be widely spread around indeed!

Again, many thanks for your very kind words.

Selectman explains vote

TO THE EDITOR:

Last week's Star editorial commented on events having to do with awarding a permit to the Society for the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin for a fiesta at Leonard's Field. One of the statements suggested that by voting to grant the permit I had abdicated leadership responsibilities.

I feel compelled to respond - not to defend my vote, which must stand on its merits, but to explain how selectmen often function as mediators. Disputed issues seldom offer clear cut alternatives. Certainly that was the case with the fiesta. We needed to take into consideration strong feelings of the society and adjacent neighbors. The overall issue of appropriate playfield use and respected judgement of town employees were also key factors. A further concern in my opinion was that both opponents and supporters of the fiesta come from the same neighborhood.

Over the two weeks of spirited debate, many worked hard at compromise. In the end, the fiesta was scaled down in number of days and intensity. The society pledged increased sensitivity and responsiveness to concerns of the neighbors. And I think it clear that the society must begin now to consider other options if they wish to hold the fiesta again in 1988. Based on those agreements, the fact that good faith efforts had been made to resolve difficult issues, and an observation that flat denial could serve to polarize a fine neighborhood, I changed my vote. So did others.

Thus, the point of this letter: I think effective leaders need not always be arbiters. It is equally important to be mediators who work on solutions to problems and compromises for disputes. To characterize that as equivocation fails to understand the role of a selectman.

Thomas W. Schmitt
Selectman

Society offers cooperation

TO THE EDITOR:

On Aug. 3, the Board of Selectmen voted three to two to grant a license to us to continue to use Leonard's field for our annual Italian Fiesta-Carnival. After two adverse decisions the Board voted favorably on our request. In a situation such as this there is a need for dedication to sacrifice and compromise by all involved parties.

It is unfortunate for a neighborhood to become divided over a function whose purpose is to unite. The Society goes forward not knowing that the slightest incident, whether within our control or not, will be the basis for the resumption or opposition.

We want the community to know that the Society will work with the Selectmen and other Town officials to insure that the fiesta-carnival is conducted with the highest degree of care and consideration to all. We will do all within our power to keep the needs of the neighborhood in mind. In return we ask that our neighbors be tolerant and understanding of our needs and those of our supporters.

We wish to thank the Board of Selectmen, Town officials, and the Community in supporting our efforts to continue the long-established tradition of our parents.

MAN IN THE STREET

What do you think of the way the Italian fiesta & carnival was handled?

Keith Puffer

"Thank God I'm not on the Board of Selectmen. They are going to be disliked by one side or the other no matter what they decided."

Sue Collins

"I was surprised to find out they had gone back on their decision. I guess I'm siding in favor of the residents. I think their feelings should have been respected as well as the Recreation Department's new policy on field use. I think another spot should have been found for the fair."

Christine MacInnes

"I really don't see the big deal. They don't run around in the streets anymore like they used to. Now it is all contained in one place."

Mary E. Fitzgerald

"It is ridiculous that the town had such a hassle over it. They have had it every year. People do not want to put up with anything. I have to put up with traffic on Church Street for seven days a week. People have got ten so unfriendly, they do not want to put themselves out."

Flashbacks

A look at Winchester news this week...

5 years ago: 1982

Winchester School Committee votes to lay off nine tenured teachers and six non-tenured teachers because of declining enrollment and a cut in federal funds.

Enrollment at the schools is projected to drop by 200 students. The decision to lay off the 15 teachers is a result of the imbalanced student-teacher ratio, and the fact that the school budget is being spent rapidly from both sides with federal cuts and Prop 2½.

High interest rates slow sales of the Wedgewood Place condominiums, opened in 1981. Three quarters of the condos remain vacant while potential buyers search for mortgage loans. Nearby, developers of the converted Washington School have few problems selling off the 18 units in the "Waterfield Square" condos.

Winchester houses suffer 18 successful break-ins and entries since June. A neighborhood Crime Watch program offered by the police department is enacted, aiming to combine the efforts of the neighbors to protect each other's property.

The annual two-day Italian Feast of the Assumption is held at Leonard Field, consisting of amusement rides and food concessions, as well as a procession of the Queensmen Drum and Bugle Corps. A Mass and fireworks display close the feast.

Fire Department is hard-pressed as brush fires blacken the Fells, tie up the available workers and equipment, and cost the town money. In July alone, 73 runs were made to the Middlesex Fells in attempts to prevent serious destruction. It was estimated that 275 acres of conservation land had burned in the time between late spring and midsummer.

Winchester Hospital locks the front entrance for the first time in the hospital's 60-year history. The doors close at 8:30 p.m., when visiting hours end, and remain locked until 6 a.m. the following morning. The management of the hospital had been reluctant to take this step because of the hospital's long tradition of having always been available for entry at all times. Appropriate protective measures for the welfare of patients were the contributing concern regarding the decision.

Upon demand from the Winchester Pond Association, Winter Pond receives aquatic weed control treatment. Because Winter Pond is one of the few natural resources remaining in Winchester and in the wake of a petition from residents in the area, the Winter Pond Study Committee is formed. The group will aim to keep up the natural setting of Winter Pond by regulating the annual weed treatment.

Contributions for publication submitted by 4 p.m. Monday will be considered for that Thursday's paper.

Contributors are requested to submit typed, double-spaced copy.

Submission by the deadline does not, however, guarantee publication the same week, as final decisions on what to include each week are made based on space considerations.

Every attempt will be made to place time-sensitive copy in a timely manner.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Borggaard sets the record straight

TO THE EDITOR:

It seems to me (and to many other members of the Winchester Seniors Association as well) that much of the publicity on senior affairs in Winchester lately tends to focus on the good work being done in that field by the Winchester Council on Aging. We gladly concede that much credit is due the council, but we regret that the equaly creditable efforts of the far larger group, the association itself, are somehow crowded off the page.

As a case in point, I refer to an article in a recent issue of the Winchester Star. The very title itself seems to us to be unnecessarily pejoritive. To wit: "Jenks Center Rent Doubles. (In view of the strictures imposed by "2½", anything that costs the town twice as much this year as last, is automatically suspect!)

Why, we ask, was no effort made to explain to the readers the many valid reasons why the rent was being doubled? Was this omission accidental, or was it intentional?

Actually, the rent is not being doubled, it is now being restored to what it was when it first started years ago. Quoting the town manager, "it was then $1,000, then for some reason it dropped to $500." The reason, for the town manager's information, was that the trustees asked that it be dropped because we did not need the money then.

We do need it now. We have just recently collected and spent another $1 million to more than double the premises, making it today a $2 million proposition. The council now uses four offices instead of one, and there are now two large assembly halls instead of one, and there are now 5,000 members where formerly there were only 2,000.

As a final thrust the article (still quoting from the town manager) goes on to say that "the trustess wanted $2,400 in rent this year" but the council, "negotiating for the town," cut it down to $1,000.

Why, I ask, should the Council on Aging be negotiating for the town? Why were they not negotiating for the seniors? Can the town not look after itself, what with the 15 member Finance Committee as well as the Board of Selectmen there at all times to look after its interests? When I was chairman of the council years ago, we fought for the seniors the way the School Committee fights today for the public schools. (We never were as successful as they, however!).

To bring this to a close, let me point out that, with rents what they are today, the town is getting a tremendous bargain. Even at the $2,400 figure it would have difficulty renting a two-chair barbershop in Winchester.

Neighbor notes friend's passage

TO THE EDITOR:

During the last 30 years I have devoted myself to the task of trying to determine what makes a successful person. Some people contend that a special skill or a special talent is important to success. Many books and courses are devoted to this important subject. Some people live a successful life without any regard to what ingredients, skills, talents are required to gain success. Dick Ferrina was such a man.

I had the pleasure of working with Dick Ferrina for a number of years. I found him to be an excellent worker, with the talent and ability to run complex heavy-duty equipment, and other skills to get the job done.

He was a loving family man. His family was number one in his life. He liked his friends, and went out of his way to help them. Dick was a man who loved life, and he loved to laugh and have a good time. Dick didn't need a book on success, because he wrote the book by the way he lived his life.

It was a pleasure to know him, and although he might be gone, he will not be forgotten.

GUEST COLUMN

A tale of two cities:
Every town sees itself as a world apart

By Wade Roush
Special to the Star

Winchester knows its place.

By that, I mean the town has developed remarkably the psychology of self-containedness, geographical identity, provinciality and hometown nostalgia that historians of the environment call a sense of place.

And I say remarkably because, after all, on satellite photographs Winchester appears to be no more than a scattering of little white boxes arranged around a few ponds and reservoirs. Down here, on the ground, townspeople have a clear image of Winchester as a roughly triangle-shaped entity that is wholly separate from bordering Arlington, Medford, Stoneham, Woburn and Lexington. An amazing feat of self-indoctrination: the perception of locale and individuality in a landscape that is, on a slightly larger scale, undifferentiated.

As a reporting intern at the Star for the last three months, and as one fascinated by the relationships between people and the environments they carve out for themselves, I have noticed these things. My awareness has been enhanced, I suppose, by the fact that I come from another self-contained community, one in Michigan to which I am returning this weekend.

As I depart, the comparisons between Winchester and my hometown of Charlotte (that's with the stress on the 'lotte'; why is a long story) are, for me, inevitable. Physically, the towns have about the same area, but Winchester has about half again Charlotte's population. Charlotte's streets are laid out in the tidy tradition of the Jeffersonian grid that characterizes the entire Midwest, while Winchester's seem to wander crazily. The streets are lined with the same kinds of trees, but Charlotte has no hills and many, many fewer bricks. Charlotte's best homes are considerably less grand than the mansions dotting, for instance, Winchester's Everett Avenue.

Charlotte natives would be confounded by a traffic rotary. Winchester natives, on the other hand, might feel agoraphobic at the six miles of open farmland separating Charlotte from the next nearest community.

Few of these contrasts, of course, are surprising. Charlotte is a rural, agricultural town just beginning to encounter the encroaching suburbia of nearby Lansing. Winchester has almost always been connected with Boston, New England's capital, first as a country escape for the gentry, now as a bedroom community. The interesting point lies in each town's conception of itself as "small."

Charlotte is certain, if not proud, of its small-town status. It is resigned that no matter how many fast food restaurants or apartment buildings or subdivisions gather on its periphery, its fundamental identity as a quiet, lower middle-class collection of farmers' descendants will not change; the town will never become a city. In this supposition, it has been right so far, but it may not be much longer. For the massive belt of suburbia stretching from Detroit to Lansing to Chicago is poised to swallow it up.

Winchester is also confident that it is a small town, perhaps warily so, as evidenced by the raised hackles when someone calls it a "city" by mistake. Look at our tiny, manicured Town Centre, the residents say. Look at our quaint participatory-democracy form of government. Look at our hometown spirit, our parades, our churches. Who says we're not a small town?

I do, for one. Winchester was long ago swallowed up by Boston. It shares its transportation system, its cultural diversity, its philosophy of suburban good living. It is a mere 30 minutes from the universities, orchestra halls, and skyscrapers that are the accoutrements of any great metropolis. A group of people can simultaneously embrace the city's broadness and reject its burdens — but only semantically.

While Winchester guards its independence in the time-honored tradition of New England town government, it is inextricably woven into the fabric of greater Boston.

Its high real estate prices may isolate it from many urban wage earners, but not from the benefits and problems connected with the inner city.

The irony in the contrast between Charlotte and Winchester is that Charlotte is officially incorporated as a "City," and wants to be one, but never has been, whereas Winchester is a "Town," that is really a satellite of a larger city. And while the two could, perhaps should, trade titles, the residents of each would probably decline the chance to live in the other.

Ultimately the awareness of "home" goes beyond titles and aspirations. Perhaps each of us should spend less time resisting the realities at our borders and more time rejoicing in what makes our communities unique.

Senior eye care available

People over 65 often find their vision becomes blurred, they see flashes of light, or they become sensitive to glare. These changes in vision may be symptoms of developing eye disease and should be checked by an opthalmologist.

Unfortunately, many senior citizens do not know physicians near their homes or feel they cannot afford professional care.

This year opthalmologists on the Winchester Hospital Medical staff have been working with the National Eye Care Project (NECP). This program provides free eye care to seniors who are United States citizens and do not have an opthalmologist.

Interested seniors may call the NECP Helpline at 1-800-222-EYES. If they are eligible for the program, the operator there will match them with a physician in this area who has volunteered his or her services as part of the program. The caller will receive a letter with the name, address, and phone number of the physician and further details about the program.

Callers who are not eligible for the program will be offered information about contacting other opthalmologists for second opinions and can receive a brochure about eye diseases and aging.

Once a person contacts a participating physician, he/she receives a complete eye examination to determine what care may be necessary to protect vision. Care is then made available for whatever is required. There is usually no cost for services by the volunteer opthalmologist, who has agreed to bill Medicare or the patient's other insurance and accept this as full payment for services.

Seniors without insurance or means to pay receive care at no cost. The patient may be asked to pay for the cost of eyeglasses, medications, hospital services, or associated services of other physicians.

Winchester Hospital physicians have already received calls from local citizens and have delivered care ranging from examinations to hospital surgery procedures. They are pleased to be able to offer this service.

For further information call 1-800-222-EYES or write: The American Academy of Opthalmology-NECP, PO Box 94101, San Francisco, Calif., 94101.

Winchester Hospital joins MetLife HMO

Winchester Hospital joined MetLife HealthCare Network of Massachusetts, a new maintenance organization (HMO).

MetLife HealthCare Network of Mass., headquartered in Canton, is an affiliate of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in New York City. In conjunction with Metropolitan Life, the company will also offer a multiple-option, managed-care product which includes HMO, preferred provider organization (PPO), and indemnity (fee-for-service) options, in a single consolidated plan for Eastern Massachusetts employers.

Together with a group of its participating physicians, Winchester Hospital will provide MetLife HealthCare Network members with comprehensive health care services, including preventive, emergency, and inpatient health care.

In an HMO, members receive all health care services through HMO member hospitals and physicians for a pre-paid monthly fee, generally fully or partially paid by their employers. By emphasizing staying healthy and good medical management, HMOs attempt to reduce the need for in-hospital care.

Winchester is a not-for-profit, acute-care community hospital located 15 minutes from downtown Boston. The hospital maintains a 186-bed medical/surgical service, a 29-bed obstetric service, an 18-bed pediatric service, and an active emergency service that handles more than 24,000 visits annually. Ambulatory and off-site services are currently undergoing expansion.

Bob Ritter, president of MetLife HealthCare Network of Massachusetts, right, welcomes Winchester Hospital and its chief executive officer, Eugene Loubier, to the provider network of the health maintenance organization serving employees in eastern Massachusetts.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Dick Murphy
The Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors

MAXIMIZE YOUR STORAGE SPACE

No matter how much storage space a house has, it's never enough. So if your home is on the market, it's important for you to maximize whatever storage you have.

Many of our sellers become quite offended when they see prospective buyers open up the closets. They're not snooping, however, but just want to see how large each one is. Even the biggest closets may fail to impress buyers if they are crammed with mounds of smelly laundry and everything you've been meaning to give to the Salvation Army Thrift Shop for the past decade. Because closets are so important, it's a good idea to go through each one to make it as neat and uncluttered as possible. Then go through your basement and attic to get rid of whatever you don't need. Moving is a great excuse for a yard sale or a trip to your favorite charity with a tax-deductable contribution. Maximizing your storage space is one more way to make your home much more competitive and help it sell quickly.

If you are considering a move, contact the professionals at The Bixby & Porter Company Realtors. Call us at 729-7000 or stop by our offices at 33 Thompson Street in Winchester.

Donald Druga

Druga joins OB/GYN team

Dr. James F. McDonough and Dr. John W. Grady, whose offices are at 175 Washington St., announce that Dr. Donald J. Druga has joined them in the practice of obstetrics and gynecology.

Dr. Druga is a graduate of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, and its medical school. He interned at Cleveland Metropolitan General Hospital and completed residency requirements at University Hospitals of Cleveland, serving as executive chief resident at the MacDonald Hospital for Women. He has also studied in Great Britain and Canada.

Dr. Druga has special clinical interests in infertility and colposcopy. He is a Fellow of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and a member of the American Society for Colposcopy and Cervical Pathology, the American Fertility Society, Massachusetts Medical Society, and American Medical Association.

A member of the Winchester Hospital Medical Staff, he began his practice in Winchester July 27.

Hospital trains physicians' assistants

Winchester Hospital has recently added to its already long list of clinical training affiliations with area colleges and universities.

This spring it became a rotation site for students enrolled in the second year of the two-year Physicians' Assistant Program at Northeastern University.

Dr. Richard Kingsbury, a general surgeon, is serving as the coordinator. Both he and his associate, Dr. Hugh McCarthy, are responsible for directing and supervising the students, who are assigned to participating hospitals for five-week periods.

"For 15 years we have had surgical residents from Tufts New England Medical Center," Kingsbury explained. "The residents have liked the rotation a lot and have benefitted greatly from the program."

One of the prime movers of the Physicians' Assistant Program, Dr. Harold Rhinelander, a surgeon at the New England Medical Center, was aware of the quality of the surgical residency at Winchester Hospital and asked the Winchester surgeons to take on the Northeastern program.

Northeastern describes the program as participation in a variety of surgical patient care responsibilities under the supervision of a surgical resident and/or staff surgeon. The emphasis of the rotation at Winchester Hospital is in general surgery, but students have an opportunity to obtain varying exposure to other surgical specialties and subspecialties. They assist in the initial assessment of the surgical patient, including obtaining an accurate medical history and performing a physical examination.

As members of the surgical team, students are involved in pre-operative management, including patient education and any procedures necessary to prepare the patient for surgery. They assist the surgeon in the Operating Room when appropriate and have the opportunity to become familiar with operating room procedures and equipment.

Students are also involved in the post-operative evaluation and management of the patient. Opportunity exists to attend surgical grand rounds and other surgically oriented educational meetings when available at the rotation sites.

A physicians' assistant has had one or more years of patient-care experience, either as a nurse, radiological technician, emergency medical technician, paramedic or the like, and has decided to become more knowledgeable in the care of the patient.

After completion of a 24-month program during which classroom work the first year is followed by hospital rotations the second year, the student is trained to act under the direction of a physician or physicians.

Physicians' assistants are used widely in both medical and surgical roles. The surgical department at New England Medical Center employs four.

Once students have completed all requirements and have received certification, they may choose to assist physicians in their office practice or work in a hospital emergency room, assisting physicians in taking medical histories, performing appropriate physical exams, identifying problems, and recording and presenting pertinent information.

They can also perform and interpret routine diagnostic studies, including routine laboratory procedures, common radiologic studies, electrocardiographic tracings, allergy screenings, and pap smears; routine therapeutic procedures, including injections, immunizations, suturing, wound care, incision and drainage of superficial infections, and follow-up of simple fractures.

They can also instruct and counsel patients regarding physical and mental health, assist in the delivery of services to patients requiring continuing care, and assist the physician in inpatient settings by performing patient rounds, recording patients' progress notes, determining and implementing therapeutic plans in conjunction with the supervising physician, and compiling and recording pertinent case summaries.

SENIOR NEWS

Mini van provides mobility to otherwise homebound seniors

By LEONOR RICH
Special to the Star

Senior van

The Senior Mini Van is a special service provided on every Friday by the Salter family, owners of the Winchester Nursing Centers.

With the endorsement and cooperation of the Winchester Council on Aging and the Winchester Seniors Association, this project is of great benefit to many seniors. It helps them to get around town to do errands and also it takes trips to the Burlington Mall.

Stops are made at the Mary Murphy Apartments on Palmer Street and the Westley Street Elderly Housing units. There is no charge for any ride, due to the generosity of the Salters. They provide the Senior Mini Van through a contract with the Armstrong Ambulance Service.

The capacity of the van is nine people with provisions for two wheelchairs. Wheelchair riders must be accompanied by another adult. The white van is clearly marked, "Winchester Senior Mini Van" so that it can be seen without difficulty.

People desiring to have this door-to-door service must call the Jenks Senior Center during the week to reserve space and destinations for the Friday trips. The bus goes to the Burlington Mall, to local nursing homes if requested, to banks, hairdressers, medical appointments, and supermarkets. Requests will be honored from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The drivers are skilled Emergency Medical Technicians (EMTs) who have had much experience in ambulance service. "Wally" has a personal interest in his passengers, all of whom enjoy his pleasant manner.

When he is not available, Neal Scoppetulo, a young man in the employ of the Armstrong Ambulance Company, does the driving. He is an EMT, also, and a member of the Army National Guard who has had military police service duty.

These men are both well-qualified to handle emergencies if necessary. The services they render provide safe travel that is beneficial to the seniors of Winchester.

Appeal for items for the fair

A fair is accomplished with success by many people: planners, donors, vendors, purchasers and accountants. Although the annual Fall Fiesta Fair at the Jenks Senior Center is an activity that is two months into the fall, it is necessary for the committee to be prepared for the event. Thus, repeated early calls are made to be sure that townspeople who are vacationing will have an opportunity to be informed.

Angelo Giannetti, chairperson of the Ways and Means Committee, assisted by Anne Feuss and the Ways and Means Committee, are giving their best efforts to make the receipts outstanding as a fair to top all fairs.

An appeal is made earnestly for donations that can arrive at the Jenks Senior Center during August and September to be priced and distributed to the proper booths. Pick-up service is available by calling the center (721-7136). Requests for donations are as follows:

Women's Boutique: Chairpersons Kay Kennefick and Ann Ciampa need items such as attractive glassware, ornaments, linens, bric-a-brac, knick-knacks, crewel pillows and other handwork.

Men's Boutique: Chairperson's Guy Schipeletti and Jack McCarthy seek such articles as checkers, cribbage sets, new billfolds, keyrings, belts, lighters, pipes, pocket knives, tools, old and new, and handmade articles.

Gift Shop: Chairperson Polly McGuigan requests old, choice glassware, antiques, trays, vases, china, silver, gold, stainless steel, pewter, and other items that will make good gifts.

Knit Table: Chairpersons May Hambly and Betty Anderson are looking for inner and outer wear, socks, mittens, stocking caps, hats, scarves, sweaters, babies clothing, etc.

Children's Table: Chairpersons Mary Collins and Miriam Durant require toys, dolls, stuffed animals, games and any items that will appeal to children.

Electrical Appliances: Chairpersons Ed Palmer, Ray Murphy, and Al Karnilla seek hair dryers, radios, TV sets, clocks, electric irons, toaster, household equipment, etc. All must be new or in good condition.

White Elephants: Chairpersons Helen Murphy and Regina Karnilla are looking for anything that can be considered a "bargain." "One man's trash is another man's treasure."

Jewelry: Chairperson Ruth Ayres wants good usable costume jewelry in excellent condition.

Books: Chairperson Alita Neff has an eye out for good books. All books must be in good condition, clean and "gifty."

Bakery: Chairpersons Sylvia Saslow and Marjorie Blomquist are accepting home made cakes, pies, bread, home canned preserves, casseroles, candies, fresh garden produce, fruit, etc. Winchester's cooks are asked to stock the table.

Aprons: Chairperson Irma Ganchi seeks aprons of both practical and fancy styles. Yard goods will also be for sale.

Car Raffle: Chairpersons Mary Gianetti and Lillian Frongillo are in charge.

Dinner Arrangement: Chairperson Anne Feuss is organizing the dinner which will be catered by Ezio of Stoneham, and held in the new auditorium at the Jenks Center.

Dinner tickets: Chairpersons Harry Chefalo and Clarence Borggaard are selling the tickets.

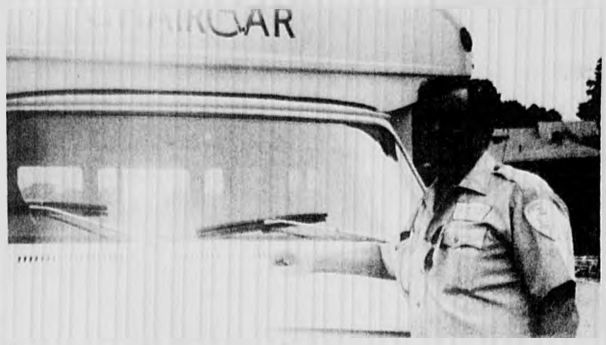
Set up of hall: Vin Berger and assistants will perform this service.

Pick-ups: Chairpersons George Wells, Harry Chefalo and Guy Schipeletti are in charge of pick-ups.

Publicity: Leonor Rich, Isabel Grasso will do the publicity.

The tickets are selling gradually for the Ford Escort Pony, but sales must accelerate, even to meet the "at cost" price of the car. They may be obtained at the Jenks Senior Center reception desk.

(Please see SENIORS, page 16)



"Wally," one of the drivers, stands next to the Senior Mini Bus.

Golf tourney set for Oct. 5

The Winchester Country Club will be the setting for the fourth annual LMH Golf Tournament to benefit Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford.

The tournament, scheduled for Monday, Oct. 5, will kick off with a shotgun start at 12:30 p.m. and will conclude with a full-course dinner and raffle drawing. The entry fee of $150 per player include greens fees, an electric golf cart, dinner, prizes and gifts.

The tournament is open to the public. Early registration is recommended. Sponsorships of the course and carts are also available.

For more information on the tournament, call the LMH community relations department at 396-9250.

Allard sets hitting marks

Chuck Allard, a Northeastern University senior and 1983 graduate of Winchester High School, recently finished his junior year with the school's season record for home runs, at 11 for the year.

Allard collected seven home runs in each of his freshman and sophomore years, making for a career record of 25 and leading the Huskies to a 25-14 record last year. The team's 20-14 performance this year marked the first time Northeastern baseball had reached the twenty-win plateau two years in a row.

Allard finished his junior year with a .278 batting average and led the team with 37 RBI. His .630 slugging percentage ranked second on the team, as did his 68 total bases. With a career total of 103 RBI, Allard is within 16 of the Husky record.

After graduation from WHS, Allard spent a year at Deerfield Prep and then entered Northeastern's Class of 1989 as a Mechanical Engineering major.

"We do all the basics drycleaners do, we just do them better."

For more than 38 years Faulkner's Cleansing has served the cleaning needs of Winchester residents and has built up a reputation for quality workmanship that has made them a trusted name in drycleaning and has made many Winchester residents lifelong customers.

Faulkner's not only drycleans all the usual items including pants suits, dresses, and coats, and cleans and presses shirts, but they also go one step further — Faulkner's inspects every article of clothing and replaces buttons or sews seams at no charge.

"We do all the basics that other drycleaners do, we just do them better," explains owner/proprietor Francis Hardy.

As far as service is concerned Faulkner's Cleansing offers something we tend to associate with past decades -- door to door service. At no extra charge Faulkner's will pick up and deliver your drycleaning to your house.

Every Tuesday and Thursday their truck goes through Winchester for convenient door to door service. There is no extra charge for this convenience and customers can arrange for free pick-up and delivery by calling Faulkner's Cleansing at 665-6300.

In addition to cleaning all the usual items, Faulkner's also cleans various household items including slipcovers, draperies, and bedspreads. They are also experts at cleaning both suede and leather garments.

And, if you don't have the space around your home or apartment to store seasonal garb, Faulkner's offers storage for anything from furs to wools. Box storage is available in which you receive a large box to store your clothes which are cleaned and pressed just prior to pickup, and ready to wear when you retrieve them by calling Faulkner's Cleansing several days in advance.

For quality workmanship and the customer satisfaction which has been the trademark of Faulkner's for more than 38 years, or for convenient door to door service at no extra charge, come into Faulkner's at 437 Franklin st. Melrose, or just pick up the phone and call them at 665-6300.

Faulkner's Cleansing is open Monday through Friday, 7-5, Saturdays, 8-5.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL
Volume 13-Report No. 32
Massachusetts House and Senate
August 7, 1987

The House and Senate. While the House and Senate are in recess, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" continues its reporting of local representatives' previously unrecorded votes on roll call during debate on the fiscal 1988 budget recently signed into law by Governor Dukakis.

Travel — House 122-29, rejected an amendment prohibiting any funds from the special commission to study efforts to advance foreign trade with underdeveloped countries from being used by legislators to travel out of the country.

Amendment supporters, noting travel records and reports have not been available from this commission, said this will insure these trips are not public funded junkets.

Opponents said the amendment will prohibit travel and defeat the purpose of the commission.

A Yea vote is for the amendment
A Nay vote is against it.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted no.

Elderly - House 137-16, rejected an amendment reducing funding for a special commission to study health care for the elderly from $125,000 to $75,000 and directing the UMass Gerentology Unit to work with the commission.

Amendment supporters said the $50,000 will be used to hire unnecessary consultants and claimed the UMass unit is working on the issue and can help at no cost.

Opponents said the money is needed to study this major problem and said it is not yet determined whether the money will be used for consultants.

A Yea vote is for the amendment
A Nay vote is against it
Saltmarsh voted no

Salaries - House 122-30, rejected an amendment prohibiting any increase in the salaries of the Governor's staff without legislative approval

Amendment supporters said recent staff hikes have been excessive and have far outstripped the cost of living.

Opponents said the Governor should not need legislative approval to hike salaries.

A Yea vote is for the amendment.
A Nay vote is against it.
Saltmarsh voted no.

State Secretary - House 127-29, rejected an amendment reducing funding for the Secretary of State's office from $5.5 million to $5.3 million.

Amendment supporters said this office has seen an unnecessary $1.5 million hike in the past few years.

Opponents said the item includes an overdue cost of living adjustment.

A Yea vote is for the amendment.
A Nay vote is against it.
Saltmarsh voted no.

Audits - House 134-20, rejected an amendment providing that at least 25 percent of audits performed by the State Auditor be done on a random and unannounced basis.

Amendment supporters said random audits have been successful and will prevent anyone from changing books.

Opponents said advance notice must be given so records can be assembled.

A Yea vote is for the amendment.
A Nay vote is against it.
Saltmarsh voted no.

More Audits - House 123-31, rejected an amendment providing that the results of an audit be released within 90 days of its completion.

Amendment supporters, noting the withholding of the '03' consultant report during the last gubernatorial race, said this will prevent witholding of audit reports for politica reasons.

Opponents said the legislature should not tie the hands of the auditor

A Yea vote is for the amendment.
A Nay vote is against it.
Saltmarsh voted yes.

Seabrook - House 121-34, rejected an amendment reducing funding for the Attorney General's office from $13.7 million to $12.9.

Amendment supporters said this will cut some $800,000 for the Seabrook litgation unit and claimed Seabrook litigation can be done without this increase.

Opponents said the money is necessary to deal with this crucial problem.

A Yea vote is for the amendment.
A Nay vote is against it.
Saltmarsh voted no.

Resources - House 124-32, rejected an amendment striking a $534,500 item for the administration of the Office of Human Resource Administration.

Amendment supporters said this creates a new layer of bureaucracy over existing programs which already operate out of the Office of Administration and Finance.

Opponents said the item consolidates various personnel functions into one division and will address many personnel problems including the use of '03' consultants.

A Yea vote is for the amendment.
A Nay vote is against it.
Saltmarsh voted yes.

Seniors seek helpers of all kinds

(From page 13)

The lucky number will be drawn at 3 p.m. Oct. 8, the second day of the fair.

Be daring! Try your luck!

All shoulders will have to be put to good use in making the fair a winner. The circle of helpers must radiate to include seniors. Each one must be willing to do his/her share in making this event a real financial success.

Site manager required

The "Eating Together Site" is in the proposal stages. The request has been submitted to the Minute Man Home Care Corporation Board and must be reviewed and approved by the board in early September.

They decide about the funding of this important nutritional project. Meanwhile, the Winchester Council on Aging is anticipating approval.

All interested people are invited to apply for the management position of the Eating Together Site for the congregate meals. This person will be employed by the Minute Man Home Care Corporation for a minimum of 20 hours per week. Applicants must be at least 55 years of age.

To learn more about the requirements for this position, applicants can call Barbara Ciampa, administrator for the Winchester Council on Aging at Jenks Senior Center, (721-7136), or Carole Burns, director of the Minute Man Home Care Corporation Older Workers Program, 862-6200.

Movie of the month

"His Gal, Friday" will be shown on Aug. 21 at the Jenks Senior Center from 1 to 3:15 p.m.

It is a classic comedy that is considered to be a fine remake of "The Front Page."

Cary Grant is a sneaky editor whose star reporter, played by Rosalind Russell, becomes involved in a hot murder story.

People in the community are most cordially invited to attend the showing of this film.

Settlement with Johns-Manville nets town $17k

Gedeuld, Inc., of New York bought the settlement and will receive the $300,000 difference between the initial agreement and the final payments, McNaught said.

Johns-Manville filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy laws in 1982, in part to avoid potential liability in thousands of suits related to the company's asbestos-laden products.

The 39 municipalities and the Commonwealth will share 76 percent of the settlement, McNaught said. The remaining $951,000 will go to state and local authorities for use toward future TCE-related expenses.

"Massachusetts cities and towns — already hard pressed to find the necessary resources for providing basic and essential public services — can ill afford to wait until the next century before receiving the revenue they so desperately need," Shannon said. "The sale of our claim...not only provides immediate monetary relief...it also removes the uncertainty of 'when' and 'if' that compensation would be received."

According to Serratore, TCE-tainted pipes were installed in many areas of Winchester in the late 1970s. After warnings from the state Board of Health, water from the new pipes was chemically tested, and high concentrations of the substance were discovered in dead-ended pipes on Azalea Road, Belknap Terrace, and Gerard Road.

"The problem with TCE is that unless you have a looped system you experience high levels of toxics," Serratore said. The testing uncovered the presence of TCE in the pipes in concentrations as high as 146 parts per billion, he said. The maximum safe level of TCE as defined by the Environmental Protection Agency is 40 parts per billion.

After 1980, as an interim solution, the town installed bleeder valves to maintain a constant flow through the pipes, leaching out the TCE, Serratore said. Eventually, the dead-ended pipes were "looped," or connected to other pipes to provide a flow of water.

The settlement amount will cover 93 percent of Winchester's costs in wasted water and looping, Serratore said.

Seatbelt law affects children

fine for drivers remains at $25 per unrestrained child.

"As more parents comply with the law and buckle up their children, injuries and deaths of children in motor vehicle accidents will decrease," said Nancy Carrey-Beaver, director of the Massachusetts Passenger Safety Program. "If 70 percent of all children were restrained, injury and fatality rates would be cut in half."

Winchester Chief of Police John P. McHugh foresees long range benefits from the law as children grow into their teen years. "If we can develop the safety belt habit in young kids," he said, "they'll be more likely to continue as teens and adults."

Sixty communities across the state are joining with the Massachusetts Passenger Safety Program of the state Department of Public Health to promote the new law during the summer "Make It Click" campaign.

Seat belt advocates in participating towns disseminate educational materials, give presentations to groups and distribute radio and television public service announcements.

For more information about the new Child Passenger Safety Law or for ideas and materials for promoting the law and passenger safety in Winchester, contact Safety Officer Kevin P. Mawn at 729-1212 ext. 318.

Homes in town are selling more slowly lower than rates in 1985. "I think buyers are resigned to paying 9 or 10 percent," Wesley Swanson of Swanson Associates Real Estate Inc. said. Interest rates at both Cambridgeport Savings Bank and Winchester Savings Bank for a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage are approximately 10.5 percent.

Swanson believes there is another reason for the slow-down. "The buying public is angry at the prices they have had to pay," he said. "They are unwilling to pay those prices anymore."

Winchester is competing with what Swanson calls "comparable towns" such as Wellesley and Lexington. He said very few people come in to his office and say they only want to look in Winchester.

Blackham disagrees. She said 95 percent of her customers say they want to live in town. "Winchester has more to offer. It is a mainline town," Blackham said.

All three realtors agree that the market is slower than last year, but said Winchester is sought-after as a place of residence. The school system, available transportation and zoning make the town a desirable place to live, they said.

Caci said that even in the worst economic times there is a demand for housing in the area as a result of the proximity of employment in the medical, educational and high-tech fields. Winchester housing is less affected by a slack market, Blackham said, because it is a stable town with only 5 percent turnover. The average, she said, is 10 percent.

Despite these optimistic views, Winchester Savings Bank Residential Lending Officer Karen Hurst said, "The market seems to have dropped off dramatically in terms of mortgage applications." The bank deals mostly with customers in Winchester and the surrounding communities. Hurst said the drop has been across the board.

"The market has slowed down," Cambridgeport Savings Bank Manager of Real Estate Rebecca Tabor said. "Every town is seeing it. I think it's a backlash from last year."

Sellers in Winchester are finding it takes longer to sell their home than it did last summer. Swanson said homes are taking an average of 75 days to sell, which is longer than he can remember in his 25 years in the business. In previous years the average was 45 days. Last year, at the peak of the buying rush, many houses were sold within a week, Blackham said.

Caci attributes the added time to careful consideration on the part of buyers. "In Winchester it takes a long time to find the right house. People are fussy about what they are looking for and have very specific requirements," he said.

Fewer buyers are another reason houses take longer to sell, Swanson said out-of-state moves to the area have dropped. "A lot of people are turning down transfers to this area because of the price of housing," he said. Most of the people he sees now are looking for their second or third home. Many already live in Winchester and want to upgrade, he said.

This is a buyer's market, the realtors said. Sellers have had to accept offers lower than their asking price, the opposite of last year, when buyers raised house prices by bidding against each other.

Blackham said houses appreciated approximately 35 percent last year. This year, she expects, they'll be back to 12 to 15 percent, the norm for Winchester. Blackham also foresees the market in Winchester rising back to its normal level of activity by the fall.

"Sellers have to get used to the fact that there are not six or eight people just dying to buy their house," Blackham said. There is some price adjusting going on now as buyers and sellers test the current market, she added.

Let us help you feel right at home, right away

The nation's largest mortgage company – GMAC Mortgage – offers the Express Streamlined Process, a feature designed to make you feel right at home. In half the normal time.

The ESP feature is expressly for you, because less documentation is needed to prequalify you on the spot (subject to credit check and property appraisal). And that translates into faster new home or refinancing closings. In most cases, your loan will be ready for closing in 30 days.

In today's rate environment, the ESP is another good reason to choose GMAC Mortgage. Give us a call, or stop in. And get a move on into your new home.

Wild rides, friendly animals:

amusement parks are fun places to take the kids

Clockwise: The ferris wheel at Riverside Park is called the Colossus. Youngsters enjoy flying through the air. Riverside has an international flair. Canobie Lake is famous for its rides. Pinky the elephant entertains at Canobie Lake.

For pure escapism, it's hard to beat a trip to an outdoor amusement park. A perennial symbol of fun and laughter, an amusement park is a slice of Americana with sights, sounds, and smells that are unique to its own. Concentrate for a moment, and go there. Hear the screams of roller coaster riders, the call of the barker to "step right up and win a teddy bear," and smell the wonderful aroma of fresh popcorn and hot dogs.

The outdoor amusement park began in 17th-century Europe as a pleasure garden. Its focus was primarily social, offering sports, gaming, music, and dancing. Two examples were Vauxhall Gardens in London, England, and The Prater in Vienna, Austria.

Many amusement parks developed in America during the 1800s as trolley parks. By building a park at the end of an existing trolley route, owners hoped to increase the ridership.

By 1895, the year that Coney Island Amusement Park was built, residents, religious groups, and businessmen throughout the Mid-Atlantic and New England states had developed rural locales for amusement spots and picnic groves. One of those original places is still functioning in New England: Rocky Point Park in Rhode Island.

Some groves featured a primitive form of the ferris wheel, called the pleasure wheel, a hand-turned device. The first ferris wheel actually appeared at the 1893 Columbian Exposition in Chicago. The term midway also came from that exposition because the amusement area was mid way between E. 59th and E. 60th Street in Chicago.

As time passed, amusement parks became more popular and the rides grew wilder. After World War II, though, the parks seemed to decline in popularity, and during the 1950s, they were replaced by theme parks, such as Disneyland.

Even though the numbers have declined, the amusement park has managed to survive in New England. Profiled below are five parks that are an easy drive from the Boston area. Whenever possible, a history of the park is included.

MASSACHUSETTS

Whalom Park

The site of the present Whalom Park, on the shores of Lake Whalom in Lunenburg, began as a small recreation center back in 1884 under the direction of Nelson G. Lewis. At that time, the crowds came to the park by horse-drawn wagon.

In 1892, the Fitchburg and Leominster Street Railway acquired the park. They installed trolley lines to the Park, added amusement rides, and officially opened the park to the public in 1893. At that time, the park encompassed 75 acres and was studded with bright flowers, benches, pathways, and green trees bordering the lake. The Railway company has also expanded the facilities, including the dance hall, and added a zoo with moose, elk, and deer, and a playhouse. The playhouse was replaced with an open sided theatre around 1900.

Because so many children visited the Park, Kiddieland was built in the early 1940s. Over the years, that, too, has been expanded and today, it is a safe, fenced-in area with approximately 12 rides.

There have been other changes. In 1893, a two flume Water Slide was constructed on the Park's beach area. The bath house, and beach were revamped, and a food stand was added.

But Whalom Park has also experienced some dark times during its history. A tornado hit the area in August 1938 and one month later the Hurricane of '38 struck. Fire destroyed one side of the Midway in 1944, and the Playhouse in 1975. The latter was the second oldest summer theatre in the United States. Despite these setbacks, Whalom Park has always come back.

Whalom Park Today

Located on Route 13, Whalom Park beckons visitors to visit the Park "for a whale of a time." If you're fascinated with rides, the Park has approximately 20 rides for older children and adults. How about a ride on The Whip or the Tilt-a-Whirl? For younger guests, there are 12 rides in Kiddieland, including Roto Jets, tubs of Fun, and Motorcycles.

If you tire of rides, there are many other activities, including a miniature golf course, arcade, puppet place, and 20 games to challenge the skillful visitor. Food may be purchased at the restaurant or at several stands throughout the Park. There are also picnic areas on the Park grounds.

Whalom Park is open daily, except Monday from noon to [illegible] p.m. through Labor Day weekend. The general admission fee is $2; [illegible] citizens are admitted for $.25. Special packages [illegible] unlimited ride and waterslide use for $10.50 per person, an all-day ride pass for $8.50, and an evening ride pass from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. for $5; on Friday evenings the $5 fee admits two persons. Kiddieland packages, which include admission, cost $5 per child. The [illegible] package includes admission to the park, the beach, and unlimited use of all Park rides. Group rates are available for parties of 25 or more.

The Whalom Park beach, which has changing facilities, opens at 10 a.m. and closes at [illegible] p.m. Admission to the beach is $2 per person. The Waterslide also [illegible] costs $.50 per ride; however, there is a special Waterslide Pass available for $6 per person, which cludes admission to the beach and unlimited slide rides until 6 p.m.

To reach Whalom Park take route 2 to the Route 13 exit. Take Route 13 north for approximately three miles. For more information, call 1-342-3707.

Riverside Park

Riverside Park in Agawam has been in existence for nearly 148 years. Originally called Gallups Grove in 1840, the area was famous for its clambakes during the 19th century. When Captain E.H. Smith became the owner in the late 1880s, he changed the name to Riverside Grove and began passenger ship transportation from Springfield to the Park. The largest of these passenger boats was called Sylvia.

In 1912 Springfield businessman Henry J. Perkins purchased the grove, shortened its name to just Riverside, and turned it into an amusement park. Riverside was a success until the 1930s, when many businesses felt the impact of the Depression.

Around 1935, a Boston movie theater owner named Edward J. Carroll, Sr. leased what is now the parking lot and created New England's first Drive In theater. This attraction was a success and in 1939, Carroll purchased Riverside. The following year, the amusement park reopened with a 1909 Marcus Charles Illinois Carousel, penny arcade, fun house, and the largest ballroom in New England. During the Big Band Era of the 1940s, Glen Miller, Tommy Dorsey, and Duke Ellington were just a few of the top band leaders who appeared there.

In 1948, the ballroom was replaced by an auto racing track, the Riverside Speedway. The latest chapter in the Park's history began in 1979 when Ed Carroll, Jr. became the new manager and gave the Park a face lift with flower gardens, gift shops, and new rides. He also refurbished and repainted old rides and buildings.

Located on 150 acres along the western bank of the Connecticut River, Riverside Park is billed as New England's Largest Amusement Park. More than one million visitors come to the Park every year.

For adults who love challenging rides, Riverside Park has three roller coasters, the Cyclone, the wooden Thunderbolt, and the steel looped Black Widow. There is also a new 15-story ferris wheel, which combines a breathtaking ride with a beautiful view of the area. For youngsters, there's a Kiddie Land with child size Bumper Cars and a Petting Zoo stocked with farm animals.

singular approach to humor incorporates body language, imagination, and audience participation, making for an evening of raucous, hilarious improvisation.

Performances are Monday through Saturday evenings at 8:30 p.m., with matinees on Wednesday and Thursday at 2:30 p.m. Ticket prices range from $10 to $18. The box office is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., and on Sunday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Call 385-3911.

Meet those dancing feet

A song and dance fable of Broadway, 42nd Street, opens this week for a two-week run at the North Shore Music Theatre, continuing through Aug. 22, with performances slated for 8 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and matinees at 2 p.m. on Wednesday and Saturday. Ticket prices range from $14.50 through $20.

Based on the 1933 Warner Brothers/Busby Berkeley film, 42nd Street is the classic show-must-go-on story of the chorus girl who saves a Broadway show, and achieves instant stardom, by substituting for the ailing leading lady on opening night. the film opened on March 9, 1933 at the Strand Theatre in New York, and starred Dick Powell, Bebe Daniels, Ruby Keeler, and Ginger Rogers.

The Broadway production was produced by David Merrick and opened at the Winter Garden Theatre on August 25, 1980.

With a book by Michael Steward and Mark Branble that closely follows the novel by Bradford Ropes, and a score consisting of classic songs by Harry Warren and Al Dubin, including, Shuffle Off To Buffalo, We're In The Money, and The Lullabye of Broadway 42nd Street is a lavish song-and-dance extravaganza and a glorious tribute to the great Busby Berkeley movie musicals.

The North Shore Music Theatre production is being directed and choreographed by Sam Viverito who directed the Music Theatre hits A Chorus Line in 1986, and Evita in 1985.

The 28-member cast is being headed by Gaylea Byrne as Dorothy Brock, the impossible leading lady who fatefully breaks an ankle; and Jay Stuart as Julian Marsh, the once-great director desparate for a hit.

The role of Peggy Sawyer, the chorus girl who becomes an overnight Broadway star, is being played by Tia Riebling. Rick Qualls, Mary Ellen Ashley, and Art Ostrin are also featured int he cast.

The North Shore Music Theatre's season will continue with a two-week engagement by Mitzi Gaynor, August 24 through September 5.

To order tickets, or for more information, contact the North Shore Music Theatre box office, 62 Dunham Road, Beverly, MA 01915; 922-8500. The air-conditioned North Shore Music Theatre is easily accessible off route 128 at Exit 19.

Chazz McPherson to appear at Willow

L.E. Shuman Productions will present Charles Chazz McPherson for three nights only, Friday through Sunday, Aug. 14-16, at the Willow Jazz Club, 699 Broadway, Ball Square in Somerville.

Showtime nightly is at 9 and 11 p.m. and tickets are priced at $8.50 if purchased in advance and $10.50 at the door. Appearing with McPherson will be Donald Brown on piano, Tommy Campbell on drums, Paul Del Nero on bass, and (Sunday) Brue Gertz on bass.

Tickets are available at Strawberries (all locations); Out-of Town Tickets; Looney Tunes, 1106 Boylston St., Boston; and Stereo Jack's Records, 1704 Mass. Ave., Cambridge.

For further information call 277-0965 evenings and weekdays.

The music continues at Great Woods

Concerts by Echo & The Bunnymen and New Order, Tina Turner, Peter, Paul & Mary and Roger Waters are scheduled during the twelfth week at the Great Woods Summer Series.

Echo & The bunnymen and New Order perform at Great Woods on Tuesday evening, August 18. The Bunnymen are a European pop sensation. With the Bunnymen is New Order, another British band whose songs such as Blue Monday and Perfect Kiss have topped European and American dance charts.

Special guest this evening will be Gene Loves Jezebel. Tickets for this concert are priced at $19.50 and $17.50 for reserved seats and $14.50 for the lawn.

Tine Turner performs at Great Woods on Wednesday and Thrusday evenings, August 19 and 20. Special guest is Wang chung. Tickets for this concert are priced at $19.50 and $17.50 for reserved seats and $14.50 for the lawn.

Peter, Paul & Mary bring their songs of activism and hope on Friday evening, August 21. Tickets for this performance are priced at $18.50 and $16 for reserved seats and $13.50 for the lawn.

Singer/composer bass player Roger Waters performs on Saturday evening, August 22. Rogers has been a prolific force in pop music.

Besides the rides, Riverside Park features more than 30 video and skill games, and daily entertainment in the form of puppet shows, jugglers, and mimes. There is also a 1960s-style musical revue, Sock It To Me, and a magic show, Dr. Blood's Theater of Mystery.

During the season, there are modified stock car races at the Riverside Race Track every Saturday. The occasional Sunday program might feature a Demolition Derby or Enduro race. Call for the Sunday schedule.

If all this activity makes you hungry, the Park has more than 35 food stands. Besides traditional amusement park fare (hot popcorn, candy apples, and cotton candy), visitors may dine on Chinese egg rolls, fried chicken, or a baked potato with a special topping. For dessert, indulge in a giant chocolate chip cookie, ice cream, or home made fudge.

Riverside Park is open daily through Sept 7. Until Labor Day the Park is open Mon. - Thurs., 11 a.m. - 11 p.m.; and weekends, 11 a.m. - midnight. Labor Day hours are 11 a.m. - 10 p.m.

The Park is also open weekends from Sept. 11 - Sept. 27. Those hours are Fridays, 5 p.m. - midnight; Saturdays, 11 a.m. - 11 p.m.; and Sundays, 11 a.m. - 8 p.m.

Admission to Riverside Park for persons ages nine and up is $11.99 and includes all rides, shows, and attractions for the day. Children ages three to eight (or under 48" tall) pay $8.99. Youngsters under three are free. Group rates are available.

To reach Riverside Park, take the Massachusetts Turnpike to Exit 6. Follow I-291 west for 4.2 miles. Take I-91 south for 2.8 miles to the Agawam exit. Go over the bridge and bear right. Follow rotary to Route 57 west. Then take Route 159 south about three miles. For more information, call (413)786-9300.

RHODE ISLAND

Rocky Point Park

Named after a geographical landmark on Warwick Neck on Narragansett Bay, Rocky Point Park is one of the oldest amusement parks in the nation, dating from 1847. William Winslow, a Rhode Island steamship captain, is credited with building a ferry boat wharf to attract sightseers on the Bay, putting in Flying Horses (a carousel) and a Fandango (an early wooden ferris wheel), and constructing the first Shore Dinner Hall, a famous dinning spot.

Like Whalom Park, Rocky Point Park has also had its share of destruction. The park was levelled by a fire in 1883 and destroyed again by the Hurricane of '38.

Rocky Point Park Today

Currently encompassing 120 acres, the Park claims to have something for everyone. For adults and older children, there are two rollercoasters: The Cyclone and the Corkscrew Loop Coaster, the only one in New England. There is also The Log Flume and a new thrill ride, The Free Fall. The Park also has more traditional rides: Scrambler, Bumper Cars, Ferris Wheel, and Merry-Go-Round and a Kiddieland for the youngsters.

In addition, the Park feature continuous entertainment including street theater, puppet shows, magic and illusion shows, cabaret acts, and concerts every Thursday and Friday through Labor Day. There are also video and skill games, and a miniature golf course. If you want to know your future, visit the Palm Reader.

The Park also has eating facilities. Besides a wide range of food stands offering international fare, there are two beer gardens overlooking Narragansett Bay, a Shore Dining Hall, and the Cliff House Cocktail Lounge.

Rocky Point Park is open Sun. - Thurs., 11 a.m. - 10:30 p.m.; and Fri. and Sat., 11 a.m. - 11 p.m. Rides open at noon.

General admission is $1.50; senior citizens are free. All day ride tickets cost $8.95 for adults and $6.95 for children under 53 inches tall. Evening ride packages, which cost $6.95 for adults and children, run from 6 p.m. until closing, Monday through Thursday.

To reach Rocky Point Park, take Route 95 to Exit 10. Take Route 117 east to Rodky Point Avenue. For more information, call (401) 737-8000.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Canobie Lake Park

This year marks the 85th anniversary of Canobie Lake Park in Salem, New Hampshire. The Park began as a day-trip stop on the Salem Division of the Northeastern Railway Co., according to officials. Within a year, it became a popular resort, drawing crowds from the New England area.

Although the size of the Park and the number of rides has grown since 1902, the Park has maintained its tranquil lakeside setting with flower gardens, tree-lined promenades, and exciting entertainment facilities.

Canobie Lake Park Today

This park is listed as one of the 10 most beautiful parks in the United States in the 1987 Amusement Park Guidebook. Besides offering traditional rides for adults and children, the Park has several unusual ones: a 24-guage Steam Train, and authentic Paddlewheel Riverboat. A new ride, The Haunted Mine, is billed as a masterpiece of sight and sound effects and an experience that shouldn't be missed.

This year, there are four shows presented Tuesday through Sunday (That's Entertainment, Kickin' Up Country, ABRACADAZZLE, and Bird Brains). In addition, fireworks are presented on the lakefront every Saturday night.

There are also gift shops, games, video arcades, a swimming pool, and numerous food stands. An Italian eatery, the Portofino Restaurant, overlooks the lake.

General admission to the Park cost $5 per person, including River boat rides, Steam Train, shows, and Vertigo Theatre. An all-day ride pass costs $10 per person and includes gate admission. The evening ride pass costs $6 per person. Admission for children five years old and under is $5 per person, which includes all rides and shows. NOTE: some rides have height restrictions.

Canobie Lake Park is open daily from noon to 10 p.m., except Labor Day when the Park closes at 6 p.m.

To reach the Park take Route I-93 to Exit 2, Salem, New Hampshire. Bear right off the exit and turn left at the traffic lights. For more information, call (603) 893-3506.

New England Playworld

The property that was once Benson's Animal Farm on Route 111, Hudson, New Hampshire, begins making its own history this year as New England Playworld. Besides an amusement park with rides, games, food, Miniature Circus, model train exhibit, and gift shop, Playworld features 20 acres of zoo facilities with exhibits and information and ZooTalk presentations every day.

Although the zoo currently has about 600 animals, the number is expected to increase by as much as 150 by the end of the season. According to Mika Murmikko, general curator of the zoo facilities, there is a baby boom underway. New arrivals will include an Asian black buck antelope, African monkeys, and a North African sheep.

In addition, there is a large petting zoo where children can get hands-on experience with a camel, deer, llamas, ostrich, Andora and Pygmy goats, Suffolk and Yorkshire sheep, donkeys, and other friendly domestic animals.

New England Playworld is also the only park in the world with a license to use the Terrytoons characters. You remember the Terrytoons characters—Mighty Mouse, Heckle — Jeckle, Deputy Dawg, Oil Can Harry, Pearl Pureheart, Sad Cat, and a new addition, Polly. Besides appearing in costume around the park every day, the characters may be seen in a musical

What to know

Screwdriver, saw, fish scaler, nail file, tweezers, you name it, it's got it!

Astronauts got them for free and rich kids bought them with their allowances. They've climbed up K2 in the Himalayas with American mountaineers and gone to sea with explorer Jacques Cousteau.

President Lyndon Johnson gave away some 3,000 of them embellished with his signature and the presidential seal. President Ronald Reagan owns one. New York's Museum of Modern Art has one in its design collection. And, after nearly a century of good and faithful service, they are still handed out to members of the Swiss Army.

The red-handled, silver cross-embossed, multifunctional Swiss Army knife is used worldwide and is, despite a lack of advertising, the world's most popular knife — in fact, the world's most popular miniature tool kit. As manufactured by the Victorinox Cutlery Co. of Ibach-Schwyz, Switzerland, there are more than 40 different models, each a smoothly-working, multi-purpose marvel of the knife-maker's art.

The practical, tool-sprouting knives, toted by Swiss citizen-soldiers have been sold in the United States since 1915. But the Swiss Army knife did not really gain great popularity in the United States until after World War II. Returning GIs, who'd discovered the multi-use cutlery in Europe, began to buy them, boosting sales.

When the backpacking, camping craze started in erly '70s, U.S. sales of the knives skyrocketed. The authentic Swissmade knives are now sold by more than 12,000 retailers nationwide, from Maine's giant L.L. Bean emporium to little backroad gun-and-tackle shops.

It all began in 1884 when Charles Elsener, a master cutler, came up with something new in pocketknives. Until Elsener's bright idea, pocketknives had a single spring to control the opening and closing of one or two blades.

Elsener discovered a way to make one blade operate three blades, then added another spring to up the total to six — and that was just the beginning. He also found a way to operate blades or implements from both ends of the knife, thus making it possible to pack an incredible number of implements and blades into the handle.

Charles and Victoria Elsener brought these cutting innovations to the Swiss government which, in 1891, awarded their little cutlery company a contract to supply the Swiss Army with soldiers' knives. Until that time, the Swiss had relied on Germany for its military cutlery, and now took a flag waving pride in the new company's Swiss Army output.

It's been said that Elsener's decision to inlay a Swiss cross in the handle of each knife was in honor of the patriotic achievement. Whatever its origin, the white cross (often copied by cheap forgers) has become one of knifedom's most distinctive and best-known logos.

Next, Elsener developed the elegant officer's knife, patented on June 12, 1897. The revolutionary multipurpose knife soon became internationally popular because of its high quality, versatility and slick design.

Obviously, Elsener's knives still cut it since Victorinox today supplies the Swiss Army, an association that's almost 1 century old. In fact, in an ironic turnabout, the company now supplies knives to the army of West Germany as well.

But the largest share of Victorinox's annual output of about 4 million knives are exports to more than 100 countries, with the United States, its best customer, accounting for about 40 percent of the total production. Victorinox's chief rival, Wenger, also a Swiss firm, sells a respectable number of well made knives worldwide. Victorinox is known as the "Original Swiss Army Knife, Wenger as the "Genuine Swiss Army Knife." It is Wenger, incidentally, that makes the Swiss Army knives — emblazoned with a large L.L. Bean.

Typically, Victorinox Swiss Army knives carry anywhere from a couple of slick and useful little tools to a whole pocketful, in addition to one or more blades of drop-forged stainless steel. (If the shank of the large blade is marked VICTORINOX then you have the original.) Elsinid plastic handles are tough, warp-proof, acid- and solvent-resistant. Features include anodized springs and wide choice of blades, tools and instruments.

There is, for example, the compact Bartender/Waiter ($11.95) with large blade, screwdriver/cap lifter and corkscrew. At the top of the line is the Champion ($46.95), largest and most complete of Victorinox Swiss Army knives,with 24 different features — large blade, small blade, corkscrew, can opener with small screwdriver, cap lifter with large screwdriver, wire stripper, reamer, scissors, Phillips screwdriver, magnifying glass, wood saw, fish scaler, hook disgorger, ruler, nail file, metal file, nail cleaner, metal saw, fine screwdriver, key ring, tweezers, and toothpick.

Oh, yes, there also is the Swiss Champion, which costs more than $60 and has all the features of the Champion, plus such additional got-to-have niceties as an adjustable wrench and a ballpoint pen.

There are plenty of others, including New Pocket Pal ($6.95), Sturdy boy ($11.50), Classic ($11.95), Cadet ($12.50), Pioneer ($14.50), Spartan ($14.95), Tinker ($15.95), Farmer ($17.95), Camper ($19.95), Executive ($22.95), Golfer ($23.95), Traveler ($23.95), Climber/Backpacker ($24.50), Huntsman ($27.95), Fisherman ($28.95), Huntsman ($27.95), Explorer ($30.95), Mountaineer ($31.95), Grand Prix ($32.95) and Craftsman ($41.50).

The knife issued to members of Switzerland's armed forces is the Soldier, a nofrills model with an anodized gray aluminum handle, one blade, can opener, cap lifter, a reamer and two screwdrivers.

Actually, Victorinox Swiss Army knives come with something other than the familiar Swiss red handles. Some of the world's favorite knives are available with stainless-steel handles, as well a sin such other colors as black, white, gray, blue and green. The green handles may sport a shamrock in place of the time honored Swiss cross, one model flaunts the official Boy Scout emblem, and others carry the Star of David. And for the use-the-credit-card price, there are ultra nice knife handles of stag or mother-of-pearl.

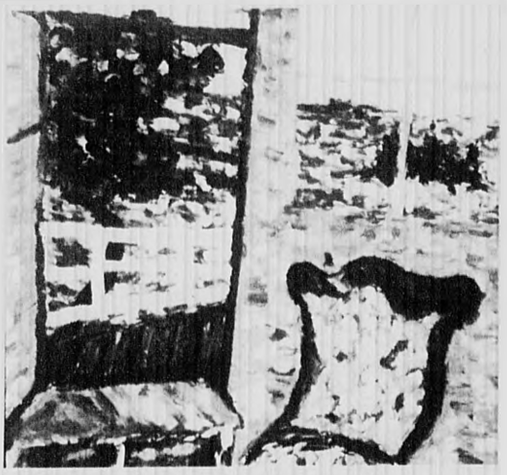
What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day



Priscilla Hayes's acrylic on paper, Front Room, is one of her bold compositions of observed scenes. The Belmont artist is a member of Roseland Center for Art-Making in Watertown.

The Roseland difference

Roseland Center for Art-Making at 103 Morse Street in Watertown is not quite like any other art community in the Boston area.

With an emphasis on encouraging and nurturing the unique expressive abilities of each individual, the Center holds seminars in "play," workshops in self directed exploration of materials, and figure drawing sessions of "persons being themselves," rather than academically posed models. These and a variety of other purposeful but loosely structured activities take place in the large community studio space, where a colorful scattering of children's building blocks on the floor is as important as a painting-in-progress tacked to the wall.

Such are only a few of the characteristics that distinguish Roseland from other art centers in which artists close their studio doors behind them, or more communicative groups whose work shares certain conventions of style or aspects of content. In an increasingly commodity-oriented art world, consumers' interest in the finished product has brought marketing into the studio and its presence there looms large. Roseland, however, stands firm in its commitment to the significance of process in making art over the marketable commodities that process may or may not produce.

"Roseland is really about people finding their way to approach their own visions, so we have no courses that are instructional in the sense that color or perspective or other formal visual language is taught," explains member Nancy Schieffelin. "There's a lot of communication, though, and members tune in to one anothers' sensibilities."

This summer the public has had the opportunity to see occasions where shared sensibilities as well as distinctly individual expression come through in the work of members and studio participants. The third of three Roseland group exhibitions is on view at 290 Concord Avenue, Cambridge.

If there is one thread that ties the group's work together, it is a singular lack of pretense, frequently resulting — much as it does in the art of children — in expression of spontaneity and genuineness. Often, as in the works of Mary McLane, it is impossible to detect influence by other artists, or references to other visual art. McLane's dark, brushy acrylic paintings seem to be composed to the beat of an internal rhythm that has more to do with the artist's own sense of herself and her experiences than it does other painting.

The subjects of McLane's work appear to have chosen themselves for expression, and the artist has channeled her own energies into their expressive force. A picture of a shallow, tilted landscape as foreground to the darkened facade of a house is suddenly interrupted by a burst of warm, light-filled ochre. The rectangular surprise is like a huge windowed cross section of the house, revealing inside an animal edly cozy and happy couple on the bench of a grand piano, playing and singing away. The fresh, guileless spirit of this small painting and its memorable imagery characterizes the best in the group's work.

Such vitality and originality assert themselves over and again: in Donna Moseman's totem-like sculpture, in Virginia Simpson-Magruder's vivid collaged dream fragments, in Jack Freeman's intensely observed portraits and still lifes, and in Deborah Keeley's lively fat swirls of transparent color. Much of the sculpture has an unself-conscious humor. Consistent with the attitude that play is essential to creativity, Daisy Oakley's ceramic figures and Joanne Agrillo's big wide-mouthed papier mache flowers and fish were surely as much fun to make as they are to view!

The work of 16 Roseland artists on exhibition through Aug. 23 may be viewed 5 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, 2 to 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday and 1 to 4 p.m. weekends. The Center also invites visitors to the Watertown studios, where work exhibited in the first two of the summer shows may be seen. Call 354-0304 or 923-4520.

Gallery will be missed

The Cambridge location of Roseland's summer exhibitions has been for the past eight years Van Buren/Brazelton/Cutting Gallery, which announced last week its intentions of closing Sept. 1. We bid the gallery a sad, fond farewell. Van Buren, Brazelton and Cutting have been among the most accessible, gracious, enthusiastic gallery owners/directors in the area. They have believed in the artists they've exhibited and have valued and supported those artists work and struggle and vision.

Avner's act appeals to kids

discover that overnight he or she had turned into a cockroach? To discover how such an odd predicament might turn out, don't miss The Young Company's fifth production of the season, Dancing On The Ceiling.

As with many of The Young Company's productions, Dancing On The Ceiling is an original children's musical created and directed by Young Company artistic director, Austin Tichenor.

An upbeat twentieth-century fairy tale, this production revolves around the character Gregor, who wakes up one morning to discover that by a freak of nature he has been turned into a bug. This metamorphic tale is a gripping story of family communication that reflects the thoughts and feelings many children share concerning their self image.

Especially fitting for children ages " and up, Dancing On The ceiling is a funny, lighthearted play that plays in Milford, NH at the American Stage Festival on Thursday and Friday, Aug. 13 and 14, at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Tickets are $3 each and are available at the ASF box office located on Route 13 North in Milford or by calling the box office at (603)673-6715.

Avner is magic

Trinity Summer Rep presents the world renowned mime-clown-performance artist Avner the Eccentric August 18 through 30 in the Downstairs Theatre.

Avner the Eccentric is Avner Eisenberg, whose solo show was one of Broadway's biggest hits in 1984. In his one-man extravaganza at Trinity Rep, Avner the Eccentric beautifully combines mime, acrobatics, juggling, slack rope walking, magic, and audience-participation games that are perfectly suited for the entire family. Children and adults will be entranced by his magical expertise and pure sense of comedy.

Avner is also well known for portraying the Jewel in the hit motion picture, The Jewel of the Nile.

Avner the Eccentric's performances are Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m., Saturday at 5 and 9 p.m., and Sunday at 2 p.m.

Ticket prices range from $16 to $24, with special prices for Senior Citizens, Children, and Student Rush. Group discounts up to 50% for groups of twenty or more are available.

For reservations and ticket information, please call the Box Office at (401)351-4242. The theatre is located at 201 Washington st. in downtown Providence, RI 02903.

The John Renbourn Group appears in concert for two shows at 6:30 and 9:30, Aug. 21, the Hasty Pudding Theatre, 12 Holyoke St., Cambridge. Tickets are $10.50 in advance, $12 at the door. Call 491-8519.

EDUCATION

Put education on career path

By CHERYL GERMAN

It is a lonely task, job-seeking, being the outsider looking in. It means all those elevators. All those doors that seem to open on closed faces.

Yet Americans typically switch jobs once every three years after age 35 and change careers three to five times during their lives, estimates career specialist Richard Bolles. According to figures released by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, 6,297,000 unemployed Americans over the age of 16 were out looking for jobs this May, whether because they had lost or left former jobs, or were entering or re-entering the labor force.

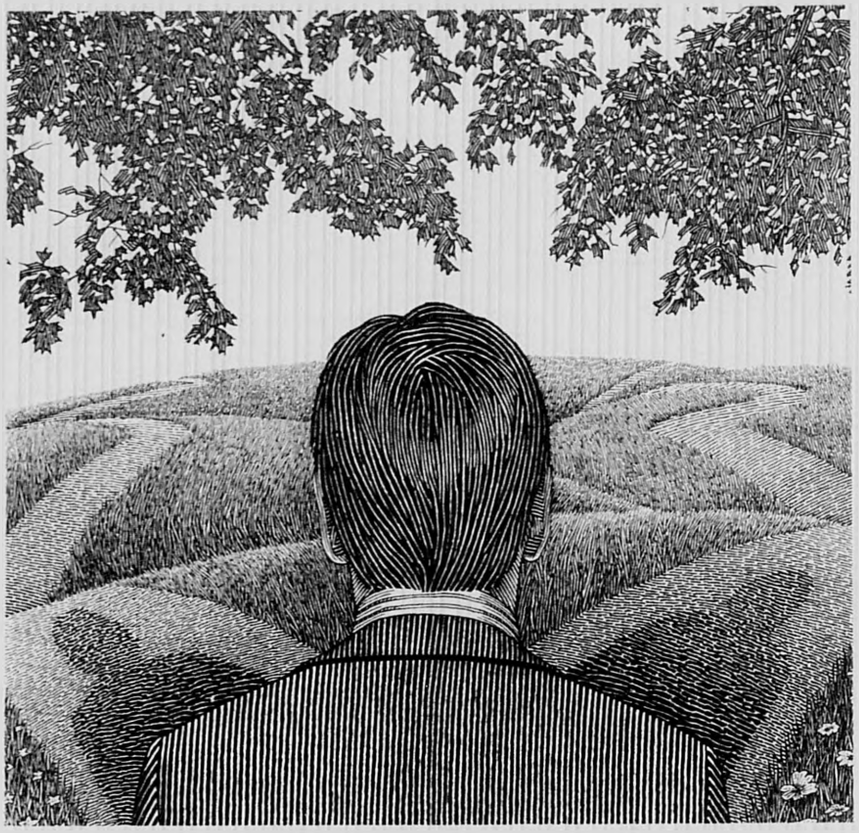
That's a lot of resumes, and the figure doesn't even include all those lunchtime want-ad readers who conduct the hunt from the security of other jobs.

In the wake of the Industrial Revolution, Karl Marx saw human lives consumed by increasingly tedious and deadening labor, and he predicted that capitalism would become insufferable because it alienates man from the products of his own hands and mind, robbing him of creative, self-fulfilling work. Here he seems to have underestimated the willingness of human beings to write and rewrite resumes.

By some professional estimates, as many as 80 percent of Americans are unhappy with their jobs but in unprecedented numbers we are also trying to do something about it.

Of the 33,500 non-agricultural jobs created in the Boston area last year, doubtless a share were in the field of career counsulting. Careers are the issue for the '80s and '90s, Joyce Picard of Newton's Career Counseling Associates says. "It's a timely issue all over the country," agreed Barbara Hyle, a Cambridge-based career consultant. People are changing careers much more than ever in the past," she continued. "Company loyalty is down. There's a different perception of the corporate culture."

Since career counseling can be very expensive, job seekers are well advised to think carefully about what services they really need before investing in guidance in their quests. A good place to start is the practical manual that has become a classic in this field, "What Color is Your Parachute?" by Richard Bolles.



Bolles recommends that the job-seeker's first resource should be the books, pamphlets and other printed matter on job hunting and job leads that are available in public libraries. After that, the next stop is free professional advice.

Job hunters should consider paying for career services only after making a significant effort on their own, Bolles advises, and he urges prospective clients of consulting services to visit at least three services in person before deciding on a consultant.

Floy Stryker of the Wellesley College career services office remarked that they have often seen resumes that they "intensely disliked" produced by professional resume services.

At Tufts University, the associate director of career services, Kerry Santry, cautions against organizations that "ask you to plunk a couple thousand down up front." Instead, she recommends trying services that allow clients to sign up for one or two sessions at a time.

Actually,, the college- and university-based career counselors probably know more about the future of the American career ethic than the fee-for-service consultants, since the new graduates, the next generation of job-holders, tend not to show up in consultants' offices, according to several of the area's consultants.

Matha Leape, director of the office of career services at Harvard University, reported that she and her staff are beginning to notice an increased interest in "public service careers and secondary and college teaching" among current Harvard students. Counselors at Tufts and Wellesley say they see suggestions of the same trend.

No doubt the availability of free guidance through their schools is part of what deters recent graduates from hiring career consultants. But it is also true that the deepest career anxieties are often associated with later passages of life.

For those who find themselves stalled in a career track or a job search, continuing education and career guidance are readily available in the Boston area and come in a wide variety of forums and settings.

Job aspirants can receive professional counseling in city or suburb, home or office, to classical music, or in the quiet of a crowded little room with a pale green piano seeming to promise harmonies. They can look out on spires and sails from downtown towers; they can sit under the gables on upper stories of private schools, or in plush seminar rooms with fish bowls full of buttons that read "I'm a Thinker," "I'm a Feeler," "I'm an Intuiter." Some counselors see their role as ministerial. Others [illegible] think of themselves as coaches.

Dr. Arthur Fultz of Counseling Resources Center Inc. in Winchester is the counselor with the palm and piano. As the hymnal resting on the piano hints, he is also a [illegible] and an ordained minister. He himself has changed careers many times, he said, "always with the increasing purpose to be of service to people."

At 87, he is still a maverick, a man who believes in listening to the inner not outer authorities. He contrasts his approach to career counseling with that of some of his Boston-area colleagues, who seem to him often to shy away from the broader issues and spiritual dimensions inovlved in career planning.

Fultz uses aptitude testing and a computer program keyed to some 45,000 careers to help his clients make career decisions. But he believes in treating the whole person, rather than isolating a specific issue such as career change or job stress.

As he sees it, the main problem is to encourage people to believe in themselves, in "the God-given something we call being." It doesn't take long in his presence to appreciate that he has an unusually keen vision of what he considers the central core of meaning in every individual's life.

Within each human life is a special destiny implicit from the beginning, he explained, a plan for growth and fulfillment which only needs to be uncovered, recognized and followed. However patchwork an individual's career has been, whatever changes time or suffering may seem to have brought, Fultz sees the central core of being within each of us as "whole, undamaged, knowledgeable."

"I'm apt to call it 'holy'," he said with a smile, then justified his use of that word by explaining its kinship to the Old English word "hal" which means "total," uninjured."

He does not expect counseling to change people at this profound level, since he considers their essential identity to be God-given and unchanging, but only to help them change some of the interpretations they make of the things they perceive. The meaning can be changed; you can't be changed, he told me, with a piercing look.

inspired, for the moment, an unfamiliarly vivid sense of present existence.

The emblem of the Counseling Resource Center is the phoenix, the mythical Arabian bird that dies in fire and rises again from its ashes, and Fultz considers it a fitting expression of his philosophy. For him, it represents "the burning idea" that something good can come out of past suffering and past experience. He urges people depressed about their work to use their present skills as a foundation to build on. "Don't dump everything you've experienced," he advises them, and points out, "there's something to be said for NOT changing careers."

As a "fellow explorer" with his clients, he is willing to "do anything to help a person find his way appropriately," Fultz said. This may even include financial assistance. When a depressed and unemployed pipe fitter came to him at a loss for ways to make the child-support payments to his ex-wife, Fultz took out a bank loan and helped him get the training and equipment to begin a new career in wall-printing. An attractive example of the man's new skills ornaments Fultz's office wall. "I've never lost a penny," he said.

Needless to say, most career counselors do not invest in their clients. The Human Engineering Laboratory downtown tests "inborn natural abilities" in 20 different tests in two sessions lasting a half day each, then explains patterns of highs and lows in a summary session. Young people in particular find this service useful, a spokeswoman explained, but the laboratory, with its scientific-sounding name, actually does no career counseling.

Career consultant Barbara Hyle of Cambridge focuses her counseling very closely on career issues and finds that some people feel more comfortable with career guidance that is not psychologically probing. "People need to think about themselves and who they are," she said, but explained that her questions "are really not very deep." Most of her clients are already quite in tune to themselves, she remarked.

Hyle's background is not in clinical psychology. She worked for the federal government in management in Europe and the Orient, as women's program manager responsible for "career development issues" of civilian women working for the Department of the Army. Then she returned to school and in 1982 earned a master's degree in human resource management.

Most of her clients are college graduates, 27 to 40 years of age, who are currently employed and making from $20,000 to $40,000 a year. She offers them a basic program of five appointments of one hour each, with exercises to be completed at home for discussion in the next session.

In the early sessions, Hyle helps job seekers identify 15 to 25 parameters of the job they are looking for. Being able to convey effectively to an employer that there is a "real match between the company and you" is crucial to success in interviewing for jobs, she suggested. She also stressed that job-seekers tend to feel more in control when they have a clear idea of what they want. "I'm big on people feeling in control of the job search and career change," she explained with a laugh.

She asks her clients to consider what transferable skills they want to be using in a new job; what kinds of people, environment, salary and responsibilities they are looking for.

whether they want to be involved with a product or a service; what they would like the values and goals of the organization they work for to be.

Having narrowed the focus of the search to a well defined career goal, Hyle uses the remaining sessions to tackle questions about personal marketing, gaining information, making contacts and networking.

Richard Gindel, senior vice president at Drake Beam Morin Inc., works with a somewhat different clinetele from Hyle's. According to Gindel, Drake Beam Morin is the world's largest management consulting firm and has provided services to 80 percent of the Fortune 500 companies.

The average age of his firm's clients is 43 years, average base salary is $64,719, and 89 percent are males.

The majority come from a background of general management, finance or marketing and sales. The average time to a new job after entering the program is four months, and 70 percent increase their salaries in their new jobs, according to the company's statistics.

Nationally, Drake Beam Morin clients change careers as well as jobs in only five percent of cases, Gindel said, but he believes the percentage of career changers is higher in New England. The Boston marketplace has an entrepreneurial spirit that meakes it "a fertile ground for career change," he suggested.

Unlike Hyle, Gindel works exclusively with clients referred through companies, usually employees who are being "separated" from their companies because of reorganizations, mergers and cutbacks.

Do presidents of corporations need resumes like the rest of us when they go out on the job market?

Absolutely, says Gingel. "The farther you move up the job pyramid, the more important your resume becomes," according to "Parting Company," a book on surviving a job loss co-authored by his company's chairman and president and published by their parent company, Harcourt Brace Jovanovich.

"By far the largest part of what we do is outplacement counseling," Gindel continued. The term refers to counseling during those involuntary job changes that used to be called, in simpler times, getting fired.

As Gindel defined it, outplacement counseling often means working with people who have been traumatized by receiving the news that they have lost their jobs, people who may be feeling shocked and betrayed.

Drake Bean Morin gives clients a battery of vocational and psychological tests, or "instruments," as Gindel prefers to call them, to help the new job-seekers assess themselves and their career goals.

After self-assessment, the next phase is the development of a self-marketing strategy including resumes, cover letters and new interview skills practiced with the aid of audio and video tapes. Gindel even advises on details of clothes and body language, he said.

As an additional service, the company's "job-lead bank" gives 12 to 15 specific job leads within 24 hours of the time a request is made, according to Gindel.

A tall, gray-eyed, soft-spoken man, he began his own career quest as an English teacher. Next he became a sales representative, then an employment manager and eventually director of organization development and executive resources at Sperry and Hutchinson, where he had his first taste of involuntary job separation when Sperry and Hutchinson was bought out in 1981.

Even after eight months of working to facilitate the merger, he said, the final notification of his own job loss "still felt like a fist hitting the stomach."

But he likes the new job he found with Drake Beam Morin. "I would even go so far as to call it ministerial," Gindel observed, "because you are truly ministering to people in a time of trouble, a time of trauma and a time of change in their lives."

Like Gindel, Joyce Pickard of Career Counseling Associates in Newton made several career changes herself before she became a consultant on making them.

"I drifted into career counseling," she said, looking out from a profusion of leafy potted plants to survey the controlled chaos of her newly relocated office in the upper stories of the Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart.

Pickard's first career was in physical therapy. Eventually she returned to school for a master's degree in counseling and has since become certified as a career counselor.

Career Counseling Associates provides a full range of career services, but what makes it distinctive is its adult internship program. "We are the only private service in the greater Boston area to offer an internship service to the adult," said Picard.

In this respect, she is carrying on work that she did as director of field placement at Continuum, a state-licensed school for adult career education that closed last July.

Drawing on contacts built up during Continuum's 10 years of operation, Picard places interns in positions that allow them to gain the "experience component to support their resumes," she explained.

Often the clients she sees have had "fragmented experiences in the working world and have never been on a career track. But when they focus their career goals and reconcile those goals with the realities of the world of work, Picard finds that they usually do well. "They really take off and fly."

Americans value risk taking more highly than workers in many other cultures, Emeritus Professor of Psychology Donald E. Super reported in 1984 on the basis of an international Work Importance Study. Job switching and career restlessness may be an expression of our culture or national character.

Some vocational experts also point out that the generation now coming to career maturity, the group Thomas Wolfe called the "me generation," grew up in economic prosperity and its members tend to have a greater need for self-fulfillment and self-expression in work than their parents did. But whatever the reasons, Americans are taking more risks to find rewarding careers and changing jobs more often in spite of the traumas of the hunt. And isn't it worth it, after all? For most of us, the job at which we spend seven or eight hours and upward a day can play a significant part in making our lives satisfying.

Among career specialists, several propositions about the art of finding gainful employment win virtually universal acceptance. The first is that job-seeking is just plain hard work, however you go about it.

The second is that you need to formulate a very clear idea of the job you want. Contrary to the popular wisdom, you can't expect to succeed by repackaging yourself like days-old meat in hopes of cleverly squeezing into every potential job opening, according to the experts. There really are jobs out there that suit you and you need to know them when you run across them. They're the ones you'll have the best chance of getting, and the most reason to want to keep.

And if you should change your mind, say after one-and-a-half years on the job if you're under 35, or after three years if you're over that age? Well then, you are within your statistical rights to take to the hunt again.

Footing the bill for education

ALBERT J. BERNAZANI

Owning a home and car, taking a vacation and saving for retirement every year are some financial goals most Americans hope to achieve. There is another goal, however, that is of particular importance to parents: the ability to pay for their children's college educations.

Unfortunately, the end of soaring college costs seems nowhere in sight. Between 1980 and 1984, tuition costs rose approximately 56 percent vs. only 26 percent for household incomes, and they are widely expected to continue to leap at a seven percent annual rate the rest of the century.

This means a year of college costing $10,000 in 1987 could cost above $20,000 in 1997. Projections like these have caused even the most comfortable families to wonder how they will possibly pay these enormous bills without taking second mortgages on their homes or downgrading the quality of their lifestyles.

Families can no longer count on outside assistance. Financial aid is heavily relied on by many middle class families to finance their children's educations, but competition for aid like loans and college scholarships is getting tougher. The federal government has already started to cut back student aid, including student loans, to meet the budget reduction requirements of the Gramm-Rudman Act.

Now it is trying to channel more of the remaining funds to lower-income families, so middle income students are receiving even less. Since two out of three dollars of all student aid—over $14 billion—is doled out by the federal government, middle class families may be seriously affected.

Tax Reform Act of 1986

Another new stumbling block for parents trying to save for their children's education appears in the Tax Reform Act of 1986. Parents used to be able to save money for college in Clifford Trusts or custodial accounts and also get a tax break, because income generated by assets in the accounts are taxed at the child's (or the trust's) lower rate.

Today tax reform calls for the elimination of many conditions that allow the transfer of taxes on education funds from parents to their children.

The new law will tax any unearned income over the first $1,000 at the parent's rate, presumably 28 percent in many cases if the child is under age 14. In addition, the final revision of the new tax law disallows gifts from grandparents to be taxed at the child's rate, presumably 15 percent for children under 14.

Under tax reform for educational funding, the old rules for transferring taxes to the child's rate will be retained for children 14 or older. However, a child's personal exemption can no longer be double counted by both parent and child in tax calculations. Therefore, if a parent claims the exemption, the child will have to pay more in taxes to compensate.

"Parents need to be more self-reliant and depend less on outside resources if they wish to guarantee their children a college education," according to Scott Davidson, second vice president and manager of the educational planning program at the investment firm of Smith Barney. "The best time for parents to begin setting aside funds for their children's education is while their children are still young.

The CURRY COLLEGE Difference:
Accessible Education

Quality education began at Curry in 1879. Today, this learning environment provides men and women with exciting options in the liberal arts and professional studies. Curry College is committed to offering students the educational foundation needed for the future. Making quality education accessible is the real Curry difference.

Accessibility to an individualized field of study is one part of the Curry difference. Here you have the choice of a traditionally structured or a unique, individually designed major. You may choose programs that include Biology, Communication, Education, English, Fine Arts, Management, Nursing, Politics and History, Psychology, Sociology, and more. The College also addresses individualized learning needs by offering academic support services to all students.

Accessibility to faculty members at this small, independent, four-year, liberal arts College provides you with individualized learning opportunities and supportive faculty contact. Full-time faculty also serve as academic advisors, well-qualified to help you select appropriate courses and to counsel you on your progress.

Accessibility to opportunities is here in this ideal setting for learning. Curry College's 120 acre wooded, landscaped campus is complete with jogging trails, tennis courts, and athletic fields. Nearby Boston offers a world of music, art, drama, sports and field experience learning opportunities. A short drive away, Cape Cod completes this unparalleled living and learning environment.

If you plan to finance your child's education, you will want to protect your principal and maximize return for your educational funding. Remember you want the greatest return possible, but without taking excessive risks with your principal.

Zero Coupon Bonds

One of the many popular investment vehicles you can choose to finance your children's educations with are zero coupon bonds. These bonds are purchased at a deep discount from face value. They are then redeemed at face value ($1,000) at maturity. Instead of receiving current interest on your bonds, interest accrues in the form of appreciation.

Note that even though this interest is not received, it is treated as ordinary income for federal income tax purposes every year the securities are held. This interest can be quite substantial at time of maturity with your investment being worth several times its original value.

For example, a bond bought for $285.37 this year with a maturity of 15 years will pay out $1,000 in 2002 (a yield of 8.25 percent).

There are three varieties of zero coupon bonds to choose from depending upon your tax situation: treasury zeros (such as STRIPs—Separate Trading of Registered Interest and Principal of Securities or CATS—Certificates of Accrual on Treasury Securities), corporate zeros and municipal zero coupon bonds. These innovative instruments can be bought at the birth of each child and timed to mature during each of the child's four college years. Other appealing features include guaranteed return, no reinvestment risk and marketability.

Mutual Funds

Mutual funds are another investment vehicle popular with investors for educational planning. These funds offer a highly diversified and professionally managed portfolio of securities. They are ideal for investors who lack the time, expertise or inclination to undertake the daily analysis and decision-making involved in managing their own investments.

Mutual funds seek returns either through current income (dividends), capital appreciation (capital gains or an increase in value of the original investment); or a combination of both. Aggressive growth, balanced, high yield, specialty and government securities funds are just a few of the different types of mutual funds available. You can request a prospectus that explains the types of funds and how their assets are invested.

Time is your most precious resource; so identify your financial needs now, establish a planning strategy and begin contributing to your child's funds as early as possible.

Explore a new career with a tax course

Thousands of people, including many older Americans, take the first step toward a second career with the H&R Block Income Tax Course and earn money as income-tax preparers.

H&R Block, ther largest income-tax preparation firm for over 30 years, is offering a basic income-tax course starting the week of Sept. 8 with morning, evening and weekend classes available.

The course is ideal training for mature individuals who want to continue working after retirement or who are retired and want to go back to work. Classes are held over a 14-week period. An experienced Block instructor will guide students through various phases of personal income-tax preparation. Classwork will include discussion, practice problems and actual experience preparing individual tax returns.

Qaulified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many of Block's employees find the flexible hours a plus. However, Block us under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

Maine Oceanfront

ONE HOUR above Bar Harbor lies perhaps the most spectacular deep-water oceanfront property available in Maine. Sweeping bluffs with pink granite, hidden coves, and isolated beaches. My wife and I are selling a few lots now to help recoupe the cost of building a four mile private road into the property. With the addition of a full time caretakers cottage at the entrance, the only thing to break the silence will be the seals playing on the rocks, a pair of eagles overhead, or the moose we call Bullwinkle. CAR CARE CORNER
By Dan Hogan, Service Manager

Never use a metal or other stiff-bristled brush to scrub your vinyl roof. Though the vinyl is rugged, it still is only a relatively thin sheet stretched over the steel top of the car. Use a soft brush dipped in mild soupsuds. Rinse with clear water to remove all soap. For stubborn stains or streaks use a commercial vinyl-roof cleaner. For discolorations, use a vinyl restorer (available from your dealer or an auto-supply store) the same color as your roof. Wash vinyl upholstery with a mixture of mild household detergent and warm water. Rinse off with a cloth dampened with lukewarm water.

The technicians at PETER FULLER OLDS are ASE certified. We keep a computerized history of all cars serviced here to notify you of preventative maintenance. Open 8-5. Tel. 924-8100. M/C, Visa & A/E accepted. We are located within walking distance to public transportation. Come to PETER FULLER OLDS, Watertown Sq. "Olds National Service Award Winner."

Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit — alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts — is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month 6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

*Ask for Autobahn or Audi Limited Warranty at our Parts Department.

Barbaro sentenced to 26 months

Ex-MDC officer found guilty of filing false claims, larceny

By WADE ROUSH
Special to the Star

Suspended MDC Police officer Anthony Barbaro of Winchester was sentenced in Middlesex Superior Court last Tuesday to 26 months at Billerica House of Correction. Barbaro was one of 23 people indicted last November in an alleged $1+ million conspiracy to file bogus insurance claims with the National Grange Insurance Company of New Hampshire.

The court will also force Barbaro to repay $11,468 in claims he received after a Woburn house he owns was allegedly damaged in a March 1984 storm, and he faces a suspended 3 to 5-year sentence at the state's Cedar Junction prison.

Barbaro, 50, of Irving Street, was sentenced on two counts of filing false claims and two counts of larceny, and is scheduled to go to jail Sept. 14. A planned appeal of the case hinges on whether Judge Hiller Zobel, who presided over Barbaro's trial and the sentencing, grants a further stay.

Marie Kauler, a Medford woman whose mother's house Barbaro said he repaired after the same storm, will have to repay $11,424 in claims that the Middlesex District Attorney's office said were also specious. Kauler received a similar 3 to 5 year suspended sentence and must perform 500 hours of community service. If Kauler defaults on the repayment, Barbaro will be responsible for the entire $22,891.

Assistant District Attorney Ed Rapacki said Barbaro and Kauler conspired with insurance adjusters to submit claims for damages to both houses that never occurred. An adjuster admitted during the trial that he had agreed to submit claims to the National Grange without appraising the alleged damage.

Charges of conspiracy, which could not be tried at the same time as the larceny and fraud charges, still stand against Barbaro.

"The theory is that if you involve yourself in a crime you are responsible for making the victim whole," Rapacki said of the restitution Barbaro and Kauler must make to the National Grange.

But Barbaro, a 17-year MDC Police veteran and a self-employed mason, maintains that the damage to the both properties was legitimate. He called the sentence unjust. "I'm certainly not happy with it," he said. "What I was found guilty of was larceny over $100, but because of the press accounts I've been linked with this multi million dollar scheme. Why the hell didn't they call it what it was?"

Barbaro said Probation Department officials recommended that his sentence be limited to probation. Judge Zobel "treated me even more severely than the prosecutors recommended." He was "biased, may be because I fought it," Barbaro said.

Prosecutors asked Barbaro to corroborate evidence against others indicted in the case, he said, but he had no evidence to give. "They are punishing me because I am a cop and because I wouldn't cooperate," he said.

If a stay is not granted, Barbaro will serve a minimum of 13 months at Billerica. He has been on suspension.

Select chair says board belongs in boardroom

By ROGER L. KAY
Star Editor

Selectmen Chairman Judith Muggia was so angry about the behavior of some of her fellow selectmen that she had to enter her feelings into the public record.

At last Monday night's selectmen's meeting, Muggia reprimanded Selectmen Frank Sopper and Mark Lombardi for their alleged behavior in connection with an incident in front of Lombardi's Thompson Street real estate office Aug. 5.

On that date, Francesco Ianno, whose son had a permit to sandblast the Locatelli Building, allegedly engaged in an argument with Lombardi over the selectman's actions to halt the job.

Lombardi found the younger Ianno "wet blasting" the building, a process that allows chemicals and paint to run into the sewer system and eventually the Aberjona River. Upon making this discovery, Lombardi

DPW to take steps to ameliorate smelly compost at station

By ROGER L. KAY
Star Editor

The amount of odor controlling chemical sprayed on the compost at the transfer station will be doubled, according to D.P.W. Director Dominic Serratore.

Serratore made the promise of renewed efforts to control the nuisance in response to demands by the Board of Selectmen for action.

At Monday's selectmen's meeting, Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer and Serratore explained the nature of the problem.

"Since 1977, the area west of the transfer station has been utilized for the collection of leaves, grass clippings and other compostable material," Serratore noted in a memo.

Fair Housing Committee struggles along undermanned and under gun

By ROGER L. KAY
Star Editor

The Fair Housing Committee is understaffed and not fulfilling its principal functions, according to the selectmen.

At last Monday's board meeting, Roger Berman, the committee's chairman, presented his group's 1987 plan, and the board found it wanting.

Berman told selectmen that his board has three vacancies at this time.

After an initial statement in which Berman explained that the report was "presented for editorial comment" to the board, the selectmen began to pick it apart.

Selectman Thomas Schmitt wanted to know what would happen with the document after it had been discussed.

Berman said that once the board approved and accepted the report, it would be sent on the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination (MCAD), where it would be reviewed with the reports of 350 other communities in the state.

He said the filing would fulfill the town's "statutory requirements."

Schmitt wanted to know whether, in the future, the report could be put on a word processor to facilitate its yearly updating. Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer said it could.

Berman said that his committee had "pulled back" from a visible role in town, largely because other groups were taking the lead. In addition to the Winchester Housing Authority, the Low and Moderate Income Housing Study Committee was also involved in the town's housing issues.

There are "enough chefs," Berman said.

"By statute, you are charged with doing the things a lot of these other committees are doing," Selectman Robert Deering said. He asked whether that put the town out of compliance with state regulations.

Berman explained that historically the town was not moving quickly enough on providing sufficient low and moderate income housing, and the state "put a gun to our head."

People got involved in specific areas of implementation as a response, he said, and the Fair Housing Committee has a "wider charge."

That charge is to, among other things, mediate disputes related to the fair distribution of subsidized housing, but "we've never had a complaint," he said.

"We could jump into the breach, but there isn't any breach right now," he further commented.

Selectman Mark Lombardi

New tenant for Dover Grille site expected soon

The site of the former Dover Grille may soon become the location of another restaurant.

Joe Rogers of Restaurant Brokers of America says he has a number of interested clients considering leasing the space. His company has been retained by the owner of the former Dover Grille to dispose of the remaining assets of the restaurant.

The Dover Grille was closed by the Internal Revenue Service May 11 for failing to pay $30,231.70 in taxes. The I.R.S. seized $10,000 they found at the restaurant.

The Grille's liquor license was rescinded June 1 by the Board of Selectmen because the restaurant was not performing its function as a public victualer.

Currently the broker is seeking new tenants, "with a good reputation and good credentials," according to Rogers. He added, "the door is still

Crew shoots national commercial on Sheffield

The DeMarinis family gets a chance to see the way the game is played in the fast lane

By JOE DeMARINIS
Special to the Star

Aug. 10.

I'm still in a state of disbelief about this course of events. Put it is pretty exciting, and I'd like to share it with you.

In brief: on Wednesday of last week, a TV commercial for Nyquil was shot at our house.

It all started a couple of weeks ago when a woman came to the front door and asked Jennifer if she could take some pictures of the house for possible use in a TV commercial.

Jennifer happened to be on the phone with Kathy, and the woman gave her a list of people to contact to check legitimacy. We both checked, including with the police, and found it to be a valid effort of a major New York advertising agency. The woman at the door was acting as their Boston location scout.

Next day, we received a call that our place was their first choice, and asking if we were willing to do it.

Their schedule was impressive:

Wednesday, Aug. 5, decision on site, verbal agreement. Saturday, electrician checks power availability. Tuesday, technical meeting at house. Wednesday, commercial shoot; Friday, commercial edit. Week of Aug. 17, audience tests begin.

They wanted a victorian home with a big front porch. Scenes were shot on the porch, in one bedroom, the foyer and garage. The garage was converted for the day into a pet shop, and the cast included a basket full of puppies.

The story of the commercial is that the daddy had promised his little girl that he would buy her a puppy. But mom has to inform the daughter that dad is too sick with a cold. However, dad suddenly appears, shaved and feeling great because he took Nyquil the night before.

Aug. 12.

Our alarm went off at 4:45 a.m., and by 5:30 the first person arrived. He brought a large box into the garage, which magically unfolded into a coffee service bar. By five minutes to six, over 30 people had arrived and three huge trucks were unloading equipment in front of the house. The day was perfect, slightly cool, clear blue sky, and the morning sun was peeping over the horizon.

Within minutes the electricians had tapped into the main service entrance, and cables were strung all over the front lawn. Massive lights, tables, "directors" chairs, and all sorts of equipment appeared. Six men strained as they moved the camera dolly onto the front walk.

One bedroom became a wardrobe, our TV room became the makeup center, with a huge studio light beamed at the ceiling. Everyone had a job to do, and was doing it with the utmost dispatch. By 6:40 the equipment was running, lights on, actors in place and they were ready to shoot.

The front of the house and the entire street looked like, and was, a movie set. By this time, most of the neighbors were just waking up.

The shots had been planned to take optimum advantage of the position of the sun and were done out of sequence. The two final scenes were taken first.

The star of the show, who stole everybody's heart, was a 6-year-old girl. In the first scene taken, she was sitting on the front steps with her head in her hands, obviously very sad.

NEWS NOTES

Day care scholarship deadline Sept. 11

Day care scholarships are currently available in 183 towns and cities throughout Massachusetts under a pilot program funded by the State Office for Children and offered through six child care resource and referral agencies across the state.

Child Care Search, with offices in Waltham, Lowell and Framingham, is one of the six participating agencies and is now accepting scholarship applications for a third and final drawing from residents of Winchester as well as 33 other towns.

The deadline date for the September lottery drawing is Friday, Sept. 11. families who earn between 71 and 100 percent of the state's adjusted median income (for example: $17,304 to $24,696 for a family of three) are eligible to participate.

In addition, parents must be working or participating in an approved training program, attending a full-time high school or undergraduate college program, actively seeking employment, and not receiving any other form of child care assistance.

Those in after-school programs are also eligible. Parents who receive an ASAP scholarship must agree to participate in an evaluation survey.

Local employers and community organizations who are interested in supporting day care may contact Child Care Search at 891-4557.

POLICE LOG

Sunday, August 16

At 10:20 p.m. police received a report of suspicious activity at the Cumberland Farms on Washington Street.

Investigation revealed that an employee had been playing with squirt guns in the store, according to police reports.

At 7:10 p.m. the manager of Parkview Condominiums showed police where someone had been sleeping in the basement of the building. A mattress and blanket were discovered in a storage bin, police say.

Papers in the bin led police to believe that the trespasser was a Woburn man.

At 2:08 p.m. police received a call in which a Lincoln Street resident reported that his 1978 Honda Accord parked on the street had been damaged.

The Honda sustained damage to its front end estimated at $878, according to police reports. The owner heard a noise while in the house, but saw no vehicle, police say.

At 10:35 a.m. a Baldwin Street resident reported that someone had attempted to break into his 1975 Corvette sometime after midnight. The attempt was unsuccessful.

The car was parked in the driveway.

At 10 a.m. a Salem woman reported that her car had been vandalized some time during the previous 24-hour period, when it was parked on Lawson Road. The dashboard was damaged where the AM/FM stereo had been removed from the car.

At 9:45 a.m. a Jefferson Road resident reported that the right rear vent window of his 1980 Mercedes 300D had been smashed.

According to police, the perpetrator was probably seeking the radio when the attempt was interrupted.

Police took an ashtray for fingerprint analysis.

Saturday, August 15

At 10:32 a.m. Winchester Hospital called police to ask for assistance in finding a wandering patient.

The patient could not be located, according to police reports.

At 12:57 a.m. a Main Street resident reported that there was a bat in the house.

An officer assisted the bat out the back door, according to police reports.

Friday, August 14

At 5:45 p.m. a patrolman cruising south on Cambridge Street observed a three-car accident in the northbound lane near the entrance to the Baybank parking lot.

The officer said he observed debris in the road.

From accounts of the persons involved, police reconstructed the events that led to the accident. A 1985 Mazda GLC driven by a Glen Road resident was stopped in traffic with a 1978 Dodge Colt operated by a Woburn woman behind it. At that moment, a 1986 Oldsmobile Calais operated by a Woburn man struck the rear end of the Dodge, causing it to hit the rear end of the Mazda, according to police reports.

The driver of the Oldsmobile said he had been watching a Monte Carlo to his left in the parking lot of Mahoney's Rocky Ledge, which appeared to be entering traffic. He said he was traveling at 20 to 30 m.p.h., according to police.

When he looked forward, he saw the stopped cars and applied his brakes, police say. However, he was too late and ran into the Dodge.

The Oldsmobile sustained extensive front-end damage, the Mazda had no visible damage and the Dodge sustained minor damage to its rear bumper, according to police reports.

The driver of the Dodge complained of pain in the right knee. The officer at the scene says he observed a slight swelling in the knee area. The woman was transported to Winchester Hospital.

All vehicles were driven from the scene, police say.

At 1:23 p.m. an Olde Village Drive resident reported that her mailbox had been knocked over.

She said that this has occurred frequently in the past, according to reports.

At 9:44 a.m. police stopped a 1986 BMW on Cambridge Street, which, according to reports, was traveling at 49 m.p.h. in a 35 m.p.h. zone.

A check revealed that the driver, a Woburn man, had previously had his license suspended. He was arrested and the vehicle towed from the scene. He was charged with operating after suspension and speeding, according to police reports.

Thursday, August 13

At 3:22 p.m. a three-car accident occurred on Washington Street.

According to police, a vehicle suddenly pulled out from the curb, causing a Dodge Wagon registered to a Marion Street man to make a quick stop. A Ford LTD sedan behind the Dodge operated by a Woburn woman also stopped short, police say. A Marion Street man driving a Chevrolet Camaro struck her from behind, causing her car to strike the Dodge wagon.

The occupants of the Dodge, a couple, complained of minor injuries. The man said his neck bothered him and the woman complained of back pain, police say.

The Ford had no visible damage, the Camaro sustained severe front-end damage and the Dodge also had no visible damage, according to police.

All three vehicles were driven from the scene of the accident.

At 9:40 a.m. a two-car accident occurred at the intersection of Washington and Cross Streets.

According to police reports, a Drexel Avenue woman driving a 1979 AMC coupe down Washington Street was hit in the left front fender by a Lynn woman driving a 1986 Buick sedan along Cross Street.

The Drexel Avenue woman claimed the other car pulled out from Cross Street and struck her vehicle, according to reports. The Lynn woman claimed she had stopped on Cross Street and when she pulled out, had [illegible]

PEOPLE

James and Mary Chute have really settled down. They celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Aug. 8.

Chutes celebrate 50th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Chute of Horn Pond Brook Road were surprised by their four children with a celebration commemorating their Golden Wedding Anniversary Aug. 8.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Chute of Winchester, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gilbert of Melrose, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Schrock of Hamilton and Mr. and Mrs. James Chute of Stoneham were the hosts for the 50th anniversary celebration.

The outdoor party was held at the home of their daughter and included the couple's 17 grandchildren and 65 friends and relatives.

Under a striped canopy guests enjoyed an old fashioned New England clambake, complete with a brief thunderstorm.

The Chutes were married Aug. 24, 1937, in New Hampshire. They have resided in Winchester for the past 43 years.

Mr. Chute is the proprietor of Lord Coal Company of Woburn, a business he has operated for over half a century. The business was previously owned by his father.

Phinneys mark 50 years of marriage

More than 80 friends and family members joined Vernon (Chub) and Irene Phinney in a celebration of their 50-year wedding anniversary Aug. 8. The party was given by their two children, Sandra Fontes of Lowell and Frank Phinney of Winchester, at their son's home on Highland Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Phinney, former long-time residents of Winchester, have resided in Boynton Beach, Fla., since 1975 when they retired. Mr. Phinney was a head custodian in the Winchester school system for 28 years. A registered nurse for 40 years, Mrs. Phinney retired from the Choate Hospital after 30 years of duty.

Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh presented the couple with two special citations. The first, signed by Gov. Michael Dukakis, recognized their achievement and the second, from the Massachusetts House of Representatives, wished them continued success.

Winchester Chief of Police John McHugh offered congratulations and best wishes.

Guests were treated to a traditional New England clam bake on the lawn. Under the shade of a brightly colored tent top, many danced on a parquet floor set up for the event. The band played Sinatra favorites and classic jazz tunes.

Since retirement, Mr. and Mrs. Phinney have traveled to northern Maine, throughout the South, and to Hawaii. Mr. Phinney bicycles each day, has refined his pool game, and is respected on the shuffleboard court. Mrs. Phinney exercises her creativity through cooking and ceramics work.

Mr. and Mrs. Phinney plan to return to Florida at the end of August.

Strange coincidences occur on golden date

By WADE ROUSH
Special to the Star

In a strange and as yet unexplained coincidence, two Winchester couples celebrated their 50th wedding anniversaries Aug. 8 under nearly identical circumstances.

Vernon and Irene Phinney, former long time residents, and James and Mary Chute of Horn Pond Brook Road both marked the golden event that Saturday with traditional outdoor clambakes, both under yellow-and-white striped tents. The Phinney's celebration took place at the home of their son Frank Phinney of Highland Avenue, while the Chute's affair occurred in Hamilton at the home of their daughter Carol Schrock.

Apparently neither couple was acquainted with the other.

Some 80 friends and family members attended the Phinney's fete, while the Chutes hosted 82 at their surprise party.

Schrock said her family decided to have a clambake because "we did the formal business for their 30th and 40th... this was more informal."

Frank Phinney said "Actually, we had lobsters, steamers and shrimp. You can call it a lobster-bake if you want. Maybe the other people only had clams."

Mysteriously, both parties were interrupted for a short while by cloudbursts.

Speculation over the meaning of the coincidence has led to few solid conclusions. An employee of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge suggested that the simultaneous events were early manifestations of the Harmonic Convergence, a mystical-astrological event heralding a new era of understanding that was supposed to have begun Aug. 16.

ABOUT TOWN

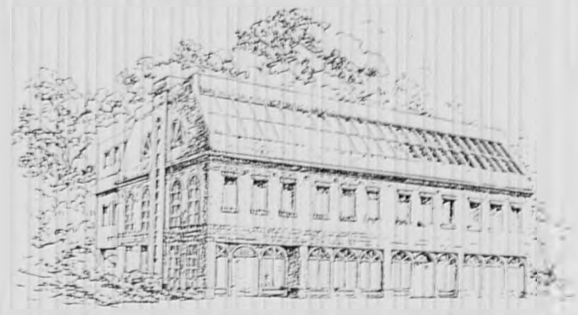
Groundbreaking for Main Street offices held

Groundbreaking ceremonies for a new office building at 611 Main Street were held August 7.

The 13,000 square foot building was developed by The Winchester Group Inc., a full-service real estate development company owned by the Winchester Savings Bank. It is designed by the architectural firm Chisholm Washington of Cambridge and constructed by JSP Inc. of Avon.

The building will contain office professional and retail space. There will be one-to-one parking for 18 cars under the building.

President and Chief Executive Officer of the Winchester Group Anthony P. Petracca, Projects Manager Susan M. Spellos, Winchester Savings Bank President Robert B. Nickerson, Michael Washington of Chisholm Washington, JSP President J. Stanley Puddicombe and Planning Board Chairman Maryann McGall-Taylor attended the ceremonies.



An artist's rendering shows what the new 13,000-square-foot office building now being built in Winchester center will look like when it is finished.

Fall storytime registration begins Aug. 31

Registration for Fall Storytimes will begin Monday, Aug. 31 at 9:15 a.m. in the Winchester Junior Library. Two storytime sessions have been scheduled for the fall with separate meetings each session for 2 year olds, 3 year olds, and 4 and 5 year olds.

Session I will run from Sept. 14 through Oct. 29, while Session II will meet from Dec. 2 through Dec. 16.

Two groups of 2 year olds will meet each session on Mondays from 10:30 to 11 a.m. and on Thursdays from 9:30 to 10 a.m. Three year olds will meet on Wednesdays from 10:30 to 11 a.m. and 4 and 5 year olds will meet on Tuesdays from 2:15 to 3 p.m.

Children may be registered for one of the Fall Storytimes. They must be 2 years old by Sept. 1 and be the appropriate age when the sessions begin. Parents must register their own children.

Two year olds must be accompanied by a parent at each session. To avoid disruptions, siblings may not attend two year olds storytime sessions.

Further information about storytimes is available at the Junior Library or by calling 721-7170.

The Junior Library is open Monday and Wednesday from noon to 8 p.m. and Tuesday, Thursday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Ed Committee keeps flame of perpetual interest burning

By LEONOR RICH

Members of the Winchester Seniors Association Education Committee meet to discuss ways to keep seniors learning. Seated around the table, clockwise from lower left, are Leonor Rich, Agnes Blyth, Isabel Grasso, Dr. Salvador Jacobs, Pauline McGuigan, Marjorie Blomquist and Margaret Leader, chairman. (Wes Schmale Photo)

Seniors are encouraged to do continuous learning

The Winchester Seniors Association Education Committee encourages andd supports continuous learning through its varied programs during the year.

Chairing the committee work is Margaret Leader, assisted by Marjorie Blomquist, Agnes Blyth, Isabel Grasso, Dr. Salvador Jacobs, Pauline McGuigan, and Dr. Leonor Rich.

During the past year, a trip to the Lowell National Park emphasized the rise of industrialism in the area. This was followed by an informational talk presented by Terry Marotta, who is being considered for the honor of being the first journalist in space.

Then came a panel who dealt with the subject of "Film Flam Artists and the Elderly." Participating were Georgeann Abbanat and Sue Hickey from the office of the Massachusetts Commission of Banks.

Robert Nickerson, president of the Winchester Savings Bank, and Edwin Goodwin, president of the Winchester Cooperative Bank, gave important warnings that should be heeded. Officer Kevin Mawn and Lt. Joseph Perritano of the Winchester Police Department completed this impressive panel.

Later Jack McCarthy, an active senior, discussed computers and how they have changed the way of life.

In January came the first Hobby Show with 21 seniors sharing talents and interests through displays representing new learning, making, collecting, and creating.

Dr. Hewson Ryan of Tufts University, who has presented valuable information on two past appearances at the Jenks Senior Center, is invited to return by popular request. A former ambassador to Central America, he is knowledgeable about the problems in this harried part of the continent.

The noted Priscilla of Boston will present a fashion show of wedding gowns with live models, informing the audience about some of the famous people she has served in this country and abroad.

Marcia Saltmarsh will be asked to speak to an audience in January on "Consumer Rights and the Responsibilities of Senior Citizens." Since she is on vacation at the present time, she could not be reached to confirm the invitation.

Dr. John Grano from the Registry of Motor Vehicles will be invited to talk to seniors about coping with traffic problems. Driving safely will be the keynote emphasized.

June Cannon and a friend will show slides of out of the way places in the world.

Dr. Salvador Jacobs will conduct a course in the Italian language to enable participants to read and write the language.

Other types of programs are being considered by the committee to give seniors informative and creative educational experiences during the coming year.

The main thrust of the Education Committee is to keep a perpetual flame of interest burning under the desire to continue learning to the end of life, whether it be exploring a new language or delving into new subject matter such as astronomy, cultural anthropology, history, literature, or sociology.

Quarterly meeting of the W.S.A.

A catered Soup and Sandwich luncheon will be served at the quarterly meeting of the Winchester Seniors Association Sept. 18. Ezio of Stoneham will prepare homemade minestrone soup, sandwiches, cake, and coffee or tea.

Sign-ups are required to inform the caterer about the amount of food to prepare at a cost that is not excessive. The meeting is scheduled at 11:30 a.m. followed by the luncheon at noon. Morman Keene will play the piano while diners are enjoying the meal.

Volunteers are needed to set up tables, serve beverages, and assist with clearing up the last vestiges of the meal. People who are willing to give service for this occasion are asked to call the Jenks Senior Center Reception Desk (721-7136), leaving both name and telephone number.

Volunteer hosts and hostesses needed

Volunteer hosts and hostesses are needed at the Jenks Senior Center to greet people, conduct tours of the center, keep the lobby presentable, and take care of the coffee pots. The hours will be from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

This service was in effect several years ago, but for some reason, it did not survive; thus, it must be reinstated. People who are willing to assume this responsibility should call Polly McGuigan at 729-0710 for more information about the duties to be performed.

Omni

Omnimax is the ultimate movie at Boston Museum of Science. It utilizes the largest film size format in the history of motion pictures with each film frame 10 times larger than the standard 36mm film. Sound comes from every direction, capturing the experience of discovery, making the observer feel comparable with an explorer.

The Omni Theater in Boston is one of only 12 United States cities to boast the spectacular Omnimax film experience. This powerhouse of discovery is unique in every way.

The theater's projector was given by Evelyn and James Jenks of Winchester, who recognized that Omnimax provides the ride of a lifetime.

The Jenks Senior Center Recreation Committee has made arrangements for a trip to the theater on Sept. 9 via school bus, leaving the center at 11:30 a.m. and returning at 4:30 p.m. Luncheon will be at the museum at noon. The presentation of Omni is scheduled for 2 p.m. Sylvia Saslow is in charge of arrangements and states that a few more reservations can be accommodated.

Day trip to the cranberry world

The Jenks Senior Center Recreation Committee is scheduling a day trip to Ocean Spray Cranberry World in Plymouth on Sept. 23. The group will leave Jenks Senior Center at 10:30 a.m., returning at 1:30 p.m. Lunch will be at the Barnside Restaurant in Hanover. Make reservations beginning Sept. 1 at the Reception Desk for this interesting tour. Agnes Blyth is in charge of arrangements.

Square Dancing

Square dancing will resume starting on Tuesday, Sept. 13 at 2 p.m. with the popular Mel Dixon calling. The 1½ hour sessions will be held as usual in the Jenks Center Meeting Room.

This activity presents a good opportunity to join the friendly group at the beginning of the season to learn or to recall the steps.

Call Mal or Claire Masters for details (729-1039).

NEWS NOTES

New eatery receives permit

By ROGER L. KAY
Star Editor

A license was never granted so fast. One minute John and Janet D'Orsi were sitting at the selectmen's table expecting to defend their petition for a bakery; the next they were out the door, license in hand.

When the application came up at last Monday's selectmen's meeting, John D'Orsi said he would rather respond to questions than present his case. There were none, so a motion to accept the petition was made, seconded and passed unanimously.

The couple plans to open The Gingerbread Construction Co., which will bake and sell cookies, gingerbread houses and related specialty and novelty baking products.

The site of the bakery will be at 562 Washington St.

Joe Juliano, foreground, and Mark Todisco lay the foundation at Symmes Corner for the star-crossed Winchester sign. The sign went though a number of iterations before being approved by the selectmen. Some thought it should have the word "Welcome" on it and asserted that the approved wording, "Winchester Chamber of Commerce," is simply an advertisement for that body. (Paul Drake Photo)

Conservation board to price land parcels

By ELAINE ROSEN
Special to the Star

The possibility of using state funding to acquire open space in Winchester has spurred the Conservation Commission to determine fair market price of several sites.

These include land adjacent to 22 Highland St., the "Pansy Patch," land at 28 and 108 Ridge St. and on Washington Street.

When prices have been determined, the commission plans to request state funds through Representative Saltmarsh.

In other actions at their Aug. 10 meeting, commission member Betty Vanderbilt reported that an oil slick surfaced in the Aberjona River at Swanton Street, but was contained at the first sillation barrier. It was decided to remove this barrier because there are two barriers further upriver.

Elaine Vreeland, conservation commission administrator, also found a pipe, presumably a storm sewer, hidden by debris on the site.

The application of herbicide along the railroad tracks is progressing well and the appearance of Wedgemere Station is improved, commission members say.

Vreeland was called to inspect the Converse Place site and she gave permission for the owner to finish washing the side of the building. Permits to sandblast had been given to the owner, J. and A., by the selectmen and the Board of Health.

Conservation commission members said they hope these town boards will alert petitioners that they must also seek conservation commission approval if they are to do work within 100 feet of the Aberjona.

Actions taken on individual petitions were: more information will be required from owners before order of conditions can be granted at Lot 95 on Surrey Road.

The lot at 22 Highland Street is reportedly being considered by the Winchester Hospital for additional parking. However, no hospital representative appeared at the meeting. A future meeting will be scheduled if requested.

Plans for the addition of a deck to the property at 19 Lakeview St. were submitted by Hartley Rogers. He will receive an order of conditions.

Keep your campsite clean.

COMMENT

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

The ancient sailor's lament has now become our own

Water, water everywhere, but not a drop to drink – at least not a safe drop.

In this corner, York Road residents are subjected to disgusting filth entering with their tap water. In the opposite, a monetary settlement reminds us of the danger to which a careless corporation subjected the town with the installation of possibly carcinogenic water pipes.

Back in June, the engineering firm of Weston & Sampson delivered a responsible study of the town's water supply that contained danger signals couched in the most careful language. Water studies can be pretty dull, and this tome is no exception, but the consultants took time to explain to the selectmen the major aspects of Winchester's water system, both present and needed.

The town has been informed of the dubious sources and linkages that provide its water supply.

One of the most ominous of the consultants' observations points to the possible formation of carcinogens in the drinking water supply when chlorine reacts with organics that occur in raw water.

Bacteria killing chlorine is routinely added to the raw water of the three reservoirs that serve the town.

Tests for organic content performed on the reservoirs from time to time have revealed turbidity and color levels that exceed Environmental Protection Agency standards. Turbidity and color are indicators of the presence of organic matter. Organic matter is a nice name for decayed leaves and other vegetation.

The organic soup spiced with chlorine produces trihalomethane compounds, which have been found to cause cancer.

In simple terms, the treatment of the surface sources that supply the town's water may routinely produce carcinogens.

Water, water. In expensive Switzerland only the fresh, glacially fed water and the sweet, upland air are free. Here, it is necessary to pay for drinkable water.

Asbestos, another proven carcinogen, permeates miles of Winchester's water pipes. Under certain conditions, the asbestos fibers can be leached out of the lining and into the water.

And the list goes on: tetrachloroethylene, a chemical related to the one that caused the cases of leukemia in Woburn children, was used to attach vinyl lining to the asbestos cement pipes.

And if those boring chemical words do not move the average consumer, the gunk pulled from the filter at the Kett residence on York Road should be enough to turn the stomachs of all but the hardest case.

While the whole system in Winchester supplies water of doubtful quality, the Middle Low service area, the wide, flat valley that contains the center of town, is clearly the worst afflicted. The low flow rate and poor piping layout degrade the product of the already-questionable source. The York Road experience illustrates this graphically.

But even with all this bad news in our drinking glasses, there is more yet to come.

The science of hydrogeology, the study of the movement of water in the earth, is just coming into its own. Until recently, little was known about how underground water flows through layers of varied permeability. Measurement of this flow was virtually impossible.

Now, as a result of advances in technology, measurement has improved and scientific understanding of the rules that govern subterranean water increases daily.

And it turns out that one of their chief discoveries is that substances suspended in water really can travel quite a long way underground.

All those hazardous waste sites, big and small, in town and out of town, from the mildly noxious to the truly toxic, are potentially contaminating the groundwater.

How much of this gets into Winchester's reservoirs is uncertain, but in addition to groundwater-borne toxins, the surface water of the reservoirs is subject to airborne chemicals.

Automobiles and industrial sources spew sulfur dioxide and nitrous oxide into the atmosphere. These gases bond with water in the clouds and precipitate sulfuric and nitric acids, a phenomenon known as "acid rain." Not poisonous in itself, acid rain is still not the kind of swill a person wants to drink a lot of. However, it is acids in the water that leach the asbestos from the pipes.

The water supply is being assaulted from so many directions at once that the possibility of us not being contaminated seems remote.

Some of the problems are beyond Winchester's ability to cope. Federal and state cleanup initiatives will have to be taken.

But Weston & Sampson have spelled out the actions that the town can take to ensure as good a water supply as can be had, given the accidents of geography and history.

It can only be hoped that the voters will understand the necessity of paying the $5 million price tag. This is not a matter of a swimming pool, but what goes in it.

They provide peaceable kingdom

By TERRY MAROTTA

Kurt and Dorothy have been changing diapers for the past 30 years.

They live on the Gulf coast of Florida now. Both for the decade they've been here, and for a corresponding decade spent in the piney Northern reaches of Michigan, they have cared for babies — first their own four, and then the babies born to women too sick, too young, too poor, or generally too overwhelmed by the circumstances of their lives to do it themselves. They have provided a peaceable kingdom for these infants to dwell in for the weeks or months before permanent homes can be found for them.

They are foster parents. They have made this gift of themselves to 105 babies as of last week, a number they divulge in the most casual and self-deprecating of manners.

"We love babies," says Dorothy. "When our own youngest moved past the baby stage, I just decided here was a thing I could do, and would love doing."

The infants come within days of their birth, usually, and stay for anywhere between six weeks and six months.

Robert and Jeremy are staying with them now. Robert drifts dreamily this afternoon in one of those automated cradles that tick like metronomes and seem to simulate the muted throb and jostle of life on the inside. Before long, he will go down for his nap. He has been here just two days.

Jeremy has been here longer. He is biracial, and by virtue of this duplicate citizenship, harder to place than either an all-black or all-white child would be. He reposes just now in a set of human arms, a burp-cloth spread like royal robes about him, and watches us from within the inky pools of his African eyes.

The infants all have histories, as Dorothy puts it. Some carry diseases like Muscular Dystrophy in the tiny transistors of their genetic codes, diseases that manifest themselves only over time. Others, children of alcoholic or drug dependent mothers, experience in their own small and blameless frames the lonely hell of withdrawal. Some startle easily. Some just don't respond much.

But most do respond. Kurt cradles them in the crook of an arm as he watches the news at night. Dorothy coos to them during the daily bath. They are calm with these infants, the anxiety of greenhorn parents long since vanished.

Summer Dog Days

"With the first four," Kurt laughs, "it was the children who were in control. With the last 105, it's been us."

There's plenty of laughter among the parents and their four grown daughters. About the whispered remarks of people in church, say, as they see a baby passed among them all, and speculate as to which two the parents are. About the little girl next door, big sister herself to an infant, who remarked after six months of visits to what she thought was one baby, how curious it was that the little thing never seemed to grow any. About the times in restaurants when waitresses ask Kurt the baby's name and see him turn to his wife for help. "I call 'em all Sam," he confesses fondly.

In fact the family names each baby, debating and puzzling together over each new tag. They named Jeremy, who lies in the visitor's arms now, cooing softly, those fathomless eyes locked on hers. Holding him, she touches the dark silky ringlets of his hair; feels again in her hands the boneless wobbling weight of new humanity; and envies sharply of a sudden the blessing Chuck and Dorothy enjoy by inhabiting a world where the babies stay babies.

And yet it is a mixed blessing. They'll not see these babies grow. They'll not know, past the early first chapters, how their stories turned out.

They have an album of color portraits of every small soul who lodged however briefly in their home. Beyond this, they have nothing you could hold in your hand.

But what else have you, when you've given love this fully? In your hand, how little perhaps; but in your heart, how very much.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Tennis tourney co-chairs thank those who helped

TO THE EDITOR:

As chairpeople of this past weekend's Winchester Tennis Association-sponsored Husband and Wife Tournament, we would like to extend our thanks to all who helped with its success.

Maureen and Richard Rowe, Anita and John Gerrein, Linda and Alex Popp, Bonnie and Mark Totman, Christine and David Campbell, Pat Bonnell, Joe Palumbo, Joan Bird, and many others contributed their time and effort before and during the tournament. We would also like to note our great appreciation to the Winchester Indoor Lawn Tennis Center for cooperating with the Association on Saturday when the weather did not.

A warm note of thanks goes to E. Whitney Gray, supervisor of the Packer Courts, for whom the tournament is named. In its 15th year, the tournament made special note of the man without whom the tennis community could not thrive.

Whit's undying concern for the success of the tennis events of Winchester does not go unappreciated.

Thanks to all these individuals, to all the participants and to the many unnamed helpers who made the event so much fun.

Marianne Von Feldt and Andy Oxenhorn, Louise and Bob Trakimas,
Chairpeople, the 15th annual E. Whitney Gray Honorary Husband and Wife Tournament

Library staff thanks contributors

TO THE EDITOR:

The staff of the Winchester Junior Library would like to express our gratitude to the following people who have contributed to the summer reading program, "Swords and Sorcerers, Castles and Kings:" Leah McClintock for her calligraphy and torches; Matthew Kurnick for the loan of his castle; Cheryl Howard of Winchester High School for the loan of their banners, and David Strugnell for his magnificent artwork.

And of course, to all our supportive patrons.

The Children's Room Staff

Moore sets the record straight

TO THE EDITOR:

Wade Roush did an excellent job in writing up his interview with me last week. However, as an experienced clubwoman, I find myself reading his article like the minutes of the last meeting and would like to set the record straight with a few additions or corrections.

My contributions to Winchester's Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day was enthusiastic but minor. It was organized and run — ably — by Joe Tabbi for the Board of Health. I will be volunteering again this fall.

Benjamin Linder's co-worker, whose interview I read in the Boston Globe, is not Barbara Lee, but the daughter of Barbara Leaf.

And lastly, there are three adults very much startled to read that I consider them "more or less" grown. I answered the question, do I have children, "More or less," meaning yes and no; yes I have two sons and a daughter, but no they are not children. I am sorry for the misunderstanding: one of the joys of parenthood is to receive as equal friends and companions the adults whom you once knew as your children.

Thank you for a write-up and a picture which I will be glad and proud to share with my family.

Sincerely,
Marjorie Moore

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

Volume 13-Report No. 33
Massachusetts House and Senate
August 14, 1987

Criminal Records — House 86-68, approved an amendment requiring the Human Services Secretary to use the criminal offender record information system to review all job applicants who provide direct services to minors in the state human services department.

Amendment supporters said this will help prevent abuses by human service providers.

Opponents said the amendment raises serious constitutional questions.

A Yea vote is for the amendment.
A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

The House and Senate. During the summer legislative recess, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" continues its special report on representatives' votes on roll calls dealing with the fiscal 1988 state budget recently signed into law by Governor Dukakis.

Housing Security — House 149-8, rejected an amendment reducing funding for security programs for public housing projects from $1.5 million to $750,000.

Amendment supporters said this will tighten the program and noted many services are duplicated by local police.

Opponents said the cut will jeopardize the security of public housing.

A Yea vote is for the cut.
A Nay vote is against it.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted no.

Letters Deadline

Letters to the editor submitted by 4 p.m. Monday will be considered for publication in Thursday's paper of the same week.

MAN IN THE STREET

What do you think of subsidized housing in Winchester?

Chris Dobbins
"I think it is a good idea. But you have to take good care of it. If they can maintain them so it does not look like some sections of Woburn I am all for it."

Ganson Taggart
"I feel it is a good idea. We have to decide where we want to put it. It is good for the town and for the people."

Susan McGonagle
"I think it is very necessary. People need a place to live."

Diane Savino
"I think they should do it. People need it. I have been waiting to move into subsidized housing for six years. I think it is desperately needed."

FLASHBACKS

A look at Winchester news this week...

5 years ago: 1982

The Winchester Board of Health orders the removal of chemically contaminated fill from Amberwood Drive after the presentation of evidence that the fill contains 16 potentially harmful chemicals. The fill had originally been declared safe by the state, and using the Amberwood site was considered to be a more viable alternative than scraping the fill out of the site. The goal is to have it removed before the start of school.

Fishermen find dead diseased fish floating on the surface of the Mystic Lakes. The kill is linked to scientists' discovery of metals and chemicals in the Upper Mystic Lake. According to test results, there is no oxygen for the fish to breathe 30 feet below the surface of the water. Also, the lakes' waters are constantly polluted by sewage coming from Sweetwater Brook in Stoneham and the Aberjona River as well as the manhole by the Winchester Boat Club.

The School Committee votes to continue with its attendance policy rather than introduce a new, controversial one that would have meant grade cuts for students with repeated, unexcused absences. This policy met with stiff resistance from parents and students, who argued that grade cuts would hurt every student in order to halt the misconduct of a few.

Winchester Hospital earns national recognition for excellence in its patient and family education programs. The hospital was commended for its commitment to providing well-managed patient education services as part of high-quality, cost-effective health care. The American Hospital Association (AHA) reported that research and evidence have shown that planned patient education services provide many benefits for both the patients and hospitals, including an increase in staff and patient satisfaction with the hospital's services.

Some merchants who did not check the faces on their $10 and $20 bills find themselves stuck with counterfeit money. Four bills were passed in recent weeks in Winchester. The bills were made by cutting the corners off $10 and $20 bills and sticking them on $1 bills, which are easily passed as people rarely look at the face on a bill.

A summary of the student goals and objectives for the 1977-78 year is presented to the School Committee. The report criticized the high school administration for lack of enforcement of rules and asked that students be allowed to participate in the evaluation of teachers. Also suggested were continued support of an effort to improve skills in basic grammar; extending the advanced placement history course to a two-year program; continuance of the informal, monthly meetings between the Student Advisory Committee and the School Committee.

The report urged closer contact between the student and the administrator, by proposing to have students anonymously evaluate their teachers, with evaluations going no farther than the teachers themselves.

Approximately 100 gravestones in Wildwood Cemetery were uprooted, turned over and broken by vandals in the past week. The damage occurred over two nights, and included the pulling up of flags and markers as well as extensive damage to stones. Police believed four youths caused most of the damage that occurred near the cemetery offices on Palmer Street.

15 years ago: 1972

A local 14-year-old undergoes surgery for a gunshot wound in the chest following an incident in which three youths were firing a .22-caliber rifle. The youths were said to be target practicing with beer cans found on town-owned land in the vicinity of Lynch Junior High School. Winchester police termed the shooting accidental.

A 21-year-old Brookline man is buried up to his neck in earth when a cave-in occurs in a ditch under the railroad bridge of Winchester Center. He was suffering only from a few bruises when he was dug out by some of his co-workers as well as the Fire Department's rescue truck, which responded quickly.

The new playing field at Winchester High School on Skillings Road will not be ready for use until at least late spring. Earlier use by athletic teams or physical education classes will jeopardize the surface, resulting in costly damage. Professional landscape experts and university field stations indicated that at least one full growing year was essential to insure a good surface.

25 years ago: 1962

The west end floor of the Town Hall is given a new face to make room for the new offices, including the Board of Health, the office of the town accountant, the sealer of weights and measures and general offices. The renovation of the lower west wing represents the latest phase of an overall renovation of Town Hall that began some time ago.

Eleven Winchester children as well as five from out of town undergo semi-weekly tests at the Holston Street Laboratory to determine the presence of radioactive iodine in their thyroid glands as a result of fallout from nuclear testing.

ENGAGEMENTS

Cooper to wed Harris

Mrs. Janet (Keene) Cooper of Otwell Road in Andover, formerly of Winchester, announces the engagement of her daughter Kerianne Cooper, to Edward N. Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Harris of Stevens Street.

Cooper graduated from Andover High School and attended Northern Essex Community College's sign communication program. She is currently employed by the Piantedosi Baking Company in Malden.

Harris graduated from Winchester High School and the University of New Hampshire. He is a material control manager for ADAC Corporation in Woburn.

The grandfather of the bride is Norman E. Keene of Grayson Road. The grandmother of the groom is Mrs. J. W. Shoemaker of Wildwood Street.

An October candlelight ceremony at the First Congregational Church is planned.

The couple resides on High Street in Andover.

Hurleys win 15th Gray Tournament

Kathy and Neil Hurley, after a one-year sabbatical, returned to the annual Husband and Wife Tournament to dominate the field.

The Hurley's defeated Karen and Ted Martin, last years champions, 6-3, 6-2 in the finals. For the Hurley's this was their eighth title. The Hurley's only lost 14 games in the five matches they played during the two days of action.

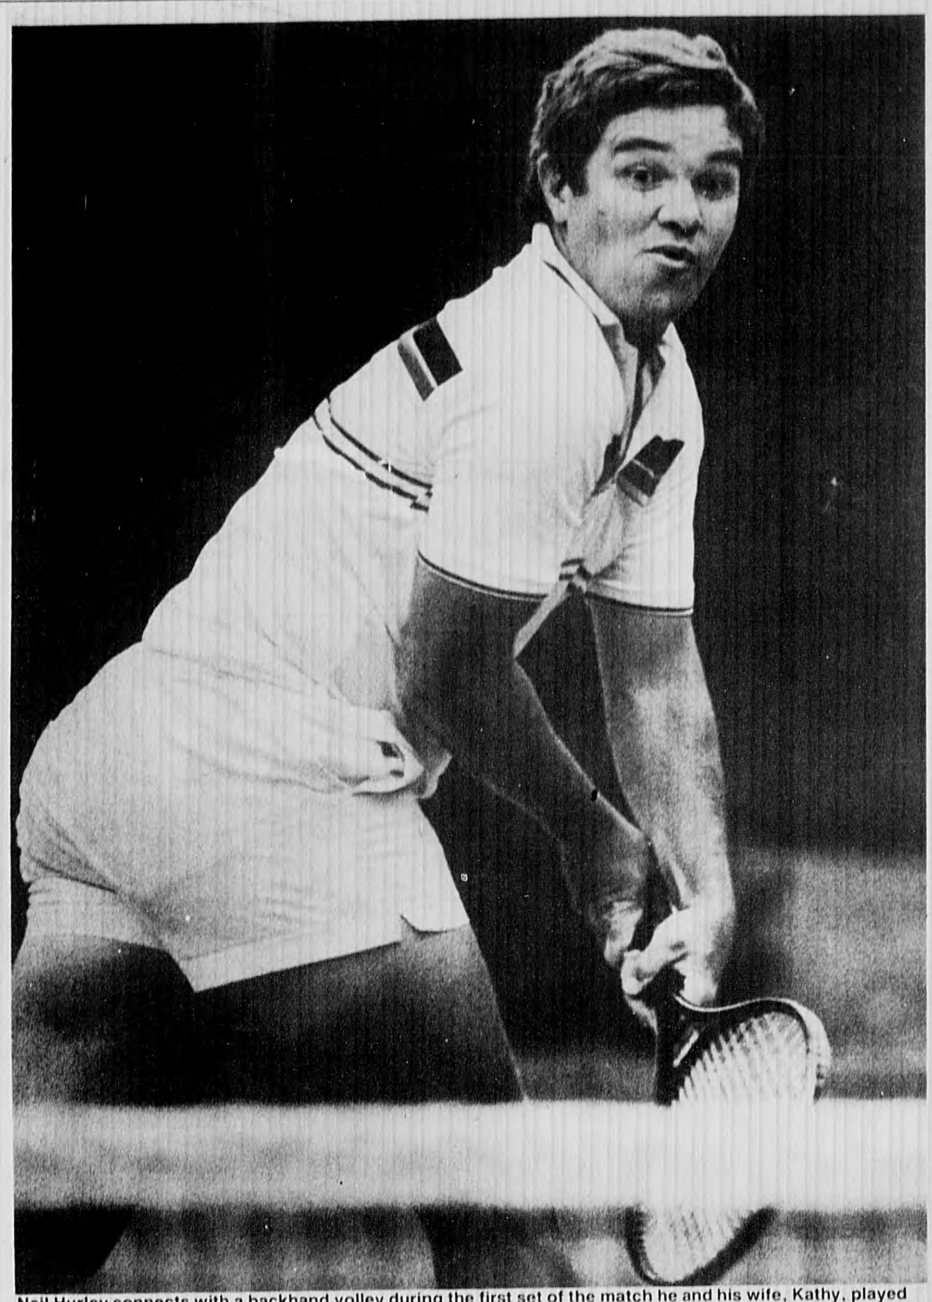
In the consolation round finals, Dorothy and Ron Barton defeated tournament co-directors Maryanne Von Feldt and Andy Oxenhorn 6-7, 6-2, 7-6 in a two hour marathon.

In the main draw semi-finals, the Martins defeated Bonnie and Mark Totman 7-5, 6-1, while the Hurley's swept by Katherine and Tom Dunn 6-1, 6-3.

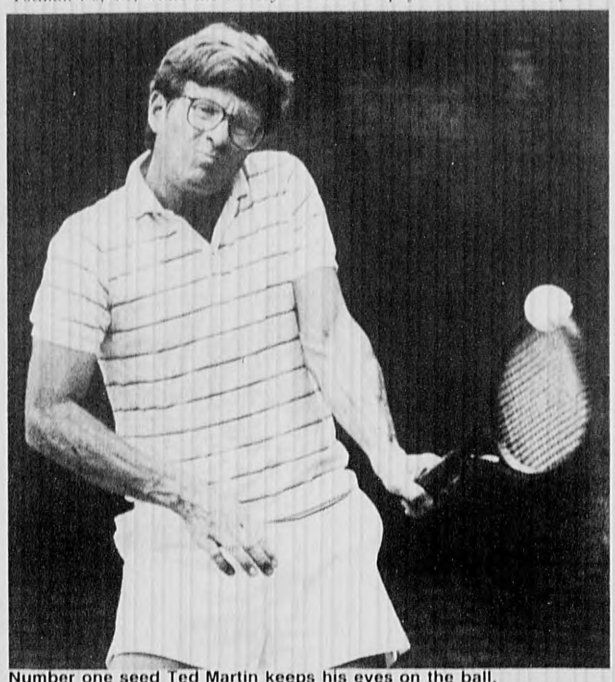
Thirty-three couples participated in this year's tournament. A Saturday-night buffet and dance at the Jenks Center highlighted the tennis weekend.

During the Saturday-night activities a slide show that depicted several misadventures at the Packer Courts was shown in honor of special guest, supervisor Everett "Whit" Gray.

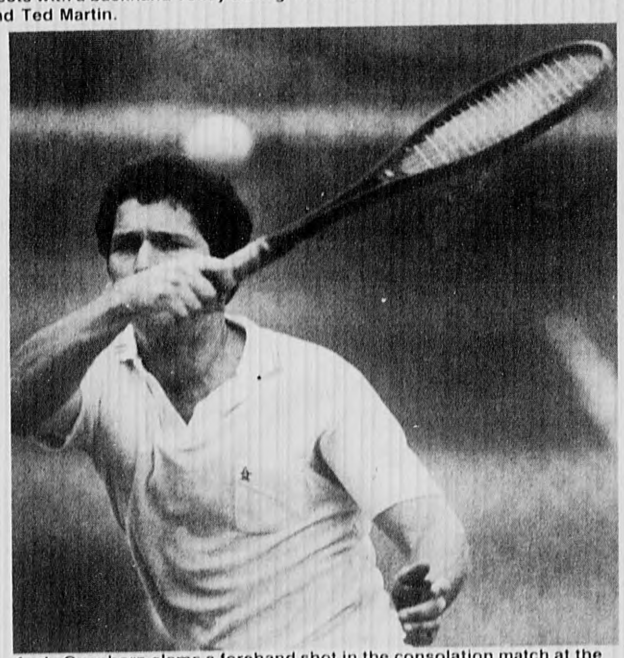
A poster put together by Pat Bonnell and signed by all the teams was presented to Gray in appreciation for his contributions to Winchester Tennis throughout the years. The tournament trophy is named for Gray.



Neil Hurley connects with a backhand volley during the first set of the match he and his wife, Kathy, played against Karen and Ted Martin.



Number one seed Ted Martin keeps his eyes on the ball.



Andy Oxenhorn slams a forehand shot in the consolation match at the the husband and wife tennis tournament.

Second seed Kathy Hurley returns a shot in the first set of her and her husband Neil's match at the 15th annual E. Whitney Gray Tournament at the Packer Courts.

Number one seed Karen Martin drives a backhand in a losing first-set effort with her husband Ted against Kathy and Neil Hurley.

Republican Club donates books to library

The Winchester Public Library is four books richer, thanks to a gift from the Women's Republican Club of Winchester.

June Cannon, president of the club, presented the new books in memory of Sally Woodward to Deirdre Hanley, assistant director of the library Aug. 11.

The special project committee was co-chaired by Margaret McCreery and Helen Hudson.

The books are "The Genius of the People, Abigail Adams, Pat Nixon — The Untold Story," and John Volpe The Life of an Immigrant's Son."

Woodward was an active and life long member of the Republican party.

The contribution was made as part of the Mamie Eisenhower Library Project, a program established by the National Federation of Republican Women to honor the former First Lady.

Since the program's implementation, more than 600 Federation clubs in 49 states have participated.

Let us help you feel right at home, right away

The nation's largest mortgage company—GMAC Mortgage offers the Express Streamlined Process, a feature designed to make you feel right at home. In half the normal time.

The ESP feature is expressly for you, because less documentation is needed to prequalify you on the spot (subject to credit check and property appraisal). And that translates into faster, near-home or refinancing closings. In most cases, your loan will be ready for closing in 30 days.

In today's take-over environment, the ESP is another good reason to choose GMAC Mortgage. Give us a call, or stop in. And get a move on. Into your new home.

Local photographer displays work

During the month of September the gallery of the Winchester Library will feature the work of photographer Carolyn Krantz Hirschfeld of Hollywood Road.

Several of Hirschfeld's previous shows have been the collected images of her travels to foreign countries. This particular exhibit is comprised of photographs of portfolio studies comprising a final school project.

The series, "Ethnic Faces in Ethnic Places," was taken of children at playgrounds in Chelsea, Jamaica Plain and Chinatown. It was further extended to capture the adult world of Beacon Hill, Haymarket and the North End.

Hirschfeld, a student at the New York Institute of Photography, enjoys photographing children in the Winchester area.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

PET PEEVES

Under ordinary circumstances, your cat or dog may be your best friend. Once you list your home for sale however, prospective buyers may not share your feelings for Putt or Fido.

First, there's the smell. Even if the buyers have pets, and even if theirs smell just like yours do, they will be put off by animal odors. If you have a problem, you might hire a professional to clean your furniture and carpets or if necessary, remove them from the property. If you have a cat box inside the house, check it frequently and keep the litter fresh. Remember, too, that some people have allergies and others are genuinely afraid of some animals. It may be hard for a buyer to appreciate your home through puffy, watery eyes or in between sneezes. If a buyer is afraid of being eaten by your dog, the chances of his buying your home become remote, even if the house is exactly what he wants. When Realtors bring people by to see your home, it's a good idea to let dogs or cats outside, or at least confine them to one area of the house.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying or selling a home, talk to the professionals at The Bixby & Porter Company Realtors. Come by our offices at 33 Thompson Street in Winchester.

NEWS NOTES

DPW gets operations manager

By ROGER L. KAY
Star Editor

The Department of Public Works has a new operations manager.

Robert Morin was introduced to the Board of Selectmen Monday night as the recently hired right-hand man of D.P.W. Director Dominic Serratore.

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer presented the new town employee, saying that a "considerable amount of time" had been spent to find the proper person for the job. The slot had been open for 18 months.

Morin retired recently from the United States Army, where he had attained the rank of lieutant colonel. He has bachelor's and master's degrees in civil engineering and managed public works projects in the military.

He is a "good addition to the staff of Winchester," Maurer said of the appointment.

Morin, asked to say a few words, said he "looks forward to whatever comes down the pike" in Winchester.

The board adjourned for a few minutes to personally greet Morin.

Winchester survives the hot weather

By ROGER L. KAY
Star Editor

In spite of the heat, Winchester's air conditioners are humming right along.

The power drain that the 90-degree-plus weather engenders has caused brownouts in some areas, but except for a minor dip Monday afternoon, things have been normal here.

A police and fire dispatcher reported that the station is "keeping cool." When the transformer dropped out for five to 10 minutes Monday, the back-up generator came on like clockwork. Power conditions returned to normal a few minutes later.

"It's a little warm in the hallways," the dispatcher said, "but the switchboard needs to be cool."

Purity Supreme reports that the freezers and lights are on. "Everything's normal," said acting store manager Bob Martino.

A Winchester Savings Bank spokesperson said that all systems were go despite heavy power requirements for computers and lighting.

Residents are cautioned to minimize power use anyway. Electric lights generate heat that causes air conditioners to work all the harder.

Parent aids provide support to struggling parents when life's difficulties threaten

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Sometimes one hour a week is all it takes to change somebody's life. Just ask Patricia DiSilva of Dix Road.

She has been a volunteer for the Parent Aid Program at the Woburn Council of Social Concern since its inception four years ago. The program gets 50 percent of its volunteers from Winchester.

The Parent Aid Program is similiar to the Big Brother Big Sister programs. It links people in need with people who want to help. But these people are not children, they are parents. Most of the program's clients come from Woburn, but the council services Lexington, Burlington, Willmington, Arlington and Winchester as well.

Program Supervisor Irena O'Neill said her clients are parents who have been referred by the Department of Social Services, a social worker, a hospital or just by word of mouth. They are mostly women with an average age of 25.

Some are single mothers. Some are living with abusive men. Some are on welfare. Some are alienated from their families and the world around them. Some have substance abuse problems. They all have one thing in common: the stress in their lives prevents them from being good parents; they need a friend.

"Parent Aid offers a role model," O'Neill said. "Volunteers show the women how to be nurturing, how to develop their parental skills. They do not offer criticism, they offer friendship."

> 'Parent Aid offers a role model. Volunteers show the women how to be nurturing, how to develop their parental skills. They do not offer criticism, they offer friendship.'
> - O'Neill

"You know you are the one person they can count on," DiSilva said. She has worked with four different mothers and will begin a new relationship in September.

"You are their one friend. You may be the only person to give them a compliment or a smile or help them out when they need it," she added.

Help often comes in the form of a lunch date or a trip to a museum. "Some of these women never get out of the house," DiSilva said. "They are trapped. One parent, I never visited in her house. She would wait for me on the stairs outside, because that was the only time she got to go out. We'd go to the mall, a movie or have lunch. It made her feel better. It didn't solve her problems."

Although a parent aide will often help fill out government forms or get information on available programs such as day care, they are not there to make decisions for the parents. DiSilva said the aides help the women gain confidence in themselves, so they can make their own decisions.

"Maybe by the end of the year, she will have more self confidence and will be able to make the decision to leave the abusive man," DiSilva said.

O'Neill interviews the aides before they are accepted into the program. "Many of the parents have drug records, they are alcoholics and drug abusers. I have to know if they the prospective aide) can deal with it," O'Neill said. "They cannot be prejudice against anyone, because that prevents positive work."

After acceptance into the program, aides attend a five-week training class held once a week for about two hours. DiSilva recalls part of her training. "They tell you that no matter what you say, you have to follow through. If you say you will call them next week, then call. If you say you are going on vacation and you will send them a postcard, you better send the card. You are the one person in their lives that they can trust and you can't let them down."

Aides must be good listeners and have patience. "Sometimes it takes a whole year for them to trust you," DiSilva said. The one-year committment is a minimum, so if an aid and a parent both want more time, they can have it. DiSilva is still in touch with the parent she helped two years ago.

During the summer, O'Neill said, the program slows down. She has seven volunteers now, but an average is 12 and she has worked with up to 17 at a time. The waiting list for parent aides is long, and O'Neill is looking for more volunteers. A new training session begins Sept. 14, and O'Neill welcomes inquiries.

DiSilva said she "can't see anything better on the horizon to spend my time on.

"In Winchester there are big houses, the beautiful life," DiSilva said. "A lot of people in the area are not as fortunate. It is wonderful to give to people who don't have as much as we do."

Budget Billing can make this month's electric bill...

When your electricity usage changes every month, so does the size of your electric bill. That's why Boston Edison offers a "no surprises" Budget Billing plan to its residential customers.

When you sign up for Budget Billing, you're charged the same amount for your electricity every month, no matter how much you use. The amount is based on your average electricity usage over the previous 12 months, and is adjusted upward or downward periodically, depending on your actual usage.

Your monthly payments without Budget Billing.

With Budget Billing, there are no surprises.

Budget Billing won't save you money, but it will let you spread the payments for your higher summer or winter electricity usage over the entire year. So there's never a surprise on your bill, no matter what the season.

Budget Billing is available to non-electric heat customers. We also offer a budget plan for our electric heat customers.

To sign up for Budget Billing, call Boston Edison at 1-800-322-4060.

After all, life is full of surprises. Your electric bill shouldn't be one of them.

COMING EVENTS

'Helga' visit

Winchester residents are invited to participate in a special event in the art world the exhibit "Andrew Wyeth: The Helga Pictures" at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. Travelling nationally to six museums, the exhibit will be at the MFA this November and December only and has already attracted much attention and brought increased celebrity and critical re-evaluation to the artist.

Admission to the exhibit will be by reserved ticket only. Tour reservations, including tickets and tour recording, have been made by the Community Arts Program for Sunday Nov. 8, at 2 p.m. Transportation will be provided from Winchester to the museum. All adults (above age 16) are invited to register for the trip at the Recreation Department (in McCall Junior High), 721-7125.

The Helga Pictures constitute "a singular venture in American art, according to Willord Scott of the National Gallery of Art. A single model is the subject of a series of drawings, watercolors, and tempera paintings executed over a 15-year span of Wyeth's career. The exhibit thus offers a rare opportunity to view the development of the artist's style and technique.

Advance tickets sales for the general public will begin next month. The Community Arts trip, which obviates transportation parking difficulties and individual trips to the MFA box office for advance ticket purchase and assures an early visit to the exhibit is limited to the first 40 registrants.

"We do all the basics drycleaners do, we just do them better."

For more than 38 years Faulkner's Cleansing has served the cleaning needs of Winchester residents and has built up a reputation for quality workmanship that has made them a trusted name in drycleaning and has made many Winchester residents lifelong customers.

Faulkner's not only drycleans all the usual items including pants suits, dresses, and coats, and cleans and presses shirts, but they also go one step further — Faulkner's inspects every article of clothing and replaces buttons or sews seams at no charge.

"We do all the basics that other drycleaners do, we just do them better," explains owner/proprietor Francis Hardy.

As far as service is concerned Faulkner's Cleansing offers something we tend to associate with past decades — door to door service. At no extra charge Faulkner's will pick up and deliver your drycleaning to your house.

Every Tuesday and Thursday their truck goes through Winchester for convenient door to door service. There is no extra charge for this convenience and customers can arrange for free pick-up and delivery by calling Faulkner's Cleansing at 665-6300.

In addition to cleaning all the usual items, Faulkner's also cleans various household items including slipcovers, draperies, and bedspreads. They are also experts at cleaning both suede and leather garments.

And, if you don't have the space around your home or apartment to store seasonal garb, Faulkner's offers storage for anything from furs to wools. Box storage is available in which you receive a large box to store your clothes which are cleaned and pressed just prior to pickup, and ready to wear when you retrieve them by calling Faulkner's Cleansing several days in advance.

For quality workmanship and the customer satisfaction which has been the trademark of Faulkner's for more than 38 years, or for convenient door to door service at no extra charge, come into Faulkner's at 437 Franklin st. Melrose, or just pick up the phone and call them at 665-6300.

Faulkner's Cleansing is open Monday through Friday, 7-5, Saturdays, 8-5.

Marrone tallies 13 runs in 4th

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Marrone Landscaping used a 13-run fourth inning to bombard Royal Cleaning, 21-6, in the first game of their final series in Winchester Mens Softball B League playoff action.

Royal Cleaning, flying high following their thrilling semifinal series victory over Pisces Pantry, were brought brutally down to earth by the red hot Marrone bats.

Royal Cleaning actually had the lead early on as Jack Najar and Steve Queen scored first inning runs. But the Marrone offense began to churn in the third. Joe Lang smacked a ground rule double to right to drive in Mike Turner and Artie Staffiere to tie the game. Bobby Nutile and Tommy Voltero later lashed consecutive run-scoring singles to give Marrone a two run cushion.

Royal Cleaning came back to tie the game in the fourth. After a sacrifice fly scored Ray Callahan, Bill Littell doubled home Bob Callahan with the tying run. But Paul Sarracco gunned down Littell at the plate as he tried to score on Najar's base hit.

Marrone exploded in the bottom of the fourth. Staffiere was the biggest pain to Royal Cleaning as he drove home four runs with a single and a three-run homer which put an exclamation point on the inning. Lang knocked in two runs with a single and a double and Nutile had a two-run single.

Popp and James win member-guest doubles tourney

Alex Popp and guest Lance James defeated Steve Powers and guest Lou Desmarteaux 7-5, 1-6, 6-4 in the finals of the Winchester Swim and Tennis Club Member-Guest Doubles Tournament.

A record 29 teams participated in this year's fifth annual championship, played over the Aug. 15 and 16 weekend.

Despite court temperatures well above 100 degrees, the finals had two excellent teams battling for more than two hours.

Popp and James broke Lou Desmarteaux's serve 6-4 in the third set and then held serve to close out the match.

In the semi-finals Popp and James defeated Rich Rowe and Bill Wolfe 6-3, 6-4, while Powers and Desmarteaux defeated Joe Palumbo and Ralph Bates 6-3, 6-4.

In the consolation round finals Bob Whitney and Steve Mulloy beat Dick Burke and John Carpenter 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Despite the scorching court conditions, excellent tennis was seen throughout the two-day tournament.

A steak cook out coordinated by club manager John Kelly and assistant manager Michael Minutoli highlighted Saturday evening for all members and their guests that participated in the tournament.

Assistant pro Joe Palumbo coordinated the actual tournament, scheduling matches and overseeing the results.

Carroll joins Colgate backfield

Junior flanker Brian Carroll, a graduate of Winchester High School, reported for pre-season football camp at Colgate University Aug. 15.

He will be one of 75 upperclassmen joining 36 freshmen candidates who reported on Aug. 12.

The upperclassmen took their physicals on Aug. 16 followed by an athletic skills test. The entire squad first practiced together Aug. 17.

After suffering through its first losing season in eight years, this year's edition of the Red Raiders has a "big job" ahead of them.

Colgate opens its 1987 season on Saturday, Sept. 5, when the Red Raiders travel to Duke University.

Kings knot series

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

The Kings knotted their semifinal best of five series with Home Team Realty at one game apiece, 7-2, behind a consistant offense and a near perfect defense in Winchester Mens Softball A League action last week.

Home Team, easily the surprise team of the post season, looked more like the team that struggled to make the playoffs than the outfit that stunned Shields System in the opening round.

Home Team drew first blood in the top of the first inning. Kevin Scully hit a two out single to right which gave the outfielder some trouble.

But the lead was short-lived as the Kings rebounded in the bottom of the frame with four runs of their own. With two outs and the bases full, Jim Alexander walked to bring in Steve Teque with the first run. After Kevin Mahoney scored the second run, Buddy Perkins came through with a clutch single to knock in Steve Krikorian and Alexander.

Home Team put another run across in the second when Paul Collins singled in pinch runner Ed Osterberg but solo runs would not be enough as the Kings put two more runs across in their half of the second to put the outfielder some trouble.

Under-19 girls team captures a second state championship

By BETTY SMALL
Special to the Star

Consistency is the name of the game for the Winchester Under-19 Girls Soccer team that won the Massachusetts Youth Soccer State Championship for the second year in a row. On June 27 and 28 at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, the team played three tournament games to clinch the top spot in the state.

This team is primarily the fall high school varsity team that won the 1986 State School Division I Championship. Along with four college players, Sara Porell (Holy Cross) goalie, Jean O'Brien (Holy Cross) mid-fielder-back, Bonnie Jean Casey (Smith) midfielder, and Julie Guarnotta (University of North Carolina) forward, the graduating seniors are Joanne Shusta goalie, Debbie Maida sweeper, Melissa Skehan, Robyn Rogers, and Alyssa Parker backs, Leslie Strazzullo, Lauren Suvak, Jane O'Neill, and Kim Small midfielders, Meghan Guarnotta, Charlotte Reece, and Katie Binding forwards. Two juniors and captains of the 1987 varsity team, Debbie Nowell and Beth Small, completed a roster of 18 outstanding athletes.

Although injuries plagued the team, they were able to complete the regular season with an impressive 8-1-1 record. In playoff competition they chalked up a decisive victory over Wellesley, the same team that handed Winchester its only loss in the regular season.

At UMass-Amherst the team was really challenged in the quarterfinals by the strong Bay State Soccer Club team. This all-select team took Winchester into overtime but Winchester prevailed with a go-ahead goal by Jean O'Brien to win by the score of 3-2. The semifinal was easier with Winchester overpowering Bingham 4-0. In the finals, against Brookside (an all-select team from the Worcester area), Winchester could not get it together during regulation time and had to sweat it out with penalty kicks after two 15-minute overtimes. With superior goaltending by Sarah Porell and skillfull concentration by the Winchester kickers, the final tally was three penalty kicks to one in favor of Winchester. Earlier Katie Binding had headed the only Winchester goal in the net off a cross from Meghan Guarnotta.

The final score, 2-1, culminated a long and tiring season for the players and their coaches, Bud and Betty Small. Through graduations, proms, finals, jobs, and college selections, these girls proved once again they are made of "the right stuff."

One player summed up the team's attitude when asked how she could play so much soccer in one year: "I love to play soccer," she replied.

Marrone Landscaping takes best of 5 series

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Marrone Landscaping cruised to a 12-6 victory over Royal Cleaning Monday night to sweep the best of five series and win the B League championship in Winchester Mens' Softball action.

Marrone was never really threatened throughout the playoffs as they went undefeated in two series. Monday night's effort completed a superb year in which they won both the regular and post season titles. While Marrone was in a class by itself, Royal Cleaning players certainly had nothing to hang their heads about as they certainly proved themselves to be the "best of the rest" with their semi-final series triumph over Pisces Pantry.

Marrone took immediate control of the game in the bottom of the first inning as they put across six runs. The first six batters to come to the plate all scored and the game appeared to be blowout material. Joe Lang knocked in Mike Turner with the first run and then Al Nasson smacked a three-run homer to left to break the game open early. After Sam Bellino's sacrifice fly brought home Bobby Nutile and Tommy Voltero scored on an infield roller, Royal Cleaning already had their backs up against the wall.

However, Royal Cleaning responded to the challenge with five runs in the next two innings to creep within one run. In the second, Bob Campbell got things rolling with a single to deliver Bob Callahan with one run and another crossed the plate following a rare error in the outfield. Bill Littell then lashed a single to knock in Campbell to cut the deficit to, 6-3.

In the third inning, Royal Cleaning put two more runs across courtesy of a little luck. Second baseman Mike Sarracco lost Bob Callahan's towering pop fly in the lights allowing Jack Najar and Ray Callahan to score and suddenly they were back in business, 6-5.

Marrone rebounded with a run in the bottom of the third inning. Jim Maconochie came through with the key blow as he singled in Sam Bellino with the pad run. But Royal Cleaning would not let them slip away as they came back with a run in the top of the fifth. Steve Queen scored on Bob Callahan's sacrifice fly to pull them within one run, 7-6.

But that would be as close as they would come as Marrone continued to produce runs in the fifth and sixth innings. Voltero singled in Lang in the fifth and then Marrone broke the game open for good with four runs in the bottom of the sixth. Phil DiPietro opened the floodgates with a single to bring home Maconochie and then Mike Bellino delivered the crushing blow with a two-run single to put the game out of reach and the championship in hand.

Delicate lines merge in complex subtleties

By KAREN BUCKLEY
Special to the Star

Winchester is harboring a talented young woman in its midst.

Maria DiFronzo of Johnson Road is a budding free-lance artist with big plans.

DiFronzo is a 1986 graduate of the New England School of Art and Design (NESAD) in Boston where she majored in fashion illustration. She was awarded a perfect score, 5.0, on her portfolio during her senior evaluation.

Since graduation, DiFronzo has been busy rendering portraits and illustrations as well as designing sweatshirts.

DiFronzo noted that while she has always been interested in art, she became more serious about pursuing her talents at Winchester High School.

In high school, DiFronzo mainly concentrated on black and white illustrations. She submitted artwork to The Boston Globe Show in both junior and senior high school, and was chosen best senior artist by her graduating class.

"I decided to go to art school because I wanted to make a career out of illustration," she said. "I enjoyed doing it, and I felt a drive to express myself through art."

The decision to attend NESAD was made with advice from her Winchester High School senior art professors Tom Tracy and John Walker. According to DiFronzo, they suggested NESAD because they felt it was one of the best art schools in Boston.

"I wanted to stay in the Boston area. Both Mr. Tracy and Mr. Walker felt NESAD could offer me the most with regard to what I was looking for," she said.

DiFronzo noted that her family also had a strong influence on her decision to pursue a career in art. "I wasn't sure what I wanted to do, but my parents really encouraged me to follow my art," said DiFronzo.

Her sister, Jodi, also prompted the decision, as she was enrolled at NESAD at the time as a graphics/advertising major.

The advice to attend art school was well taken. In her first of three years, DiFronzo learned techniques which she would be able to apply in her second and third years. After the first year, she declared fashion illustration as her major.

For DiFronzo, this was the most thorough route to take based on her interests because the major offered a number of life drawing courses. In this way, she learned more about drawing the human figure, the most difficult subject to draw, and was faced with a challenge.

"The teachers at NESAD really cared about what the students were doing. They encouraged me to strive to be better," noted DiFronzo.

"In high school, you tend to be satisfied with your work because you're not comparing yourself with professionals as much."

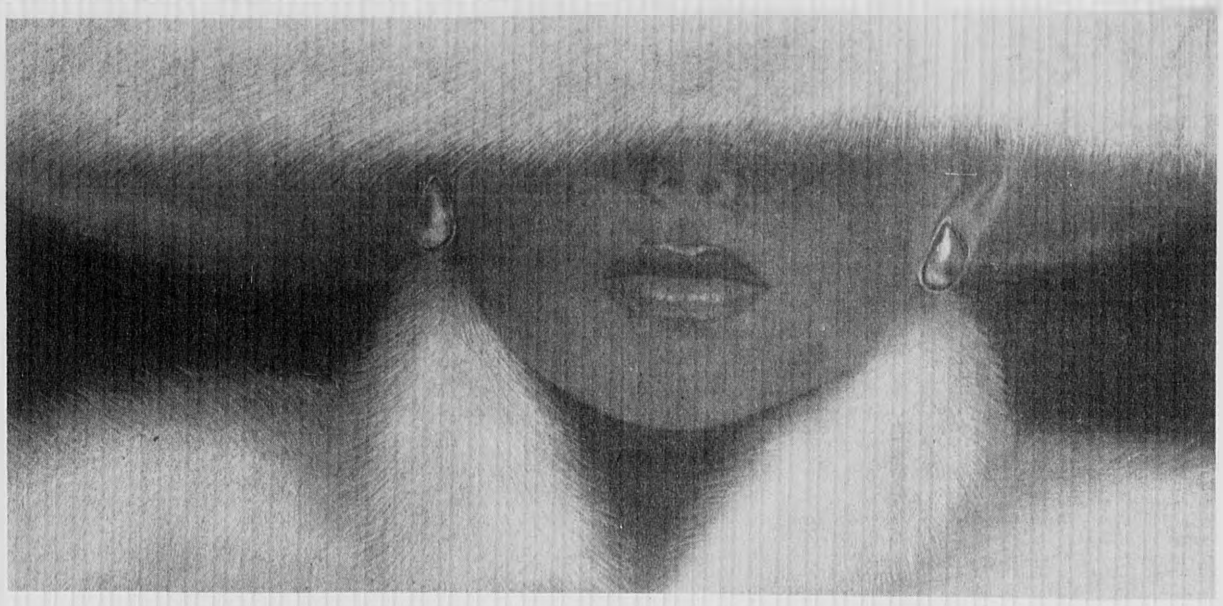
Art school, says DiFronzo, is different.

"You are always trying to do better because you're comparing yourself more with professionals, with great artists," said DiFronzo. "When you look at, say, Michaelangelo's work, you feel like a peanut. You're never satisfied until you feel that what you have produced is the best you could possibly do."

DiFronzo's determination and perseverance have paid off, landing her a number of interesting free-lance jobs. Portraits and illustration are her specialty, which she prefers to do from photographs.

"I have done quick portraits in a class, but I like using photographs as reference better," she said. In this way, she can spend more time without making her subject sit for long sessions.

In addition, her clients know what they are getting. She feels that if they like the picture of themselves, they'll like the portrait.



When Maria DiFronzo was given the word "glitz" as a theme for a drawing assignment at the New England School of Art and Design, this sophisticated lady is what came out of her prisma pencils.

DiFronzo attempts to create a sharper contrast when using photographs.

"I try to make the darks darker and the lights lighter. This creates a more dramatic feeling."

In addition to drawings for private clients, DiFronzo has three portraits of Elvis Presley on display in the Elvis Presley Museum in Memphis, Tenn.

The owner of the museum, Jimmy Velvet, was a friend of Presley. Velvet also performed at various times with Presley, and himself sang the hits Teen Angel and Mission Bells in the 1950s.

Velvet saw a full-color portrait of Elvis that DiFronzo had done for a private collector and was impressed. He felt that she had captured a unique likeness that other artists often miss.

"That was exciting for me because a lot of people have drawn Elvis, and it was a challenge for me to do it well," said DiFronzo.

She was asked by Velvet to provide portraits for display in his museum. The request resulted in the three portraits which are currently being shown in Memphis, one of Presley as a child, and two in his later years, one full-color and one black-and-white.

The Elvis Presley connection continues for DiFronzo as she and Velvet are presently making plans for additional portraits, possibly for reproduction.

"I like to draw Elvis because he's an interesting person with beautiful features. It's a pleasure to look at his face for hours while I draw it. It's very exciting and rewarding to have pictures in the museum," said DiFronzo.

In her portraits and illustrations, DiFronzo prefers to use prisma and conti pencils. She feels that through these mediums, she has greater control because she can define features better.

"I think pencil lines can give me a delicate touch. I can create fine detail," she noted.

Currently DiFronzo is attempting to work more with atmosphere. This, she feels, allows her to convey a specific feeling to the viewer.

"An atmosphere can change the whole drawing. For example, if I have an illustration of a little boy and I put him in a meadow or at the beach, it's beautiful. However, if I put him in an alley way or in a lonely corner, it could be quite sad. Atmosphere can be valuable in triggering a certain emotion."

Besides rendering portraits and illustrations, she has also been designing sweatshirts for the past two years. What began as a gift for a friend has developed into a small private business.

DiFronzo began by drawing faces on her shirts, but has recently moved to more abstract designs. She uses acrylic-based paint to create unique compositions on each shirt.

DiFronzo has also been experimenting with acrylics on canvas in addition to her sweatshirts. Through her pencil drawings, she has achieved realism. However, with acrylics, she is attempting to develop a looser technique.

"If you begin by drawing tightly, you recognize how things should look. Then it's easier to loosen up your style. You tend to know where things belong because you're used to looking at them more closely," she said. "To tighten up your drawing from a loose style is much more difficult."

This style is also being perfected through her sweatshirts.

"I like doing the sweatshirts because I'm forced to draw more freely, more loosely."

"Art school was a challenge that took constant dedication, but it was well worth it. It was tough, but I'm glad I did it," she said.

However, she plans to continue to try to perfect her technique.

"There is always room for improvement, but each drawing I produce is the best I can possibly do at that time. I only hope I can continue to improve."

NyQuil commercial shooting interrupts the flow of life at the DeMarinis' on Sheffield because she'd been told that her father was too sick to take her to get a puppy. Suddenly, father walked out through the screen door, stood next to the girl and said, "Ready?" She jumped up, he picked her up and spun her around as the camera zoomed in on her beaming face.

This sounds simple, but there were about 20 takes. One problem was the audio. By now there were cars running up and down the street as people went to work. Someone drove by in an open Rolls-Royce convertible. He was gawking at the "set," and people on the set were gawking at him.

Workmen were also beginning their day's work, and one could hear hammers, saws and heavy machinery from a house being built down the street, as well as lawn mowers, airplanes and all sorts of bedlham which would normally go unnoticed.

Crew members ran themselves ragged as they asked various workmen to stop and resume in sync with each take. The sound man came close to cardiac arrest when the house painter next door unloaded a big floor sander and began using it on their porch.

Shortly, the puppies arrived, in cages and yelping. Two attendants quickly moved them to the farthest part of the yard. Dog food was set out, and they were released from their cages under the watchful eye of the attendants. They frolicked as only puppies can, and were a delight to everyone.

Next scene was the "Pet Shop." This consisted of a large table with a bow window set on it. The camera was behind the window looking out, with four of the puppies "in the window" immediately in front of the camera, and the lucky pup in the arms of the little girl in front of the window. The director decided to set this up at the edge of the driveway, facing the street, instead of the garage as originally planned. Cars were deliberately parked in front, and another car was repeatedly driven by, to create the appearance of a business street. A store window is a reflector, so huge screens of black cloth were strung all over to kill reflections. Fortunately there was no wind.

By now it was 10 a.m., and the catering truck arrived. A neighbor graciously consented to let them use her driveway. The truck had a fully equipped kitchen. We ran a power line out there to run their refrigerator and other equipment. They began to set up tables and chairs in the back yard, for the luncheon "banquet."

The total lighting load was about 10 kilowatts, about the same as the electric stove with everything turned on. The electric meter was spinning like a top.

They used a film camera which was also fitted with a video camera, which time-shared the scene with the film shutter when it was running. Thus, they had the best of both worlds: the high resolution and superior quality of film, and instant replay capability of video.

The Eastman negative-color film was balanced for tungsten lighting (3200 Kelvin), and the lights were at 5600 K, which is "textbook" sunlight. (Real sunlight varies quite a bit.) So, the camera looked at the world through a yellow-orange filter.

Next, the action moved to the second floor, for the "bedroom scene." The electricians ran a power line down the laundry chute, and erected a scaffold in the back of the house to hold one of the big 6KW lights outside the bedroom window, in order to simulate the morning sunlight streaming in. Eight strong men somehow got the camera dolly up the stairs.

The big bedroom and upstairs foyer were jammed with equipment and people. Bundles of cables ran down into the lower foyer, where some of the crew sat in "directors" chairs clustered around a video monitor.

There were four bedroom shots, each with a different camera position and setup. The girl ran into the room where daddy was sleeping, and tried to rouse him. Mom came in and hustled her out of the room, telling her that daddy is too sick to be disturbed.

All the while, the bottle of Nyquil sat conpiciously on the small table next to the bed, ¼ full and with a small paper cup next to it. A tiny bit of green fluid was visible at the bottom of the cup. A beam of sunlight played through the window on the bottle and it gleamed in the morning light.

Another shot showed dad now up, and in a shirt and slacks, putting on his shoe, then a sweater, as he sniffled and walked out of the room to go downstairs.

One surprise was the use of a smoke/fog generator in all the indoor scenes. The smoke diffuses the light, and actually raises the light level, and imparts an incredibly beautiful softness to the whole scene. The smoke/vapor is made by evaporating mineral oil, and is not at all objectionable. At times the person running the machine became overzealous, and you could barely see through it. Things would come to a halt until the smoke dissipated.

About halfway through these sequences, it was time for lunch. A cardinal rule about location shooting is good food. A buffet had been set up in the yard. Chicken with peppers, cooked in a white wine sauce with rice pilaff, an artichoke salad, minestrone, fresh-baked pies, and all sorts of fruit, juices, soda and mineral waters. Some of the people sat at the tables, but most chose to sit in small groups on the lawn. For an hour the place was transformed into a catered picnic on a glorious summer afternoon.

The people were impressive. All up-beat, very intelligent, highly skilled and exceptionally considerate of others. The sense of comradery was very strong. This is mostly a freelance business, and natural selection takes place. If you're not good, you don't get work. It's a fast-moving life where people know each other, and depend very critically on each other's performance. As one of the group leaders said, "The only thing that matters is how you did on your last job. Mess up badly once, and you're done."

We asked what would be done with the commercial, and the process is interesting. First, it is shown to small live audiences and tested for reactions. If that goes well, it is then put on the air in a test market, in competition with other Nyquil commercials which will be tested in other limited markets. The commercials that sell the most Nyquil in the test markets will then be used nationally.

What they did with colors and lighting was beautiful to behold. The last shots of the day were downstairs in the foyer. Warm "morning sunlight" streamed in from the window over the stairs, bathing the characters and the victorian woodwork in an aura of glowing softness. Mother and daughter sat on the stairs and talked quietly.

"But he promised!"

The girl was marvelous. At the end of that scene, the whole crew exploded in a standing ovation. They knew this talented little tyke had given them all the winning pitch.

One short scene between mom and dad, and they were done.

The breakdown was as fast and well organized as the setup. Tons of gear had to be put back into cases and loaded into the trucks. There was business to be done too. Everyone's hours were tallied, the talent and some others were paid then and there. A case of cold beer suddenly appeared.

They went through the house and grounds picking up every bit of debris, and put everything back exactly the way it had been.

The last car left at 8:30 p.m., disappearing into the darkness. Now, once again we are alone and the house is silent. There is no evidence that anything has happened. The emotional letdown is as awesome as the day's events.

To the production crew, it was just another workday. Tomorrow morning at 6, they will do another commercial somewhere in downtown Boston.

But that's life in the fast lane.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR PROPOSALS

Sealed proposals for the construction of about 585 feet of 6-inch and 8-inch sewers and appurtenant construction for The Niles Company, Inc., Boston, Massachusetts (hereinafter called the Owner's Representative), prepared in accordance with instructions and other provisions of the Contract Documents, will be received by the Niles Company, Inc., acting for the Mill Brook Condominiums, at the office of the Mill Brook Condominiums, 995 Massachusetts Avenue, Arlington, Massachusetts, until 2:00 p.m., prevailing time, on Thursday, September 10, 1987.

The Contract Documents including Specifications and Drawings may be examined at the office of the Mill Brook Condominiums, and at the office of Fay, Spofford & Thorndike, Inc., 191 Spring Street, Lexington, Massachusetts, on and after August 24, 1987, every weekday except Saturday between the hours of nine o'clock a.m. and four o'clock p.m., and copies thereof may be obtained at the office of Fay, Spofford & Thorndike, Inc. upon payment of $20.00 for each set, for which a refund will be made if returned to the Engineer in good condition within three weeks after the opening of bids. Payment for Drawings and Specifications shall be by check made out to "Fay, Spofford & Thorndike, Inc."

A prebid conference will be held on September 7, 1987 at 10:00 o'clock a.m. at the office of the Mill Brook Condominiums, 995 Massachusetts Avenue, Arlington, Massachusetts, to review contract requirements. All bidders are urged to attend and will be held knowledgeable of what transpired, whether present or not.

Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check of the bidder in the amount of $2,000 as security. The certified check shall be payable to The Niles Company, Inc., and shall not be enclosed in the sealed envelope containing the Proposal. All checks, except that of the bidder to whom the contract is awarded, will be returned as early as practicable after the awarding of the contract, and in any case within thirty days. The check of the bidder to whom the contract is awarded will be returned within forty-eight hours after the Contract Documents have been executed.

No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of thirty days after the date set for the opening thereof.

The estimated approximate quantities involved in the Contract are shown in the Schedule of Prices in the Agreement and the work is shown and the Contract requirements are stated in the Instructions to Bidders, Agreement, Bond, Specifications and Contract Drawings.

A surety bond, by a company satisfactory to the Owner, in an amount equal to one hundred (100) per cent of the "Estimated Total Contract Price," recorded in the Agreement section of the contract as executed, will be required from the successful bidder for the faithful performance of the contract. The surety bond shall conform to the form included in the Contract Documents.

Muggia reprimands activists

says he notified the Conservation Commission. Elaine Vreeland, the conservation administrator, said later that she went to the site, saw the activity and asked the workers to stop. According to her, they did. An officer was already at the site when she arrived, she added.

What took place next is a matter of dispute between Muggia and Lombardi. Lombardi says he said nothing to the elder Iannino when the man approached him on the street and began berating him for supposedly shutting down the job.

Muggia, who was not there, but says she was "downtown," asserts that several "reliable witnesses" saw Lombardi and Sopper engaging in "heavy-handed" behavior toward Iannino.

"According to eye witnesses, the man felt threatened," she said at the Monday meeting.

Muggia agreed that the younger Iannino was engaging in illegal behavior, but objected to the process by which he was stopped.

"We are not mandated to take any action," she told the board, and added that board members have official status only when meeting as a board in an official capacity. "The rest of the time we are citizens," she said.

Lombardi defended his behavior. "Whatever story you heard is the wrong story," he responded to her accusations. "You haven't got the right story and it's not your position to talk down to me." He repeated his assertion that he had not spoken to either Iannino. "I have five witnesses," he said.

"You may need your witnesses," Muggia replied.

There was "a lot more to it than you've described," she said. "This kind of confrontation raises a real problem for us as a board. It got very hot down there. No one should feel intimidated by a town official. Using language of that sort is unacceptable."

Muggia explained for the record that the town manager is the proper agent of action in the event of a problem in town. She said he was not notified during the blasting incident.

Lombardi countered that the town manager was on vacation at the time. Muggia responded that the assistant town manager was empowered to act in his stead, and he was not notified either.

Sopper, who was at the scene, backed up Lombardi's version of the story.

Muggia explained after the meeting that in her opinion, silence is acceptance, and she did not want to remain silent on such an incident.

She called for the board to behave with politeness and respect toward town citizens, not to "gang up" on people and "harass" them.

"When I ran for the Board of Selectmen, I didn't marry you," Lombardi said. "I do my thing, and if you don't like it, too bad."

"There was an ugly confrontation" down there, Muggia insisted. "I am no longer willing to let things like that happen."

In a later phone call, Vreeland said that while she did see the elder Iannino and Lombardi in "conversation," there were "more people that were cooperative than anything else."

OBITUARIES

Bernhard Larson

Bernard A. (Ben) Larson of Bedford died August 9 at the Bedford Veteran's Administration Hospital. He was 89.

Mr. Larson attended Winchester schools and was a member of the Winchester High School class of 1915. His family lived on Main Street for over 50 years.

During World War I, Mr. Larson flew with the U.S. Army Air Service as a motor tester. After leaving the army, he was employed by Alvin T. Fuller as a manager of the used car department of the Boston Packard Co. for 22 years. Later he became owner of West End Chevrolet, Waltham and College Chevrolet in Wellesley.

At the outbreak of World War II, he sold these dealerships to take the position of personnel manager of General Electric's Everett supercharger plant. Mr. Larson received many commendations from the army for innovative war production drives.

From 1953 until his retirement in 1970, Mr. Larson operated B.A. Larson and Company in Bedford, a flag and banner supply company.

He is survived by his wife, Eileen L. (Oliver) Larson of Bedford, a sister, Evelyn Larson of Suncook, N.H., a daughter, Cynthia E. Dorman of Arlington, Va., a son, Kenneth D. Larson of Bedford and five grandchildren.

A graveside ceremony was conducted by the Rev. James Whittaker, V.A. chaplain, at Wildwood Cemetery on August 12.

Mr. Larson was a life member of Aleppo Temple and wished memorial contributions to be made to the Shriners Burn Institute in Boston.

John Pattelena

John J. Pattelena of 3 Coleen Circle in Burlington died Aug. 13 in Lahey Clinic Medical Center after a brief illness. He was 69.

Mr. Pattelena was born in Woburn. He was a former resident of Woburn, Winchester and Wilmington and lived for the past 15 years in Burlington.

He graduated from Woburn High School in 1936 and was a U.S. Navy World War II veteran.

He was a retired professional industrial engineer with the R.C.A. company in Burlington, where he worked for 20 years before retiring five years ago.

Mr. Pattelena was a former alderman of Ward 6 in North Woburn.

He played baseball for the North Woburn Reds and the Navy Yard Park League baseball team and was a past member of the Woburn Lions.

Catherine McElhiney

Catherine F. (Galvin) McElhiney of 811 Main St. died Aug. 16 at Choate Hospital in Woburn after a long illness. She was 79.

Mrs. McElhiney was born in Medford and had been a resident of Winchester for the past 60 years.

She was educated in the Medford school system.

She was a housewife.

Mrs. McElhiney belonged to the Immaculate Conception Church.

Wife of the late George H. McElhiney of Winchester, she is survived by two daughters, Mary L. Tirrell of Weymouth and Catherine A. Farrell of Dorchester, six grandchildren, four great-grandchildren and two sisters, Elizabeth Ghuzzi of Somerville and Nora Nicoll of Medford.

The funeral was held from the Lane Funeral Home at 760 Main St. Aug. 19 followed by a funeral Mass at the Immaculate Conception Church.

Burial was at Wildwood Cemetery.

Harriet Jacobs

Harriet M. Jacobs of Winchester died Aug. 16 at Winchester Hospital after a long illness. She was 74.

A native of Wilmington, Vt., she lived in Winchester for more than 30 years.

She worked in Boston for many years.

She is survived by a sister, Grace E. Jacobs of Winchester, two brothers, Ralph L. Jacobs, also of Winchester, and Maxwell G. Jacobs of Magnolia.

The funeral was from the Robert J. Costello Funeral Home on Aug. 18 followed by a funeral Mass in the Church of St. Mary. The Rev. George Butera officiated.

Burial was in the Wildwood Cemetery.

Doris DeLuca

Doris B. DeLuca of Stoneham died July 30 at the Bearhill Nursing Home. She was 76.

Mrs. DeLuca was born in Kansas and lived in Winchester.

She owned DeLuca Real Estate and had an office on Main Street.

Mrs. DeLuca was generous with donations to many organizations.

She was the wife of the late Michael DeLuca.

Mrs. DeLuca is survived by two nieces, Deanna and Nina Clayton of Kansas.

Funeral services were held August 1 at St. Eulalia's Church.

Burial was at Mt. Auburn Cemetery in Cambridge.

Arrangements were by the Daniel F. O'Brien Funeral Home.

James Fitzgerald

James J. Fitzgerald Jr. of 123 Church St. died Aug. 14 at Winchester Hospital after a brief illness. He was 81.

A life-long resident of Winchester, Mr. Fitzgerald was a 1924 graduate of Winchester High School, where he had been the captain of the football team. He graduated from Tufts University's College of Engineering in 1929.

He was a retired contractor who owned and operated the James J. Fitzgerald Contracting Co. in Winchester for 35 years.

He was a member of the Lodge of Elks number 1445 and was a past member of the Winchester Lions Club. He served terms as a selectman and was a 32nd Team U.P.I. All American Football Player for Tufts University.

He is survived by his wife, Mary E. (Lyons) Fitzgerald of Winchester, two sons, James J. Fitzgerald of Philadelphia, Pa., and Bruce K. Fitzgerald of Camp Hill, Pa., a brother, Nicholas H. Fitzgerald of Winchester, two sisters, Harriet E. Fitzgerald of Winchester and Mary H. Carroll of Cohasset, and five grandchildren.

The funeral was held from the Lane Funeral Home at 760 Main St. Aug. 17 followed by a funeral Mass at St. Mary's Church. The Rev. Steven Cohen officiated.

Burial was at Wildwood Cemetery.

Memorial donations in his name may be made to the American Heart Association, 33 Fourth Ave., Needham.

Mrs. Shaprut was a graduate of the University of Vermont and the Winchester school system.

She had been a court reporter in the Suffolk Superior Court.

She was also a member of the Parish of the Epiphany, where she sang in the church choir for many years.

She is survived by a son, Gerald C. Shaprut of Providence, R.I., her mother, Mrs. Gerald D. Curtis of Winchester, and a brother, Dr. Leslie M. Curtis, D.M.D., of Winchester.

A memorial service was held in the Church of the Epiphany Aug. 17. The Rev. John J. Bishop officiated.

Burial was in Wildwood Cemetery. Funeral arrangements were by the Robert J. Costello Funeral Home.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society.

Settima Prosperi-Rocchi

Settima Prosperi-Rocchi of Surrey Road died August 11 at Tewksbury Hospital. She was 77.

Mrs. Rocchi was born in Italy. She was a seamstress.

Mrs. Rocchi was the wife of the late Natalino Rocchi.

She is survived by a son, Alfredo Rocchi of Winchester.

The Funeral Mass was held at St. Eulalia's Church, August 13.

Burial was at St. Michael's Cemetery in Jamaica Plain.

Arrangements by the Lane Funeral Home.

Committee does its best

pointed out various discrepancies in the statistics used in the report. He said the 1980 census data cited was out of date, the description of lot sizes was incorrect, and that the mix of data from different years was confusing and misleading.

"This is what the state is going to hold against you," he asserted.

Berman answered that the main section of the report was "picked up" from last year's report.

Schmitt found that a section referred to in the table of contents didn't exist in the text. That section is the action plan.

Selectmen Chairman Judith Muggia asked whether the committee had a plan for informing the citizenry of the progress of housing in Winchester.

Berman said no.

Muggia cited this as further evidence that the committee is understaffed. Board members recognized that the committee is its voice in housing issues. The Housing Authority is a creature of the state, while the committee reports directly to the board.

Lombardi wanted to know whether the committee monitors the authority's actions.

Berman talked about how his group had "tracked down rumors", and helped a questioner determine whether Section 8 rental certificates were available. He said the authority would not reveal specific information about individuals in its programs.

But Lombardi wanted more. He said that the job of the committee was to see that the town's subsidized housing was fairly distributed. "If we have only lily-whites in the seven units (of 705 housing), we've defeated all this work," he said.

Berman asked for direction from the board.

Schmitt told him that the message was to assert a "higher profile" and said that the committee does have the authority to get the information necessary to determine whether housing is being distributed fairly or not.

"We're going to try to fill out your committe over the next couple of months," Muggia promised.

As for the report, "Before we can sign off on it," Muggia said, "we want to see you again."

Blood drive in Winchester

During the summer months, when many individuals are away on vacation, blood supplies traditionally hit dangerously low levels. Summer is also a time when, with more people traveling, the possibility of increased auto accidents can increase the need for blood.

To help replenish Red Cross blood supplies, Winchester Hospital will host a bloodmobile on Tuesday, Aug. 25, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the main lobby.

open and we are still diligently working on it with the hope that the landlord (Locatelli Trust), the town and the state will give their approval."

Many restauranteurs have expressed interest in the property, although the exact number has not been determined, Rogers said.

Rogers is "optimistic" that a new tenant will be found soon and that the town will gain a third restaurant of "superior class."

The new tenant must apply to the Board of Selectman for a liquor license. Only three public licenses are issuable in town. One is currently held by Lucia's, the other by Maximilians.

Barbaro gets 26 months

from the MDC since he was indicted last Nov. 6, and he says it will be "only a matter of time" before the MDC terminates his employment.

Barbaro's attorney Daniel O'Connell said that an appeal would be largely based on the question of a double search warrant, which he called "a novel appellate issue worthy of pursuing." He said that during the trial Judge Zobel illegally issued a second search warrant for Barbaro and Kauler's properties after a suppression notice had been obtained for a previous warrant.

"I can hang on for 100 years in jail," Barbaro said, "but I'm concerned about my family." He said that he had wavered for a month on whether to appeal because of the cost involved, but now several friends have offered their support.

Barbaro's son Bryan, who lives in the Woburn home that he jointly owns with his father, was included in a list provided by the District Attorney of those charged in connection with the insurance fraud scheme. But the year long continued probation he received, according to his father, was unrelated to those cases. Barbaro said his son had been charged with falsifying his income and applying for an excessive loan amount so that the two could purchase the Woburn duplex.

According to the District Attorney Scott Harshbarger's office, false insurance claims for amounts ranging from $1,700 to $35,000 were filed between 1979 and 1985 by the 23 defendants, many of whom pleaded guilty to the charges early this summer. Harshbarger said a 13-month investigation revealed that most of the claims involved automobiles that were reported as vandalized, stolen or damaged. A National Grange claims manager would arrange to have the vehicles falsely appraised by one of two adjustment firms involved in the scheme.

He said Barbaro was a friend of Phillip Ragusa, owner of Commonwealth Adjustment Bureau Inc., through which many of the false claims were filed.

"These were not isolated incidents involving individuals driven by economic needs. Rather, they were motivated by a desire to accumulate personal luxuries by taking a shortcut and stealing from others," Harshbarger said. "Law enforcement will not tolerate white-collar crime such as insurance fraud in any form, in any amount, at any level."

DPW to double compost spraying presented to the board. "This area was selected in order to make it convenient for users...to dispose of compost material and to allow the D.P.W. the ability to monitor the activity.

"Between the period of January March 1985, the D.P.W. hauled approximately 20,000 cubic yards of compost material to the cemetery for the eventual manufacturing of loam. Approximately 5,000 cublic yards of loam has been made but there still remains an abundance of material. It is hoped that the excess material can be utilized in conjuction with the playfield restoration program.

"The primary concern with reference to the current method and location relates to aesthetics and odors generated. In order to abate the odor problem the compost material is periodically sprayed with an odor counteractant."

Maurer expressed "some concern" for the people in the neighborhood of the transfer station, but said that trucking the material to the "trash to energy facility in North Andover" would cost the town $190,000.

Selectman Robert Deering, who is the selectmen's delegate to Town Meeting on transfer issues, said the true cost was closer to $120,000.

Maurer said that attempts had been made to give the compost away, but that no one was interested in it. The compost costs more to truck than the material is worth.

Serratore said that when the town owned an incinerator, the problem was less acute. The pile that exists today, he said, is a seven-year accumulation.

"We don't have too many options," he said, noting that the town generates 2,800 tons of compost per year.

Selectman Thomas Schmitt questioned whether the spraying could retard the composting process. Serratore assured him that it would not.

Selectman Francis Sopper said that he had brought the issue before the board because the situation was getting "intolerable" for the neighborhood. "The spraying process doesn't work," he asserted.

He offered a suggestion to use the compost to fill a section of Wildwood Cemetery where a steep slope currently exists. He said the gravel and loam in that area could be removed, the hole could be filled with compost and a layer of gravel and loam could be laid on top to keep the odor down. That would "gradually ease the slope" in the cemetery, he said.

Serratore said that such an idea had been tried, and that as a result of the compressability of compost, "stones are sinking" in the graveyard.

He also asserted that unless transfers were made daily, the odor problem would still exist. The odor is worst when rain, heat and humidity accelerate the decay process, he explained.

Deering said moving the compost to the cemetery would make a "stink in two places." Using the cemetery, a place of a certain sanctity, as a dump would be inappropriate, he said.

Sopper said that he sought a better quality of life for all residents and that he would "rather take care of people who are alive than those already dead."

Schmitt said he didn't find the odor all that offensive and said compost does not make very good fill because it packs down to 1/10 of its original bulk.

Sopper said he was still looking for answers.

In the end, Serratore agreed to double the spraying.

Simple lines, practical furniture

My heavenly home is here
No longer need I wait
To cross the foaming river
Or pass the pearly gate
The angels all around me
With kindness them surround me
And a glorious cause them we rejoice me
And my heavenly home is here

Shaker hymn from Mount Lebanon, N.Y., 1884

Nested oval wooden boxes, tall brooms, and practical furniture with elegant yet simple lines are just a small part of the legacy that the Shakers gave to the world. A Christian religious sect that flourished in the United States during the 19th century, the Shakers wanted to make heaven on earth, to live their lives in a manner that reflected the beauty and perfection of a spiritual heaven.

Separated from the rest of the world by choice and primarily self-sufficient, the Shakers lived in established communities. From 1787 to 1898, 24 of these settlements were founded from Maine to Florida, including four in Massachusetts (Hancock, Harvard, Shirley and Savoy).

Even though Shakers no longer live in Massachusetts, their lives and lifestyle may still be seen at the Hancock Shaker Village, a living museum with one of the finest collections of Shaker artifacts and a unique program where master craftspeople recreate Shaker goods and furniture using 19th-century techniques.

Established in 1790, Hancock occupies 1,000 acres in the Berkshires of western Massachusetts, just five miles west of Pittsfield. The Shakers called Hancock The City of Peace.

The settlement reached its peak around 1830, when it housed approximately 300 converts who earned their living by tending agriculture and other industries such as furniture building and weaving. After 1850, the population began to diminish. When the last Shaker Brother died there in 1959, the three remaining Sisters sold the property to the Hancock Shaker Village, Inc., a non-profit organization, in 1960. The Village is now a Massachusetts Historic Landmark and a National Historic Landmark.

Visitors may take either a self-guided walking tour of the Village or a scheduled tour at 10:30 a.m. or 2 p.m. The latter also includes a 30-minute program of Shaker music and dance at 11:30 a.m. or 3 p.m.; however, you don't have to be part of the tour group to attend the performance.

No matter how you tour the Village, wear comfortable shoes and allow at least two hours for a visit, for there's much to see and learn, and questions are not only welcomed by encouraged. (The Village also has an archive with journals, books, and photographs. Usage is free, however, an appointment is required.)

Through careful restoration, 20 buildings are now open to the public. Each building is staffed by an interpreter or a master craftsperson – an expert in a specialized area who recreates Shaker ironware, tinware, baskets, oval boxes, or linens by 19th-century techniques – who will gladly explain the importance of their building to the Shaker way of life.

The Round Stone Barn (1826) was the center of the Shaker dairy business. Cows were stabled on the first level, while the hay was brought by wagon to the upper level and deposited into a central haymow. Destroyed by fire in 1864, the barn was rebuilt with a cellar. The brick ell, which houses a permanent exhibit on Shaker agriculture, was also built the same year.

The Cemetery (1813) contains the remains of more than 250 Shakers. In 1943, the small initialed and dated gravestones were replaced by one single monument.

The Meeting House (1793) was the place for Sunday worship services, which were frequently attended by outsiders or World's People. The second floor contained the living quarters of the Elders and Eldaresses of the Ministry. The present building was brought from Shirley, Mass. in 1952 and is an exact replica of the original.

The Sisters' Dairy and Weave Shop (1795) was the women's work area, since the Shakers kept the sexes separate. The first floor area includes the dairy, buttery, and medical department. Weaving and spinning rooms are upstairs. A dye garden with plants used by the Sisters is near the west doorway.

The Herb Garden is patterned after the one at Mount Lebanon, N.Y. It contains many of the medicinal and culinary herbs used by the Shakers.

The Icehouse (1894) held 200 tons of ice that was harvested during the winter from nearby Richmond Pond. The lattice-work wall design allowed cold, fresh air to pass to the lower level where the meats and vegetables were stored.

Visitors' Center and Village Office contains information, lunch room, and book store with gift items. Items made at the Village by craftspeople are sold in the Barn Complex.

There are also workshops and other activities held at the Village all year. Future events include: Sept. 1-30, Shaker Workmanship 1987 Exhibit; Sept. 27, Textile Day; Sept. 28-Oct. 2, Timber Frame Construction Workshop; Oct. 10-12, Autumn Weekend and Antiques Show; Oct. 24, Harvest Supper.

Additional fall workshops on basketmaking, herbs, holiday greens, and other topics are planned. Call the Village for schedule information. All workshops are held in cooperation with the Division of Continuing Education at Berkshire Community College in Pittsfield.

What To Do

Who were the Shakers?

One of the few religions founded by a woman, the Shakers were begun in England during the 1750s by Ann Lee, who was born in Manchester in 1736. An offshoot of the English Quakers, the Shakers received their name because of the spontaneous dancing, whirling, and trembling during religious worship.

Convinced through visions that a celibate life devoted to hard work and virtue was the best way to serve God, Lee joined a small group of former Quakers and began her new religion. Recognized as the spiritual leader of the group, she became known as Mother Ann.

Despite persecution by the Church of England for their unusual beliefs and worship, the Shakers kept practicing their faith. In 1774, however, Mother Ann and eight followers decided to leave England for religious freedom in the American colonies.

Penniless upon arrival, they spent the next two years earning money for a home of their own, which was established at Niskeyuna, in the wilderness outside Albany, N.Y.

The first converts were made in 1780. So many people were drawn to the Shaker religion that Mother Ann and a few followers made a missionary journey to Massachusetts and Connecticut to seek even more coverts.

All Shaker communities were organized according to the Shaker fundamental principles: celibacy, pacifism, separation from the world, separate but equal sexes, communal property, and confession of sin. They were also divided into families with elders, eldresses, deacons, deaconesses, brothers and sisters.

The Shakers were largely self-sufficient and the design of their goods and furniture reflected order, harmony, and utility. Each product was meant to last forever.

The sense of simplicity extended to Shaker dress as well and all clothing was handmade of wool for winter and linen for summer. Sisters wore outfits with long skirts, and plain hats and bonnets. Ornamentation of any sort, be it on clothing or furniture, was forbidden. Shaker Brothers wore broad-brimmed hats, straight coats, vests and pantaloons. Hair and beards were trimmed precisely alike.

There were 24 Shaker settlements in America. They are listed here along with the year of their founding: Niskeyuna (later called Watervliet), N.Y. (1787); New Lebanon (later called Mount Lebanon), N.Y. (1787); Hancock (1790); Enfield, Conn. (1790); Harvard (1791); Tyringham (1792); Canterbury, N.H. (1792); Shirley (1793) Enfield, N.H. (1793); Alfred, Maine (1793); Sabbathday Lake, Maine (1794); Union Village, Ohio (1806); Watervliet, Ohio (1806); Pleasant Hill, Ky. (1806); South Union, Ky. (1807); Gorham, Maine (1808); West Union, Ind. (1810); Savoy (1817); North Union, Ohio (1822); Whitewater, Ohio (1824); Sodus Bay, N.Y. (1826); Groveland, N.Y. (1836); Narcoossee, Fla. (1896); and White Oaks, Ga. (1898).

Clockwise: the Round Stone Barn was the center of the Shaker dairy business. Prayer room displays the simplicity for which the Shakers are known. Men forged tools and women wove fabric in a community where all items were hand made.

The Village is open daily from 9:30 a.m. - 5 p.m. from Memorial Day weekend through Oct. 31. Admission is $6.50 for adults, $5.85 for senior citizens and students, $2.50 for children ages 6 - 12, and free to children under six.

To reach the Village take the Massachusetts Turnpike to Exit 1 and follow Route 41 north. The Village is located at the junction of Routes 41 and 20, five miles west of downtown Pittsfield.

42nd Street works well

REVIEW

42nd Street, a musical comedy with book by Michael Stewart and Mark Bramble (based on a novel by Bradford Ropes); music by Harry Warren; lyrics by Al Dubin; scenic design by John Doepp; lighting design by David Lockner; costume design by Scaramouche and Bob Biesel; direction and dances by Sam Viverito; musical direction by Phil Hall. At the North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly through Aug. 22. Featuring Gaylea Bryne, Jay Stuart, Tia Riebling, Rick Qualls, Mary Ellen Ashley, Art Ostrin and Teri Gibson.

Any dyed-in-the-wool theatre buff is well aware of the many accolades that have been heaped upon the Tony Award-winning musical 42nd Street since its opening in New York exactly eight years ago and the subsequent praise received by its national and international companies. But each edition must be judged on individual merit, no longer trading in on such illustrious names as David Merrick or the late Gower Champion.

This is especially true of the current bus-and-truck production of 42nd Street touring the summer theatre circuit and currently in-residence at the North Shore Music Theatre (before moving on to Maine's Ogunquit Playhouse, Aug. 24 - Sept. 5).

The song and dance fable of Broadway works amazingly well in the arena-style North Shore Music Theatre. That it is stripped of its lavish art deco sets — the mirrored turntable complete with lovely lass on a flower-bedecked swing, the dressing room set-up that resembled the celebrated telephone set of Bye Bye Birdie — detracts not a bit! Nor does the absence of the lavish costumes; here they are somewhat chintzy.

The butler sees outrageous behavior

Review

What the Butler Saw, a two-act farce by Joe Orton; directed by Larry carpenter; settings by Mark Wendland; costumes by Martha Hally; lighting by Kendall Smith. Cast: Dr. Prentice — Ron Holgate; Geraldine Barclay — Julia MacKenzie; Mrs. Prentice — Judith Roberts; Nicholas Beckett — Scott Bryce; Dr. Rance — Louis Turenne; Sergeant Match — Robin Chadwick. At the American Stage Festival, Milford, N.H. Closed.

For some strange reason Joe Orton's black comedy, What the Butler Saw, reminds me of the old joke about two men undressing in the locker room of their health club. One is wearing a girdle and his friend asks, "When did you start wearing that?" To which the other replies, "When my wife found it in the glove compartment of my car!"

What the Butler Saw is a wild and wacky play, and with Larry Carpenter directing the traffic at a frantic clip, the American Stage Festival's production proves to be a highly-charged, spirited and outrageous affair with trousers going up and down faster than a flying bagel. There's all sorts of cross-dressing and before the night is out, you're not quite sure who's doing what to whom!

In turn-of-the-century England What the Butler Saw was the moniker of the Victorian peepshow. For a mere pittance one could partake of racy fare by peering through a keyhole into a viewing box. Butler is playwright Joe Orton's peek-a-boo.

Orton attacks on two levels. First, he zeros in on the psychiatric profession of the early 1970's to present an outlandish and unorthodox view of British medical practice (and the deliberate void between the brutally anarchic action and ostentatiously genteel dialogue). Secondly, it is Orton's biting statement on his own lifestyle as a homosexual as compared to how he is perceived by the straight society and the chasm existing between them.

Interest in Orton, a modern pioneer in the comedy of manners, has peaked since the release of the film Prick Up Your Ears this past spring, the story of Orton's life. A number of summer theatres scheduled his better-known plays, including Loot and Entertaining Mr. Sloane, and the Harvard-Radcliffe Summer Theatre has a lesser-known Orton work currently on the boards, The Erpingham Camp.

What the Butler Saw takes place somewhere in England in the 1970's in lecherous Dr. Prentice's psychiatric clinic, where we find the drooling doctor in the throes of interviewing young Geraldine Barclay for the job of his secretary. He inveigles her to strip down for an examination, panting with anticipation he rips off his pants so that he can seduce her. Since the young girl seems to be a bit dense, she appears to be an easy mark; but nothing goes according to Hoyle in this nut house!

Mrs. Prentice, a nymphomaniac, barges in covered with a coat but sans dress, and a bellboy in tow. She's just been seduced in a local hotel by the bellboy, Nicholas Beckett (or was it the other way around?) who's stolen her dress and has damning pictures of their tryst. Beckett, an oversexed stud young enough to be Mrs. Prentice's son, offers to trade the dress and snapshots for the position of Dr. Prentice's secretary. He figures he could be just as happy working under the doctor since he swings both ways.

Just then, a most inopportune moment, a government inspector, Dr. Rance arrives to check out the hospital while noting, "We practice democratic lunacy!" What ensues is a frenzied melee of sexual complication, disappearances, disguises and discoveries as Prentice and his wife try to conceal their prizes from one another and from the impulsive, slightly daffy inspector. As a giddy policeman runs around in his undershorts, Dr. Rance observes, "This place is a madhouse!" The denouement is a steal right out of raunchy Roman farce.

The second act works better than the first, due in the main to the time Orton needs to set up the lengthy and involved exposition. Farce is loaded with pitfalls: timing must be perfect, roles played broadly without going overboard, and energy level high at all times. Happily, the cast acquits itself with flying colors. Especially notable are Ron Holgate and his booming vibrato as Dr. Prentice, equally resonant Louis Turenne as Dr. Rance, and attractive Judith Roberts as Mrs. Prentice (who all but runs out of gas by the final curtain). Also solid in lesser roles are Julia MacKenzie as the kookie Geraldine, Scott Bryce as Beckett and Robin Chadwick as the policeman.

What a great vehicle this would have made for the zany Marx Brothers.

Contemporary dramas amuse and educate summer audiences

Master Harold...and the boys

Apartheid the subject of Master Harold

Set in a tea room in South Africa, a story of three friends -- two black and one white -- who are forced to confront the crushing realities of apartheid will unfold in the compelling drama Master Harold...and the boys.

Written by Athol Fugard, South Africa's foremost playwright who has been called the conscience of his country, the play previews at the American Stage Festival in Milford, New Hampshire, August 19.

Fugard's subtly political play was chosen as American Stage Festival's fourth production of the season to communicate in simple and eloquent terms the continuing problem of racism in the United States, and the escalating tension between the black majority and the apartheid policies of the white minority rule in South Africa.

The Festival's artistic director, Larry Carpenter, sees the role of the theatre arts institution as "socially and politically responsible to the community to inform, make aware and present issues now prevalent in society."

Carpenter believes Master Harold..and the boys to be the most accessible of the playwright's works. "It's a simple human transaction with deep ramifications of racism and of growing up."

Israel Hicks will direct Fugard's strongly autobiographical drama. He views the playwright as a "craftsman who gives a softer, more personal look at apartheid." Of South African politics he says, "I care very much."

For Hicks, directing Master Harold...and the boys at the American Stage Festival is "an opportunity to awake, in a human way, some sensitivity to the issue."

Fugard's passion for social justice is attributable to a class-conscious incident that occurred during his childhood in Port Elizabeth, an industrial port on the eastern Cape of South Africa.

As a ten-year-old boy, the son of an Anglo-Irish father and an Afrikaner mother, steeped in the bigotry of his class and kind, he once spat in the face of a black man. To this day, Fugard bears the guilt for the incident.

Master Harold...and the boys deals with Fugard's ambivalent feelings about his father, and was written for the most influential adult figure in his life, Sam Semela, one of two waiters employed by his mother. The play in Sam's honor opened in Johannesburg shortly after his death in 1983.

Actor Roger Robinson will perform the role of Sam in Master Harold...and the boys. Of the play, he believes, "It's timely. The story is universal. Sam's love is the base of the play. He knows the boys tremendous conflict."

Michael Rogers, who will portray Willie Malopo in the drama, has twice been offered Master Harold...and the boys and has had to turn it down.

"Fate caught up with me," laughs the native of Trinidad. He has close friends from the South African region and is touched by apartheid. "The chance to act in Fugard's play is a wonderful and stimulating opportunity," he adds in his spirited tone.

Philip Euling, who plays the part of the young schoolboy, sees Master Harold. .and the boys as simply "a story about people," going beyond the political issue of apartheid.

At times humorous, at all times eloquent, Master Harold...and the boys previews August 19 and plays through August 31 at the American Stage Festival, located on Route 13 North in Milford, New Hampshire. For tickets and information, call the box office at (603)673-7515

Benefactors premieres at GSC

Gloucester Stage Company artistic director Israel Horovitz recently returned from a very successful visit to England. During his stay he managed to obtain the rights to produce the New England premiere of Michael Frayn's London and Broadway smash play, Benefactors.

Performances of Benefactors, a comedy focusing on two modern marriages, are Thursday through Sunday, Aug. 20 through Aug. 23 and Wednesday through Sunday, Aug. 26 through Sept. 13. Curtain times are 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, 5 p.m. on Sunday, and 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. on Saturday.

All performances are held at 267 East Main St., immediately before the entrance to Rocky Neck, Gloucester, MA. For information and reservations call 281-4099 or contact the GSC.

Michael Frayn was born in 1933 in the suburbs of London. After reading Moral Sciences (philosophy) at Cambridge, he joined the Guardian in 1957 as a reporter and columnist, moving to the Observer in 1963, where he wrote a regular column until 1968.

He has since contributed features to the Observer on foreign countries, among them Cuba, Israel, Japan and Sweden. He has published five novels — The Tin Men (1965), The Russian Interpreter (1966), Towards the End of the Morning (1967), A Very Private Life (1968), and Sweet Dreams (1973). In 1974 he published Constructions.

For television he has written and presented documentaries on Berlin, Vienna, Australia and Ewell in Surrey, where he grew up.

His stage plays include The Two of Us (1970), The Sandboy (1971), Alphabetical Order, Clouds (1976), Donkey's Years, Liberty Hall (1980), Make and Break, and Noises Off, as well as translations of Chekhov's The Cherry Orchard (1980), Three Sisters (1983) and Wild Honey (1984).

Monadnock music performs Mozart

Mezzo-soprano D'Anna Fortunato joins conductor James Bolle, the Monadnock Music Orchestra and a company of acclaimed soloists for a concernt performance of Rossini's La Cenerentola (Cinderella) on Saturday, August 29 at 8 p.m., in the Town House, Petersborough, New Hampshire.

Miss Fortunato is an established favorite of Boston and New England audiences, having triumphed in Monadnock Music's unforgettable Marriage of Figaro, as well as in performances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Ozawa, Schuller and Cleve.

Also featured in the cast are Edward Randall, Robert Honeysucker, Loni Misenas-Padua, Marion Dry and Nicholas Karasatos. The New England Conservatory Chamber Singers will fill the choral ranks.

Tickets are $18.50 and $13.50 and are available at Out-Of-Town Tickets in Harvard Square or by calling Concertcharge at 497-1118. Call 800/442-1854 outside the Boston area. For complete concert information call 603/924 7610

Blue Window opens at Unicorn

Berkshire Theatre Festival's Unicorn Theatre concludes its season with a production of Craig Lucas' Blue Window.

The play operates on several levels according to Roger Danforth, director of the BTF production. "It's an extremely articulate and literate play," Danforth said. "The way that language is used by Lucas creates a musical composition for seven actors."

Blue Window looks at seven lonely people who are each going through changes in their lives and join together for one very unusual and humorous Sunday evening.

Sets for Blue Window are designed by Lino Toyos with costumes by Deborah Rosenberg, lighting by Michael Chybowski, and sound by Brent Evans.

Blue Window previews on August 19, opens August 20 and runs through August 28.

Performance times are Monday through Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 7 and 10 p.m.

Tickets are $8.50 with group discounts available. Reservations can be made by calling the BTF Box

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

Bending, stretching trees enliven Marsha Goldberg's Study for Acer. The artist's work is in the Mills Gallery exhibition, Town & Country.

A personal sense of place

The operative word describing group exhibitions these days seems to be "diverse." And, that is indeed the word that comes to mind when viewing the 31 works by 17 resident artists from the Boston Center for the Arts (BCA) on display in the Mills Gallery show entitled Town & Country.

"Even though that similarity of imagery is implicit in the landscape-cityscape theme. There is as much diversity in attitude, interpretation, size and, yes, subject matter as any show of this size could possibly contain. Especially when the show is limited to two dimensional, wall-hung works.

Marsha Goldberg's "Acer" is the largest work in the gallery. An oil on canvas approximately five feet square, its expansive drawing and aggressive color give it a bigness that pushes explosive energy beyond the picture's edges and into the viewer's space.

"One of my intentions, says Goldberg, "is that you feel you are in the painting — that you are a part of it."

"Acer" is Latin for maple, and the title of the big treescape is as close to botanical description as the painting gets. It is expressive force rather than naturalistic description that fuels Goldberg's work.

The smoky blue-black forked trunks and unwieldy branches that span the canvas's breadth are hardly generic. The spikey, angular forms are trees of the artist's experience -- an experience that appears as grounded in emotional response as it is in visual response.

Hot, acrid yellow-greens and pungent pinks and purples are woven among the leafless grove reinforcing the quick rhythm set up by tree shapes and intervals. The other side of this jazzy beat arises from a somewhat threatening tone that simmers under the restless color and sharp, criss-crossed brushmarks. While not dark and brooding as some of Andre Derain's landscapes and still lifes are, Goldberg's "Acer" has a similar implication: the element of danger is as much an attraction in the observed world as a soothing, meditative effect.

The threat in Hazel Kedem's Landscape With Soldier is less oblique. A soldier in a role playing at being a soldier — either interpretation is equally disturbing — is dwarfed by deep-toned, heavy swirls of leaves, thick and wavy atop tall trees. The soldier runs forward on a path cut through this dense arborway, and the inevitable association of the scumbled red reflected on surrounding tree trunks is blood.

With a contrasting attitude, Phil Welle paints specific sites with an eye for characteristic architecture reflecting the particular light of a place. Looking up at the warm pink domes of Roma, or across the Limmat River to the sturdy planes of a towered, windowed Zurich, or focusing on parked cars in the lot of a very American colonial style gas station Welle paints with a sense of immediacy that captures the cityscape in a moment of light.

Lest a preconceived idea of cityscape as the depiction of skyscrapers, urban architecture and rooftops be brought by viewers into the gallery, Bob Rosinsky's black and white photographs are quite fascinating reminders that the theme is not so easily contained. New York's Flushing Meadows Park, with the big skeletal globe of the 1964 World's Fair in the background, is the subject of one of the prints. Bold orbitals encircle the globe and remind viewers of what the artist terms "an atomic look" associated with industrial design of the late '50s.

"I am interested in commenting on the Age of Technology," Rosinsky says.

One senses a sterile urban ennui pervading this oddly invaded landscape where a few people walk around doing little of anything. With nary a building in sight, Rosinsky's photograph is undeniably a cityscape.

Michael David's serial color monoprints look down on a rolling landscape through five rectangles carved at the corners like tiny, tightly sealed airplane windows that reveal vast panoramas of earth and sky. David concentrates on the earth and its viridian hue, thick and weighted in clumps of trees or cool and airy over broad areas of land.

A river winds through the five openings, giving continuity to the separate prints. As if a wide angle lens took in miles of soft hills and tree-dotted land surrounding the river's path, David's prints give peripheral vision credibility. The artist's deft handling of his medium enhances the lyricism and gentle exhiliration of these aerial views.

One of Steven Mitchell's two untitled oil landscapes is an aerial view, too. Unlike David, Mitchell imposes a taut abstract geometry on the landscape. His subject is at once the landscape itself and the way a picture is put together relative to the two-dimensionality of the picture plane. The rigorous form that results does not deny a personal and sensitive response to the land and air that Mitchell paints.

Such a personal response and sense of place is the unifying element in this energetic and diverse, if uneven, exhibit. To get a sense of the impact of place and the vast range of personal interpretations of environment, see Town & Country at the Mills Gallery, 549 Tremont St., during viewing hours, noon to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, noon to 7 p.m. Thursday. Call 426-7700.

What's On The Boards

42nd Street's acting a dead end

Stripped down to its bare essentials, the show boasts a very strong cast and a wonderfully energetic young and most attractive ensemble, and Sam Viverito, who tackled the unenviable task of mounting 42nd Street in-the-round without blinking an eyelash, comes home with banners flying!

Obviously, Viverito's expertise includes on staging and choreography and he has utilized the limited confines of the playing area to move his actors around with brilliance. His choreography, pared from the 40 tapping feet, had to be vastly restaged, yet he manages to capture both the spirit and flavor of the original, complete with its [illegible] flourishes.

[illegible] idea of acting style is a disaster. His actors [illegible] cardboard caricatures, [illegible] played and [illegible] the completely devoid of all human characteristics — reality, sincerity, sensitivity and honesty!

They are strictly stock burlesque figures. Further possibly to speed up the show, dialogue is rushed and the script seems to have been trimmed resulting in unmotivated actions and responses from the actors.

However, do not be deterred. Even with its aforementioned flaws and with a totally non-cerebral and outlandishly cornball book, a parody containing powder puff plot and the most trite dialogue, it remains a bright, breezy, slick, colorful and high-energy musical with on-going momentum!

When Brock threatens to walk out and take her sugar daddy, who's backing the show, with her, Marsh pleads, "Think of the half-a-hundred kids who danced their feet off to give you the kind of show you dreamed of!" It is our sweet chorine who saves the day when Brock is injured at the last minute, rehearses 36 consecutive hours, and goes on in her place. Marsh prophecizes "You're going out there a youngster, but you're coming back a star!"

The score features standards like Lullaby of Broadway, "We're in the Money, Shuffle Off to Buffalo, and the title song. These, along with Go Into Your Dance are all production numbers and they're the best of the show.

Barishnikov on large video screens

Due to popular demand, special giant video screens will be installed in the lawn seating area for the September 3 and 4 Baryshnikov & Co. performances, in order to ensure optimum viewing for patrons on the lawn.

Giant Vision will position 2 high resolution video screens measuring at least 16' by 12', on the facade of the pavilion roof.

Mikhail Baryishnikov will be joined by ten ballerinas, all principals and soloists from American Ballet Theatre, including Leslie Browne, Susan Jaffe, Cheryl Yeager, Amanda Mc[illegible] Moore, Deirdre Carl[illegible] Dunham, Amy Gr[illegible] and Greet Vinckier.

Mikhail Baryshnikov & Co. [illegible] will appear at the [illegible] Center for the Performing Arts, September 3 and 4 at 8 p.m. Each evening. Some [illegible] pavilion is still available, [illegible] $25; lawn seats are $10. Tickets are now on sale at the Great Woods box office and at [illegible] master locations; to charge tickets by phone call Ticketmaster at 787-8000.

[illegible] Festival production of "[illegible] My Father" continues through August 29. The cast includes Daniel J. Travanti, Mary Fogarty, Roland Gould and Dorothy Holland.

Lady lingers at the Rep

Due to popular demand, Trinity Summer Rep's presentation of George Feydeau's comic masterpiece The Lady from Maxim's has been extended through Sunday, August 23. Extraordinary ticket demand has made this one-week extension possible.

Feydeau's tastes are hilarious, laugh-filled, bawdy romps, and The Lady from Maxim's is no exception. It sets in motion an extraordinary series of mistaken identities and frustrated intentions when Dr. Peyton wakes up with a hangover and a "lady" from Maxim's.

TV star at Catch

Rosie O'Donnell, a regular last season on NBC-TV's Gimme a Break with Nell Carter, will make her first appearance at Catch A Rising Star in Harvard Square the week of Aug. 22-29. O'Donnell has been keeping audiences around the country laughing with her comic actress style left over from her college days studying at Boston University and the Lee Strasberg Theatre Institute. "I went to seven different colleges," says O'Donnell. "It really annoyed my father...it got so he couldn't see out of the back of the car."

O'Donnell has headlined at clubs across the United States and Canada and was a 1986 "Star Search" finalist. Rosie has universal appeal," says "Star Search" talent coordinator Claudia McMahon (yes, Ed's daughter). Everyone who saw her audition thought she was very funny."

All shows at Catch are All Ages Shows. Headline comedy is presented every Tuesday through Thursday at 9 p.m., Friday at 8:30 and 11 p.m., Saturday at 7:30 p.m., 9:45 p.m. and midnight. Cover charge ranges from $5 to $10.

Sunday and Monday Catch presents Comedy Showcase/Open Mike Night at 9 p.m., with a cover of $3. Music is presented Tuesday through Thursday at 11 p.m., featuring Larry Carsman Jam Band on Tuesdays, Heidi and the Secret Admirers on Wednesdays, and The Band That Time Forgot on Thursdays. There is no cover after 11 p.m. on weeknights.

Catch A Rising Star is located at 30 JFK St., Harvard Square, Cambridge. For tickets and information call 661-9887.

Nashville / L.A. at Great Woods

Concerts by Los Lobos, Kenny Rogers, Neil Young, and Anne Murray are scheduled during the thirteenth week of the Great Woods Summer Series.

Los Lobos perform at Great Woods on August 25. This band of LA traditionalists has built a career fashioning original music from familiar and time tested styles. From R & B to the Tex-Mex sound of their own Chicano roots, their songs are danceable and thinkable, making for a live show that's exciting and provocative. In addition to their own material, Los Lobos are currently cranking up Ritchie Valen's La Bamba, the title song of the new hit movie about Valen's life. Special guest is the Smithereens. Tickets to this concert, which will be held in Great Woods' intimate 4,000 seat setting, are priced at $18.50.

Kenny Rogers, the [illegible] bearded king of country music, performs at Great Woods on August 26. Despite his superstar status, Rogers concerts are strong on sincerity and folksy patter which has endeared him to audiences nationwide.

Special Guests this evening are Ronnie Milsap and T. Graham Brown. tickets for this performance are priced at $21.50 and $19.50 for reserved seats and $16.00 for the lawn.

Neil Young and his band Crazy Horse perform at Great Woods on August 28 and 29. Young's music has ranged from rockabilly [illegible] to hard-edged pop. He emerged in the 1960's as a singer/songwriter of romantic, melodic ballads such as Cinnamon Girl and Sugar Mountain.

Tickets for these concerts, which begin at 8 p.m., are priced at $19.50 and $17.50 for reserved seats and $15.50 for the lawn.

Fall workshops offered

Hancock Shaker Village will present a series of 19th century Shaker craft workshops this fall.

Hancock Shaker Village, dating from 1790, was the third of 18 Shaker villages established in the United States. Due to their emphasis on hard work, perfection and thrift, Shaker crafts grew in popularity over the years. The Shakers themselves held a reputation for sharing their craft knowledge with the World's People, a tradition carried on in this workshop series.

The schedule begins with a two-day Shaker Spoon Basket Making Workshop on September 12 & 13 and continues through Holiday Greens on December 12.

Throughout the fall semester, spinning and weaving, tinsmithing, chair taping, leatherwork, herbs, woodworking, broom making, and blacksmithing are offered. The workshops cover a variety of skill levels. Some last a few hours, others an entire weekend. Some are given more than once.

The workshops will be held in the restored buildings at Hancock Shaker Village on Route 20, five miles west of Pittsfield. Master craftspeople at the Village will provide a brief history of Shaker involvement in crafts as well as instruction in 19th century techniques. Participants will make objects to take home in most workshops.

Master printmaker's work on exhibit in Cambridge

An exhibition of original Polaroid photographs by Ansel Adams, entitled Ansel Adams: A Special Relationsip, will be on view at the Clarence Kennedy Gallery from September 9 through October 24.

This exhibition features over sixty 4 X 5-inch prints made in the 1950s and 60s. It also includes enlargements, memorabilia, test photographs, portraits both of and by Ansel Adams and many examples of his meticulous, yet lively correspondence with members of Polaroid.

Ansel Adams was a premier twentieth-century photographer and master printmaker. His unique sensitivity to the power of light allowed him to reveal both the delicate details and the massive beauty of our natural environment.

In 1948, Adams became a consultant to Dr. Edwin Land, founder of Polaroid Corporation, for whom he rigorously tested new films and products. Throughout the ensuing 35 years, Adams wrote copious letters and over 3,000 memoranda to report his findings and recommendations to Polaroid. The Corporate Archives, where these are stored, also houses an extensive body of his original Polaroid photographs, many of which have never before been shown.

Adams' photographs have been included in hundreds of exhibitions and publications during the past five decades. An important early exhibition was at Alfred Stieglitz's gallery, An American Place, in 1936. A major retrospective of his landscape photographs, Yosemite and the Range of Light, was held at the Museum of Modern Art in 1979.

Ansel Adams is widely recognized for the superb aesthetic and technical qualities of his photographs and for the central role he played in the acceptance of photography as a fine art.

The Clarence Kennedy Gallery is open to the public Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

What To Learn

Aging gardner finds help

A booklet I read recently about arthritis prompted me to begin thinking about how gardeners can come to terms with the problem of aging and gradually diminishing physical strength, or with movement restricting problem.

It's not difficult for most of us who share the aches, and pains common to eager and often overzealous gardeners to empathize with the terrible frustration that must come with severe physical restrictions and disabilities. And it's good to know there are ways of laying out the garden and caring for the gardener that can make it possible to continue indulging in our captivating hobby despite a stiff, tired or aching body.

The first thing I would do if afflicted with a severe physical disability would be to sort out my gardening priorities. I'd decide which gardening activities I felt most determined to continue, which one I could probably still cope with and which ones I would solicit help for.

For example, in light of my own personal gardening preferences now, I'd give up care of the lawn first and the indoor seeding, container gardening and the vegetable garden last.

I'd get help, somehow — and in fact, have already begun in a small way to do so — for the chores I found most difficult or time consuming. In every community there will be students eager to earn a little pocket money for garden work. And, if I couldn't do that, I'd exchange vegetables, flowers, baby sitting or some other service for some weeding or whatever work needed to be done.

Long before old age or disability strikes it's important for a gardener to learn to pace himself. Taking a few minutes out for every hour of garden work done to lie flat out on a garden lounge or to sit quietly can be the best hedge we can make against exhaustion and stress.

Over the past year or so I've been training myself, as well, not to rush in the garden, for deliberately slowing one's pace in the garden can take a lot of strain away from the pressures that arise between the limited human body and garden activities that need doing. The garden, for me, is to be a place of peace and refreshment, and the time I spend there is to be a time of building up, not tearing down. Any frantic, strainful hurrying there is simply not worth it.

To continue active gardening despite some physical restriction or disability, it's often necessary to limit the size of the garden to what ever can be cared for without stress. And the garden space should be located for easy and convenient access.

Raised beds are wonderfully easy to maintain and are especially necessary for people in wheelchairs or those with severe knee problems. Ideal would be a solid brick or pavement courtyard or patio surrounded with seat high beds an arm's length in width. An extended garden could be made this way with wide,hard-surfaced pathways around raised beds two arms lengths across.

Container gardening in hanging baskets, tubs, stacked tires and barrels is another easy access way of gardening, and so is growing flowering vines, cucumbers, beans and tomatoes against trellises and fences. A low stool reduces bending in the garde, as do seed tapes, step-on bulb and potato planters and long-handled weeding tools.

I can remember once reading about an extensive survey taken to find out what ingredients in a human life contributed most to the peace, balance and happiness characteristic of a long and contented lifetime.

The one thing that emerged was some interest, some hobby or occupation that we anticipated at the start of each day eagerly enough so that the person woke to face every day with a good deal of enthusiastic anticipation.

For many of us, puttering with our plant indoors or out can be that greatly looked forward to daily preoccupation, and viewed in these terms, our cherished hobby becomes something crucially worth while hanging on to.

The Singing Executioners, Smee and Blogg are just two of the many entertainers on hand to perform for visitors from Sept. 12 through Nov. 1 at Kind Richard's Faire, South Carver. The Faire is a rec reation of 16th century life and runs for 8 weekends.

Health, safety tips for back-to-school set

By Steve Hurtado
Copley News Service

The clanging of the school bell marks the onset of a season of worry. Students wrinkle their brows over tests, homework and what to wear on the first day of school. Parents' thoughts turn to more serious matters, namely the health and safety of their school-age children.

Common worries range from how a child will fare going to and from school on his own to whether he really was well enough to go to school, despite the fact that his temperature was normal.

But, with a little guidance from his parents, a child can be just as prepared to face the world virtually on his own for a few hours as he is for that first spelling test or art project. And, his parents won't have to worry as much. Following is a parent's checklist of back-to-school safety and health tips:

GENERAL HEALTH

While you can't predict when your child will get his next cold or cavity, sending him to school with a clean bill of health can start the school year off right.

• Eyes: By the time a child reaches kindergarten age, he should have a thorough eye examination that is specifically geared toward children, rather than adults, according to the American Optometric Association.

Through such an exam, an optometrist can tell if the child has the vision skills vital to learning, and can treat any deficiencies through prescription lenses, a controlled program of visual tasks called vision therapy or both. Examinations should be performed at periodic intervals thereafter.

For vision correction, eyeglasses probably are the safest bets for children. But today's small-fry frames are anything but boring in bold colors and shapes that are sturdy enough for playground treatment, says Cathy Kate, fashion eyewear buyer for Sterling Optical.

• Teeth: Children are especially cavity-prone around the ages of 6 to 8, and again in adolescence, so a visit to the dentist prior to the first day of school is in order.

To stop cavities before they start, many of today's pediatric dentists use sealants that are painted on the teeth's chewing surfaces to close the pits and grooves in which most cavities start. Another new twist: dentists are sending kids to the orthodontist earlier to head off tooth-crowding troubles.

• Checkups: The start of school means shot-in-the-arm and checkup time for many children. Some pediatricians even schedule special office hours to accommodate the back-to-school crowd.

LATCHKEY KIDS

An estimated 5 million "latch-alarm to alert neighbors if there's trouble, according to the Pets Are Wonderful Council.

• Teach safety. Talking about possible problems won't frighten your children; it will prepare them to cope confidently if trouble arises, according to the National PTA. Make sure children know never to enter a house when a door is ajar, and have them practice safety measures every day. Teach them about first aid, and keep a list of emergency phone numbers and first aid kit handy.

You can supplement your instruction with children's books and videos that cover different aspects of safety.

EN ROUTE

Parents are justified in worrying about their kids traveling to and from school — it's estimated that about 1,500 children die each year in pedestrian accidents, according to the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Whether they're traveling on foot, via bike, scooter, moped or skateboard, or as a passenger in a car pool, here are some tips to ensure they make it to school and home safely:

• Kids should ride with the traf-key children" between the ages of 5 and 13 look after themselves while their parents are at work, according to Working Mother magazine. But the all-alone hours don't have to be lonely, scary hours for a child. A parent can:

• Help their child make a schedule, suggests the National PTA. Having a structure makes free time less lonely. A sample: 3:30 p.m. to 3:40 p.m., call Mom or Dad; 3:40 p.m. to 4 p.m, change clothes and fix a snack in the microwave; 4 to 5 p.m., homework.

• Make home a safe place to be with safety chains, a door "peephole" and other internal locks to keep doors and windows secure. With an answering machine, kids never have to explain where their parents are or why they're home alone.

• Buy a best friend — a pet. A well-trained pet can be a child's protector, and even raise the fic, not against it, so drivers can see them, according to the Team Prince "Bicycle Safety Guide."

• Kids always should wear a hard-shell helmet when riding a bike or skateboard. It should cover the back of the head, but not block view or make it difficult to hear.

• Putting reflective materials on your children's clothing or backpacks can help make them more visible to motorists, according to the AAP.

• Parents who drive in car pools should make sure their car is in top-notch condition. An insurance agent can tell you if you have adequate liability coverage in light of the increased risk of more passengers.

The safest bicycle is the one that fits the child

Copley News Service

A safe bike is a bike that fits the rider.

The bike is right if:

• The rider can rest the balls of his feet lightly on the ground while he's sitting on the seat.

• He can reach the bottom pedal without pointing his toes when he's riding.

• He's able to reach the handlebars comfortably when he's sitting on the seat.

• He can reach the hand brakes easily — and his hands are large and strong enough to squeeze the levers.

• When the rider straddles a boys'-style bicycle with both feet on the ground, there should be 1 inch of space between the top bar and the rider.

Don't just buy a bike for your child — get a lock, too.

Tips on preparing child for full school day

By Pamela Redmond Satran
Copley News Service

The first day of school is an exciting occasion even for those jaded children who have experienced it 10 times before. But for children starting elementary school, nursery school or kindergarten, the first first day is a revolutionary and often overwhelming experience.

Small children usually deal with starting school in one of two ways: they ask a zillion questions about it for weeks beforehand, or they ignore it.

Whatever type of child you have, there are things you can do to prepare him for the first first day of school. For example:

• Give your child solid information about school. Whether your child shows any curiosity or not, mention details about school as they arise. For instance, when you're leaving for work in the morning, point out that this is the same time your child will be going to school. Walk or drive by the school. On a weekend morning, let your child help pack a lunch to eat later, as he will at school.

• Find out the names of his teachers and some classmates before school starts. Mentioning the teachers and kids by name before he actually meets them can make them seem real; get your child excited about being in a group.

• Let your child help pick out equipment — a lunch box, backpack, pencil case — for school. If your child has a say in the items, chances are he'll be more excited about using them.

• If possible, arrange for your child to see the classroom before the first day. Many schools have a set visiting hour or day when children can see their classrooms and meet the teachers; if not, try to arrange a special visit, even if the classroom is empty.

• Ask the teacher's advice on preparation. Nursery school, first-grade and kindergarten teachers go through children's adjustments to school every year and can help you prepare for your own child's first day.

• Warn your boss that your child is starting school, and that you may need time off the first week. Some schools request that a parent be available, in the classroom or at home, the first week. Even if your school doesn't, it's not unusual to get a call at work to pick up a distraught child.

Two good books that will help your child prepare for starting school are "Grover Goes to School," a Sesame Street Start-to-Read Book by Dan Elliott, illustrated by Normand Chartier, published by Random House/Children's Television Workshop, and "The First Day of School," by Patricia Relf, illustrated by DyAnne DiSalvo, published by Golden Press/Western Publishing Co.

BROWN-BAGGED NUTRITION

Q: My children will be back in school again soon and refuse to eat hot lunch in the school cafeteria. How can I prepare lunches that are nutritious, yet appetizing?

A: Your family needs to understand the importance of natural foods for health and energy. Educate them about the foods that will provide them with proper nutrition, and which foods actually are harmful to their health.

You can save both time and money by finding out their likes and dislikes. Take your children shopping and let them select fruits and vegetables they would like to have included in their lunches. Allow them to choose items and create their own sandwiches. Don't overlook the possibilities of boiled eggs, broiled chicken, celery and carrot sticks, and fresh fruit salads.

It is very important to show your children, through your own behavior, the importance of nutrition and wise eating habits. For additional information on nutrition and weight control, call your local Diet Center at

What to look for in preschool and day care

By Jane Clifford
Copley News Service

Judy Spate is almost up to her elbows in plaster of paris, easing kids' small hands in and out of pie-pan molds.

"Oh, Colin, great job!" Spate says to the towhead next to her. Colin, flushed with success, stares down at the imprint of his small hand in the goo. When hardened, it will be a gift for his mother.

Spate, surrounded by children, sighs. "It works. We have one," she says. "Now, only 15 more to go."

The Chula Vista Presbyterian Preschool in Chula Vista, Calif., is a place that feels good; a place where spontaneous affection is frequently exchanged between big people and little people; a place with a comfortable, relaxed atmosphere; a place where teachers laugh as much as children do.

The atmosphere is easygoing, comfortable for learning things like spatial relations, prereading and math skills. And subconscious lessons in life skills — confidence, compassion, cooperation.

These are just a few of the signs that the preschool is doing a good job

There's no law requiring preschools to be accredited. The overwhelming majority of programs don't have accreditation and may never. But even preschools that do not seek it still may have many of the characteristics the National Association for the Education of Young Children deems necessary to a quality program.

Two NAEYC members provide the following guidelines for parents selecting preschools and for those who want to measure programs in which their children are enrolled.

The list is not all-inclusive, but covers what early childhood education specialists consider among the most important factors.

• Visit the school.

"You must go and visit," says Sue Welsh, director of the Chula Vista Presbyterian Preschool. "Visit long enough to observe. How are children disciplined — such basic things as that. And parents need to be asking questions."

Sylvia White, president of the California Association for the Education of Young Children, suggests what some of those questions might be.

"Is this a program where, maybe, once a week they get the (building) blocks out (or) are they out all the time where children have easy access to them?" asks

White says the length of time a child is in preschool each day has a profound impact on the child's self-image, and parents should pick a program where that impact is a positive one.

• Pay attention to what you see.

"If you see children and an adult gathered together and they're all laughing together, you know they're interacting well," says White.

"In a quality program, parents see teachers and children talking to each other, see the teacher at the child's eye level.

• Go with your gut feeling.

"Is this a good place to be? Does it feel good to be here? If it does, go with it," Welsh says. "It doesn't matter if it's a (preschool or a) restaurant; you know whether you like it."

In addition, White listed the more important of the NAEYC accreditation guidelines another yardstick parents can use to measure the quality of their children's preschools:

• Teacher-child interaction: This is at the top of NAEYC's list. The mandate is to ensure self-esteem and a sense of security in children; teachers who provide support for children to develop an understanding of self and others; teachers who demonstrate warmth, personal respect, positive support and responsiveness to individual personalities.

• Staff-child ratios: NAEYC requires that for children between the ages of 1 and 2, if the group size is six children, the ratio is one staff member for every three children; if the group size is 12 children, the ratio is one adult to four children.

For 4-year-olds, if the group size is 16, the ratio is one adult staff member for each eight children; if the group size is 20, the ratio is one to 10.

• Curriculum: NAEYC scrutinizes a school's goals and planned activities; how organized, yet flexible, the daily schedule is; how much access children have to materials, such as building blocks; transitions that allow children to prepare, without being rushed, for moving from one activity to the next — for example, from outdoor play to indoors for lunch; and allowing the children to perform routine tasks that further self-help and social skills, such as washing hands before lunch, putting on and taking off shoes.

• Staff qualifications: NAEYC standards dictate that anyone working with children independently will have at least an associate of arts degree in early childhood education/child development.

Minimum benefits include at least medical insurance, sick leave, annual leave (vacation time) and Social Security or some other retirement benefits. Administrative guidelines recommend record-keeping done in an organized way, written job descriptions and time scheduled for staff breaks and planning.

• Physical environment: Do the children have adequate space for outdoor play? What equipment is available and in what condition?

Clubs get kids moving

By Karen Caldwell
Copley News Service

Summer is over, and so are swimming lessons, summer camps and vacations — activities that kept your child active and happy through the summer. He'll no doubt be busy with school projects and studies, but you're wondering about his free hours — the ones that tend to be spent in front of the television when it's too cold or cloudy to play outside.

But autumn leaves and cool temperatures don't have to trigger the back-to-school blues and after-school boredom. Extracurricular activities abound for children during the school year — some social, some academic and some purely for fun. With an almost endless list of possibilities it's safe to say there's an after-school activity to meet every child's interest or need, and every parent's schedule and budget. Here are a few of the possibilities:

■ Classes that teach something new: A surefire way to beat the I-am-bored-and-want-to-watch-TV syndrome — help your child learn something new. There are after-school classes that teach kids everything from gourmet cooking to French conversation to speed-reading.

■ Develop a fledgling talent: All children have some unique quality; it could be a skill, a talent or a consuming interest. Whether it's dance, art, wood carving or model airplane building, there are dozens of ways you can help him along.

For instance, if all your little girl can talk about is ballet, you might enroll her in dance lessons, take her to performances and recitals and bring home armfuls of books and magazines on the subject.

There are also toys that can incorporate a child's special interests.

■ Clubs and organizations: Fall is an opportune time for a child to get involved in a community organization such as the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and 4-H. Most areas also offer clubs that unite young enthusiasts — computer buffs, bookworms, bird-watchers, stamp collectors, chess players or skiers, for example. Check the library or school to see what's available, or help your child organize his own group.

■ After-school programs: Many working parents are enrolling their children in after-school programs, where their kids stay busy with adult-supervised activities such as art projects, games and music until their mothers or fathers get off work and pick them up. A growing trend, these programs have been established in elementary schools, community centers, YMCAs and libraries.

■ Music: Music stands in a class by itself, since a young musician has dozens of opportunities at his fingertips for learning and performing, whether he plays a piccolo, piano or a percussion instrument.

After school, a child can take group or private lessons, participate in community and school bands and orchestras and, of course, establish a regular routine of practice.

Wondering if Junior is ready for scales, sharps and sight-reading? A child's interest in music, attention span and eagerness to learn are the best indicators of when he should start, according to the National Piano Foundation.

■ Money-making ideas: If your child is pushing for an unreasonable raise in his allowance and has plenty of spare time on his hands, why not help him make a little money on his own.

Here are several ideas from Parent's magazine that are perfect for children:

- Pet-sitting, where a child takes care of a traveling neighbor's bird, goldfish or cat.
- Dog-walking — especially popular during cool weather.
- Some types of yard work, such as weed-pulling, flower planting or removing rocks and branches.

Tips, recipes to foster good eating habits

By Monica Perez
Copley News Service

Your little student prefers barbecued potato chips to a baked potato, fruit wrapped in a pie crust rather than fresh off the tree, and milk chocolate instead of just an ordinary glass of milk.

Parents still wage the perennial battle to get children to eat a balanced diet. And while an occasional hamburger and milk shake are fine, the proliferation of fast-food outlets combined with constant exposure to junk food has made it harder than ever to instill good eating habits in children, particularly when they're away at school or play.

"Parents would be shocked if they knew what their children were eating at school," says Grace Bulger, a fourth grade teacher in Troy, N.Y. "Oftentimes, children take two bites of their lunches and throw the rest away, choosing instead to fill up on chips and candy bars."

How can parents help their children eat more healthfully when they're not there to monitor them? The Kraft "Moms Advise You On ..., " or MAYO, Club, a panel of "supermoms" that includes actress Phylicia Rashad of "The Cosby Show"; a pediatrician, Annabelle Schaeffer; a dietitian, Barbara Ford; author and director of Parent Guidance Workshops, Nancy Samalin; and a teacher, Lazalia Richardson, has the following suggestions:

• Children particularly are influenced by what their peers are doing. Ask your children what other kids have for lunch and what they would like. Then, get them involved in preparing their requested lunches. They'll appreciate the food more and feel that they've had a role in deciding what they eat.

• Food must taste good for children to eat it. Here is an idea for a healthful fruit salad that will appeal to a child's eye and palate. Combine different-colored fresh fruits — strawberries, sliced bananas, apples and melon balls. Blend with flavorful condiments that you know kids like, such as honey, mayonnaise, orange juice and orange peels.

• Pack a surprise in your child's lunch occasionally. A special note or treat every now and then will ensure that he pays attention to the contents of his lunch box. Use colorful paper plates, disposable place mats and plastic silverware for a festive touch.

• Don't panic if your child only will eat one food — such as peanut butter and jelly sandwiches — for a while. This is known as a food fixation, and is a normal stage children go through. One day, she'll decide she's "allergic" to her special food and want something new in her lunch box.

• Don't insist on a big lunch for a child who is a picky eater. Instead, pack a lunch of nutritious snacks such as raisins, cheese and cracker or unsweetened cereals. And, be sure to have something on hand when he gets home, since children with small appetites may fill up quickly — but be hungry more frequently.

• On the other hand, if your child has a weight problem, don't make it a big issue, but do try to help him by packing a lunch that will be satisfying, nutritious and low-calorie. Some suggestions: cut-up raw vegetables, lean meat or tuna salad on rice cakes or whole-grain bread, and an occasional fruit cobbler or other fruit-based, low-fat dessert.

• Include a nutritious beverage that tastes good but does not contain sugar, artificial sweeteners or caffeine, such as vegetable juice, skim or low-fat milk, plain or flavored seltzer.

"When parents send children to school, they teach them how to cross the street and not to talk to strangers," Bulger says. "But sometimes in the day-to-day bustle of trying to care for our children, we overlook the basics such as teaching them to eat properly.

"Parents should set an example with their own eating habits and talk to their children about the importance of good nutrition."

Children appreciate variety in their diets as much as adults do. Here are two sandwich recipes from the Kraft MAYO Club, plus a dessert recipe from Hershey's:

CALIFORNIA CLUB SANDWICH

½ cup mayonnaise
2 teaspoons Dijon mustard
2 teaspoons honey
9 whole wheat bread slices, toasted
Cooked turkey slices
Thin peeled avocado slices
Alfalfa sprouts
Thin tomato slices

Combine mayonnaise, mustard and honey; mix well. For each sandwich, spread one toast slice with mayonnaise mixture. Cover with turkey, avocado and second toast slice. Top with sprouts, tomatoes and third toast slice spread with mayonnaise mixture. Makes 3 sandwiches.

CHICKEN AIOLI SANDWICH

½ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 medium garlic cloves, minced
2 cups cooked chicken
½ cup chopped red pepper
½ cup 1-inch carrot sticks
¼ cup chopped green onions
8 whole wheat bread slices, toasted
Boston lettuce

Combine mayonnaise, mustard, juice and garlic; mix well. Add chicken, peppers, carrots and onions; mix lightly. Spread toast slices with additional mayonnaise, if desired. For each sandwich, cover one toast slice with lettuce and chicken mixture; top with second toast slice. Makes 4 servings.

Maine Oceanfront

ONE HOUR above Bar Harbor lies perhaps the most spectacular deep-water oceanfront property available in Maine. Sweeping bluffs with pink granite, hidden coves, and isolated beaches. My wife and I are selling a few lots now to help recoupe the cost of building a four mile private road into the property. With the addition of a full time caretakers cottage at the entrance, the only thing to break the silence will be the seals playing on the rocks, a pair of eagles overhead, or the moose we call Bullwinkle. Lot priced from $75,000 to $145,000 with owner financing. Call 1-207-255-3516. 7 16/8.20l

Yo John!

THIS IS your second ad and my second to last free one! Had the BEST time with you Thursday and there's nothing you can do about it! But next time, John, I'm bringing pliers! Beware John!!! SMASHETTE

Hey CPI!

THIS IS it! The famous final scene. Had to say good-bye this way because it's easier on me, and besides, I'm a show off - you guys know that! My dear friend and partner in crime, Marie. Pam (good morning Mr. Breakfast! Oof, we're SO LOUD!!!!!), RJH (For Hire!, Paul, Wooly Walter, Kevin (111), Joanne, Maureen, Heather, you guys are great! Marlene (Oh my God! Can you believe it!), Betty (I cover my whole dining room in plastic!), Ta-Bor (you still owe me a ride on the dumbwaiter), Jackie, Sue, Paula, Jean, thanks for putting up with my impressions. Merry, Deb, Bob (Soo any good gossip?), Natalie (I'll shuffle for you), Alta, Naomi, thanks for all your help. Jennie, Paul Drake, Photo (wanna go get a doughnut?), Luv You! Walter (What kind of a job is that? Going to track meets! They pay you for that?!), Jim (you Son of an Editor you!), Sue S., Sue H., Roger (Don't touch my disk drive!), Maria, Ro, Sandy and My Alma Lou (I love you!) you're wonderful ladies! Joan, Elizabeth (congratulations!), Chuck, thanks for everything. Mike, I love you, you've been wonderful but I STILL HATE THE LEGALS! Last but by no means least my girls - Lisa & Orissa, you stood by me and made me proud. I couldn't have asked for a more devoted staff. You guys ARE the Best! From Pete & Kay to what it is today, I'll miss you CPI! I love you all SO MUCH! (hey! This is my LAST AD!!!) Love, LISA— By the way, I will be marketing a tape of office impersonations, it's available to you for only $9.95 if you ACT NOW! (Helium anyone?!!)

THANK YOU St. Jude for prayers answered. F.M. 8/6/8.20l

HEY STEVE— Had a great time spending the week-end with you! Looks like that little break of ours did us some good. Well, be prepared and get your sea legs ready 'cuz we're gonna catch some sharks Sunday! LOVE ALWAYS ME!

LISA — Good luck with your new job. I'll miss you here at this "lovely" place! You've taught me a lot. Thanks for everything. LOVE, RIS. Ha! Ha! Now the helium tank is ALL mine!

T.F. stands for TOTALLY FANTASTIC rates!

When you run a T.F. (till further notice ad) with Century Classifieds you get the advantage of running your ad continuously in 6 newspapers until YOU decide to cancel.

You will also receive a guaranteed place in the category of your choice. You will never be placed any lower in the category and should the advertiser above you cancel you will automatically be moved to that higher spot!

The best part of T.F. advertising however is the rates!

20 words or less with no subheading	$ 4.25 per week $17.00 per month
20 words or less with one line of subheading	$ 5.50 per week $22.00 per month
20 words or less with two lines of subheading	$ 6.75 per week $27.00 per month
20 words or less with three lines of subheading	$ 8.00 per week $32.00 per month

Six week run minimum is required on all T.F. advertising

Trust locks, alarms to protect your auto

Thirty years ago, car security meant rolling up all the windows on the family station wagon before a quick dash to the store or leaving the dog in the garage with the cars at night.

But like everything else, security has gotten more complicated in the 1980s. Too many motorists have felt their hearts sink upon finding their car stereo, tires, or worse, their entire vehicle, missing from a parking spot or garage.

Insurance industry statistics reveal that in 1983, one of every 48 cars was either stolen or broken into, up from one in 58 in 1975. More than 1 million vehicles are stolen each year, costing the public between $4 billion and $5 billion, according to the Automotive Information Council.

Cautious car owners now are taking the time to not only roll up their car windows, but also to lock the doors and take the keys with them. The Insurance Information Institute says 80 percent of the more than 1 million cars stolen last year were unlocked and 40 percent had a key in the ignition.

Some car owners are doing even more.

Forecasters estimate auto security device sales will reach $200 million in 1986. Many theft-deterrents cost under $50, require little professional assistance and provide good protection from professional car thieves, according to the AIC.

Traditional auto alarms can scare away even the most daring car thief. In most systems, an opened door, trunk or hood will activate a wailing siren or blaring horn. Other alarms sound when a device is not deactivated by the car owner upon entering the vehicle. These more elaborate systems often have digital key pads or accompanying beepers that the owner carries in a purse or pocket.

A motion detector sounds an alarm when a vehicle is lifted or moved, as in an attempt to steal the tires. Glass breakage detectors are also available.

Another popular anti-theft device is a hidden "kill-switch." When activated, this device prevents the engine from running for more than a few seconds at a time, bringing attention to the stalled vehicle and a would-be thief.

Hood and trunk locks also are good theft deterrents. Without them, a skilled thief can deactivate most auto alarms or engine cut-off switches in seconds. Locks are also available for the ignition, steering wheel, brakes, car stereo and wheels.

Etching the car's vehicle identification number on each window or on metal body parts can be an effective security measure because a thief would have to replace or discard them before selling the car or its parts.

Inexpensive devices, like tapered door-lock buttons and a locking gas cap, can help slow down or discourage a potential thief.

Stereos are to car thieves what catnip is to cats ... over 50,000 radio-cassette players are stolen each year. If you've had your car stereo stolen and hestitated to replace it, you might invest in an attachment like the Sound Sender, manufactured by Hartell of St. Paul, Minn. The attachment plugs into the car's cigarette lighter and a portable cassette player, allowing tapes to be played on the radio's FM band.

Drive to the beat with radios, compact discs

Some of the most impressive sound systems in America can be found in the dashboards of automobiles.

Car audio systems have come a long way since the small sounds of the 1960s and early 1970s. Now the discriminating listener can put together a state-of-the-art system costing anywhere from a few hundred to a few thousand dollars.

A good place to start is with a system that incorporates an AM/FM stereo, cassette player and power amplification.

Many of today's new cars come with this type of system, but car stereo experts like audio equipment salesman Rich Stow of San Diego, recommend replacing stock radio speakers.

"You can get a much better sound quality with a custom system," he said.

If the beat is not loud enough for you, a separate amplifier is the key. Mount it under the dash, in the glove box or even in the trunk.

Tailoring the sound to your car is the equalizer's job. An equalizer lets the listener manipulate various tone levels, making them stronger or weaker.

The range of control is usually broken down into five to 10 groups, each having its own knob or slider.

"The more the ranges are broken down, the more control you have," Stow said.

The big news in sound equipment is, of course, the compact disc.

"Compact disc players are the biggest breakthrough in car audio systems of the 1980s," he said. "Nothing can beat the sound."

What set the compact disc player apart from the masses is that the music is recorded on a grooveless disc and tracked with a laser. The sound is crystal-clear because dust, scratches and other pitfalls linked to cassettes do not affect it. The discs also have a long life.

Speakers should be the final addition to your ultimate sound system. Speakers come in all shapes and sizes to fit the needs of your car. Make sure they can handle your stereo's power.

Once you invest in new equipment, maintenance is the only way to ensure high fidelity.

Tape players are especially sensitive to dirt, dust and smoke. If yours are starting to sound dull, apply a commercial cleaner that comes in a cassette shell. Apply cleaning fluid to the cleaner's pad and insert the device in the player, letting it run for a second or two.

CAR CARE CORNER
By Dan Hogan, Service Manager

Dirt on your car's finish can damage the finish. Salt sprinkled on the roads during winter months can cause the metal on your car to rust. The best preventive maintenance for finishes is to wash the car every time it gets dirty. If you have been driving the car on salted roads, the car should be washed weekly at a car wash. Your car also should be waxed at least twice annually—in the spring and fall. Don't overlook cleaning the inside of your car also.

The technicians at PETER FULLER OLDS are ASE certified. We keep a computerized history of all cars serviced here to notify you of preventative maintenance. Open 8-5. Tel. 924-8100. Steps on housing outlined

TM makes final decisions

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Planning Board Chairman Maryann McCall-Taylor told the Board of Selectmen Monday night that three steps should be taken at Fall Town Meeting to implement the conclusions of the Pattison, Slavek and Associates affordable housing report.

"It is a good report," McCall-Taylor said. "A situation that last year looked hopeless, we could get turned around and provide some affordable housing."

The first step in the process will be the adoption of an inclusionary zoning policy within the Winchester Zoning Bylaw. Pattison, Slavek and Associates will draft the amendment to the bylaws using the recommendations of the Long Range Housing Plan.

The policy would require all new developers to set aside a percentage of the housing units on their development site for low and moderate income housing.

The other two warrant issues, the establishment of a Winchester Housing Partnership Board (WHP) and a Community Development Department under the town bylaws, will be the responsibility of the Selectmen, McCall-Taylor said.

The WHP would work with the Massachusetts Housing Partnership (MHP). The MHP helps local committees realize their affordable housing goals. "It's very important to have some government management," Selectman Thomas Schmitt said. "Nobody knows who's responsible (for housing) now."

The Planning Board described the WHP's mission in a draft of the amendment as "the town's coordination on housing and work with public, private and non-profit agencies in implementing Winchester's affordable housing program."

The creation of the WPH would relieve the Winchester Housing Authority from the task of planning and leave them to their primary concern, property management, McCall-Taylor said.

The Community Development Department would focus primarily on housing, but would also tackle other development issues, according to the Planning Board's recommendation. It would coordinate all housing and development decisions. That effort would include related town programs, departments and capital planning projects as well as town funding of land purchases and building costs.

The department will also have the task of developing a long range planning policy for Winchester. Economic development projects would also be under the department's domain.

McCall-Taylor said these steps are just the beginning. She said there is more in the works for the spring.

Selectman Robert Deering questioned whether the recommendations of the report would satisfy the state's requirements for affordable housing. Joseph Slavek told him, "The state has loose standards and hesitates to impose numerical targets on towns. The state is looking for an overall strategy." He added that "I doubt, in view of the king of language the state used in its agreement with the town, that this would be unsatisfactory."

Selectmen burying the hatchet

Members reach agreement on how to disagree in the future

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

The Board of Selectmen decided Monday night that the recent rash of surprise attacks on each other would end.

The decision springs from a series of confrontations among the board about an alleged argument between Selectman Mark Lombardi and Francisco Ianino, the father of the man who had a permit to sandblast the Locatelli Building. Last week Selectmen Chairman Judith Muggia reprimanded Lombardi and Board member Francis Sopper, who was with Lombardi at the time of the incident, for their alleged behavior.

> 'For several weeks our discussions have been less than friendly and it makes me uncomfortable. We have to come to grips with how we deal with each other.'
> —Board member Thomas Schmitt

Board member Thomas Schmitt opened the discussion. "For several weeks our discussions have been less than friendly and it makes me uncomfortable," Schmitt said. "We have to come to grips with how we deal with each other."

Schmitt suggested giving advance notice of grievance airing by including the item on the docket if private attempts to solve the differences fail. It is only fair, Schmitt said, to give a person the chance to respond by giving them time to prepare for the discussion.

"I'm not advocating a benign forum, but issues should be addressed so people know what's going to happen. It's altogether inappropriate to spring a challenge in this forum," Schmitt said. "If we're going to take a shot, I think we owe ourselves the knowledge beforehand."

Sopper agreed that the issue had been handled improperly, but added he was not completely innocent. "I just don't think its any selectman's business to tell other selectmen how to perform," Sopper said. "Frankly, I'm guilty of trying to dictate to another selectman how to perform, and I think it's wrong."

Lombardi did not speak throughout the discussion, but talked privately to Sopper.

Board member Robert Deering said the issue should not take a formal vote to solve. "What we're talk-

School parking solution pending

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

A solution to Winchester High School's parking dilemmas may be implemented as soon as Sept. 9, the first day of school.

The Board of Selectmen blocked the Spruce Street entrance to the school with boulders, effectively erasing access to the parking lot beyond the entrance. Residents of Spruce Street had complained about the amount of traffic and speeding on the street.

The School Committee was not notified before the boulder placement, and felt the solution was not an adequate one.

At Monday night's meeting, the Board voted to support a plan pended School Committee approval that would create a parking lot on the present site of the tennis courts. The Department of Public Works would cut the curb near the entrance to the school grounds to create access to the lot.

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer said the work could be done before school begins, but he did not feel comfortable doing work on School Department land without the School Committee's sanction. He recommended removing the fence around the tennis courts, a step that will have to be taken no matter what the committee decides.

Board member Francis Sopper pushed to get the work started as soon as possible. "Why don't we start it now?" he asked. "It can be stopped."

Later he went further and asked School Committee Chairman William Jervey, who attended the meeting, "Why can't the School Committee cooperate and hold a special meeting?"

Selectmen Chairman Judith Muggia said she thought the School Committee had been very cooperative.

Jervey told the Board that the committee is concerned that the town, in acting too hastily, could be trading one problem for another. At its meeting of August 20, the School Committee supported the proposal provided a traffic study was done to see if the entrance to the new parking lot was planned for the most advantageous spot.

The committee also required that the police and fire chiefs approve the plan and all the construction on the access roads to the parking lot and the access between the new lot and the existing lot be quality work and not a makeshift solution.

Jervey reminded the board that the school would be losing four tennis courts that are used in gym classes. The courts were abandoned because the surface is uneven and dangerous due to ground settlement.

The settlement is yet another concern of the committee. They require that the capital plan for fiscal year 1989 make provisions for solving the settlement problem that plagues not only the tennis courts, but the courtyard between the auditorium and gymnasium and much of the paved surface of the grounds.

Jervey said the committee wants the boulders that block the Spruce Street entrance removed by the time school starts. "I think everybody saw in the newspaper the week after the boulders were put in place, there were cars parked in the lot anyway," he said.

That is the reason the committee also recommends landscaping the area. "Landscaping is as much a practical issue as aesthetic," Jervey said. He said that landscaping will

MIA/POW flag flying at Town Hall

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

A flag has been added to those flying at the Town Hall, a prisoner of war/missing in action flag.

The Board of Selectmen Monday night voted, with member Thomas Schmitt abstaining, to fly the flag under the Stars and Stripes near the honor roll. Schmitt said, "It reminds us of an time that is 15 years behind us. Some of us would like to forget it." He added that he did not mean to offend veterans in any way by abstaining.

The flag will fly 24 hours a day until the approximately 2,400 MIAs and POWs are accounted for.

The Board also voted to sign a resolution, with Schmitt again abstaining, to that effect.

Director of Veterans' Benefits Paul Flaherty made the request to the Board. He wrote, "This action will once again re-affirm the Town of Winchester's concern for its dear sons and daughters who have served their country and those who have made the supreme sacrifice in all wars."

The town began flying the flag Aug. 25.

'Project 2000' preparing students for next century

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

It is the year 2000. Students walk through their high school hallways carrying calculators and computer floppy disks. Courses have names like "The Computer Revolution: A Survey of American History, 1950-1990."

This scene is not science fiction. The class of 2000 will enter first grade in the fall. They deal with issues and subject matter that did not exist when their parents and teachers stepped out into the world after their graduations.

"Project 2000," headed by Winchester's Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction David Ackerman, is designed to help the town's school system revise and update its curriculum and make the transition into the 21st century a smooth one.

Ackerman organized the project at the request of Winchester's Superintendent of Schools Charles Mitsakos. It is multi-faceted and multi-year undertaking.

The main focus of the project is the thought process itself. Ackerman said. How do individual students learn? How can they be taught to think critically? What is the best balance between learning, critical thinking and learning specific facts?"

Ackerman will be working with David Perkins, a professor at the Harvard Graduate School of Education, whom he calls the project's mentor. Perkins recommended Ackerman for an appointment at the school that allows him access to all Harvard facilities. The professor will also advise Ackerman throughout the project's life.

Several programs that fall under the 2000 umbrella have already begun. "Reading and Writing Across the Secondary Curriculum" involved 20 teachers who studied the importance of these skills and how to integrate them into subjects such as math and science.

David Ackerman

> "Encouraging students to ask a lot of question is a very important idea."
> Asst. Supt. David Ackerman

In "Learning to Learn" teachers diagnosed the different learning styles students have, attempting to develop the best ways to transmit material from teacher to student.

"What in the World," led by Lincoln School learning specialist Joanne Benton, explored ways of bringing more interesting contexts, like spiders, whales and dinosaurs, into first grade classes. This was organized as an in-service day for first-grade teachers with an emphasis on critical thinking.

"Encouraging students to ask a lot of question is a very important idea," Ackerman said. Asking questions is the mark of an educated person, not a passive learner; questions help students anticipate what they will be learning next and give them a head start on the material, and getting the answers to questions is a motivation to learn more, he said.

Perkins, whom Ackerman calls an international leader in thinking in curriculum, said there are four questions a teacher can have a student answer about a subject that will assure that the student gets a solid grip on the material: 1. what is the purpose? 2. what is the structure? 3. give a model case; and 4. explain and evaluate the subject. Perkins calls this method "knowledge as design."

Yet another goal of the project is the integration of various subjects, such as math and science. "Science teachers say they can't teach the students science because they don't know the math that goes along with it and the math teachers say the students know the material when they are in math class," Ackerman said. "Teachers have to make a specific connection between the two." The math teacher might say, "You will need this type of problem-solving in science class," and the science teacher might say "You can use what you learned in math today to do this experiment."

Another way teachers and administrators can help students practice the skills they learn in English class while they are learning math, Ackerman said, is to "give students math books worth reading and insist they read them."

Once Ackerman has identified these teaching methods he will spend time in the schools trying them out and documenting his results.

A major debate raging in the academic community revolves around depth versus breadth. Ackerman takes the middle line: "There is validity to both arguments, but neither should be sacrificed for the other. It takes two to tango."

Creating a proper balance is a challenge for Ackerman and other academicians. "Meaningful learning takes time compared to rote learning. For all learning to be meaningful, we would have to cut a lot out of the curriculum and that would be too big a sacrifice. Students need a breadth of knowledge as well," Ackerman said.

Future graduating classes will have to be life-long learners because of rapidly changing technology and more dynamic career decisions, Ackerman said. He also foresees a need for greater problem-solving skills.

Despite all the changes Ackerman is planning to implement, he said many things will stay the same but be organized differently. "The basics are still the basics," he said.

POLICE LOG

Sunday, August 23

At 8:05 p.m. while patrolling, police noticed a 1987 Plymouth go straight from the left turn lane on Main Street at the intersection of Skillings Road, according to police reports.

Police followed the car heading north. Police stopped the car in front of the car wash, police said.

When the officer asked the driver for his license he told police he did not have one. A check showed no record of a driver's license in the name of the driver, according to reports.

Police arrested the man on charges of operating without a license and violation of Department of Public Works rules, police said.

Saturday, August 22

At 11:53 p.m. police were called to the scene of a disturbance in the parking lot of the Bowladrome on White Street, according to reports.

Upon arriving at the scene, officers saw two youths bleeding from head wounds.

Police said one youth told him four or five boys were in the parking lot when another youth got out of his car and said he wanted to fight. The youth had a tire iron and a pair of vice grips, according to one witness, police said.

The youth began to swing the tire iron, causing a general brawl, witnesses said.

One of the youths involved said some of the boys had harassed him and his brother as they drove near the parking lot, police said.

One youth said he was hit in the head with the vice grips continually until police arrived. Another said he felt something hit him in the back of the head, but he didn't know what it was, according to police reports.

Police found vice grips surrounded by what appeared to be drops of blood in the parking lot. The tire iron was found in the street, according to police.

One youth was arrested on charges of assault and battery with a deadly weapon. The other eight youths involved will be summoned to court on charges of disturbing the peace and being disorderly persons, police said.

The two youths with head wounds and one with a bloody nose were treated at Winchester Hospital emergency room and released, according to police.

At 1:38 p.m. police were dispatched to the scene of a motor vehicle accident on Main Street, according to reports.

A Pond Street woman in a Volkswagon van caught the front left bumper of a parked truck while trying to park in front of it, police said.

The pickup truck, owned by a Woburn man, had the left front bumper pulled out almost one foot, police said.

The van's right-side sliding door and the rear quarter were creased.

At 1:17 p.m. police responded to an accident call from Pond Street, according to reports.

A Woburn woman driving a 1983 Mazda heading south on Pond Street hit a parked van owned by a Pond Street man. After hitting the van, the Mazda damaged six-feet of post and rail fencing and came to rest in the front yard of 215 Pond Street, according to police.

The woman could offer no explanation for hitting the van, police said.

The Mazda had damage to the right front and roof. The woman complained of pain, but had no visible injuries, according to police reports

At 12:05 p.m. police were dispatched to the scene of a motor vehicle accident at the intersection of George and Cross Streets, according to police reports.

A Wakefield man in a 1984 Mercury sedan was hit by a Glenwood Avenue man driving a 1983 Buick two-door. The Wakefield man told police he did not make a full stop at the stop sign before proceeded south on George Street, according to police.

The Buick hit the Mercury in the rear causing right rear damage to the Mercury and left front damage to the Buick. A passenger in the Buick complained of pain, but had no visible injuries and refused treatment, according to police.

Friday, August 21

At 11:48 p.m. police responded to an accident call at the intersection of Cambridge and Wildwood Streets, according to reports.

When they arrived they found an extensively damaged 1981 Ford Mustang in the front yard of 94 Wildwood Street. The driver, a Swanton Street man was pinned in the front seat, according to police.

The Swanton Street man complained of leg pain. He was treated by emergency medical technicians until a "Jaws of Life" machine arrived to pry the door off the car. The man was transported to Winchester Hospital for treatment of a broken leg, according to police.

A 1974 Chevrolet Monte Carlo with right front end damage faced east on Wildwood Street. The driver, a Cambridge Street youth, told police he was going south on Cambridge Street when he saw a yellow light at the intersection.

The Swanton Street man said he was waiting at a red light. When the light turned green he entered the intersection and was hit by the Monte Carlo. He said he did not see the other car, according to police.

The two passengers in the Monte Carlo said they did not see the light. The driver was cited for failure to stop at a red light, according to police.

At 11:27 a.m. police responded to an accident call on Lake Street, according to reports.

An Arlington man driving a Chevrolet and a Winchester girl riding a bicycle collided, police said.

The man was driving within the marked lane beside the bicycle, a witness said, when the girl tried to make a left turn. The bicycle's handlebar grips and the left front fender of the car came into contact, according to police.

The girl had a scraped left elbow, but refused medical treatment, police said.

Copy Deadline

Contributions for publication submitted by 4 p.m. Monday will be considered for that Thursday's paper.

Contributors are requested to submit typed, double-spaced copy.

Submission by the deadline does not, however, guarantee publication the same week, as final decisions on what to include each week are made based on space considerations.

Every attempt will be made to place time-sensitive copy in a timely manner.

ABOUT TOWN

Community use open gym program begins Sept. 14

The Winchester Community Use of Schools Open Gym program will begin its 14th season on Sept. 14. As usual the gym will be open Monday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m. for adults only. The program is open to all residents.

The admission fee is $1 for all Winchester residents with positive identification and $3 for non-residents.

The weekend schedule will go into effect Dec. 5. From this date forward the gym will be open Saturdays and Sundays from 12:30 to 4:30 a.m. in addition to the Monday and Thursday evening schedule. During the weekends the program is open to students in seventh grade and up including adults. Families are also invited to use the gym, but youngsters below seventh grade must be accompanied by an adult. The fee is $1 for students.

To better serve the residents of Winchester non-residents will have certain time restrictions during our busy and often crowded winter months of December, January and February. During this time non-residents' hours will be 8 to 10 p.m. Monday and Thursday evenings and 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday. In addition I.D. cards will be issued to residents to use to gain admission for one dollar. This will eliminate confusion at the entrance desk.

The program offers many features however, the main game is basketball. No courts are reserved and all games are on a first come, first play basis. There is a volleyball group that meets regularly on Monday evenings which welcomes new faces. In addition, there is a weight room for those familiar with the sport. The program offers paddle ball and provides paddles, but players must bring their own paddle ball or tennis ball. Winter joggers often use the gym when weather conditions prohibit outdoor running. Eleven and a half laps equal one mile.

No locker rooms, showers, or telephones are available, so come dressed appropriately and make transportation arrangements before you arrive at the gym. During school vacations the gym will be open during regularly scheduled hours only. If school is cancelled for any reason, the gym is also closed.

The only entrance to the gym will be from the Nelson Street area where parking is provided in the rear lot.

Music school needs piano

The Winchester Community Music School is looking for an upright piano in good condition to use for music theory classes and instrumental accompaniment. A donated piano would be considered a tax-deductible contribution to the music school. For information, contact Corie Nichols at 729-7446.

Library publishes two brochures

The Winchester Public Library has just published two brochures, "Art in the Library" and "Guide to the Winchester Public Library," designed to improve access to the library's collections and services.

"Art in the Library," printed in blue on cream paper, serves as a self-guided tour of the many works of art that have been donated to the library over time, including paintings, ornamental silver and a set of Tiffany windows.

Photographs of all the different items discussed are included. The text contains information about the artists (many lived in Winchester), their styles and techniques, and description of the pieces. The brochure was researched and written by Community Services Librarian Chris Rust, and designed by Director Matthew Sperber.

"Guide to the Winchester Public Library," printed as a five-fold, oversize brochure in maroon ink on gray paper, contains information on the library's resources, services, collections, facilities, history and policies. Included are schedules of hours and floor plans to facilitate the location of library materials. The brochure is illustrated with photographs and line drawings of art works owned by the library and architectural details of the English Norman building.

Both publications are on display and available in the library lobby.

Yesterday's youth recalls Forest Crest Farm School

By MARY JEAN WEYLMAN
Special to the Star

The students remember

Did the animals which were so special to Elsa Wittet influence the children who went to her nursery school those long years ago?

Eunice Chase, a familiar face in the town clerk's office, remembers the reason she sent her "Billy." His two older sisters had been terrified of animals. Even walking down the street was approached with trepidation in fear that a dog might meander near by.

"I had sent them to the Nursery School just around the corner, to Mrs. Parker's, which was very popular then. I decided we had to get over this animal phobia; so when it was time for Billy to go, I sent him to Farm School. I was working part-time then and sometimes his teacher, Dorothy Williams, even took him home for lunch."

And how did the animals at Forest Crest Farm affect young Bill Chase? "Nothing would do but we get him a dog!"

Cured indeed, and where is Bill Chase some 33 years after being a "charter member" of Forest Crest Farm School? Winchester High School pupils will be amazed to know that he was once afraid of animals. As one of the most beloved teachers and coaches at high school, his favorite subject is biology and when dogs cross the baseball field, they come right over to him.

Unfortunately, for another young Winchesterite, when farm school opened, she was already "too old," a kindergartener. Her mother was Wittet's first co-teacher, Dorothy Williams, and when July came, Ginny became a regular for summer camp, Farm School's "Wild World of Animals." For Bill Chase it had been dogs, for Ginny Williams it was horses that entered her life.

When only 10, she had ridden Mickey Mouse just two times when she entered a pony show in nearby Reading with Wittet's Mickey. It was the first of many blue ribbons for Ginny. She rode all through her high school days, and when Wittet opened, "Magic Meadows", a pony ring and small riding school in Brewster on the Cape, Ginny earned her first pay check, helping with the ponies at the age of 14.

And now, 30 odd years later, what's become of this protegee? She and her husband own a summer camp in the Adirondacks, where her love of horses continues.

Another nursery school student was the fourth daughter of Lane and Anne McGovern of Dartmouth Street. "I blame it all on Mrs. Wittet!" laughs Anne McGovern.

It all began right at Forest Crest, the love affair with horses. After Winchester High School, Laurie went to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and majored in, surprise, animal science. Now at 25, she works as the stable manager of a farm in Bedford, teaches riding lessons across the north and south shore, and owns her own horse.

The McGoverns just learned how serious the colic with a horse can be and are gradually getting an animal education as "grandparents."

Another horsewoman, a graduate of Forest Crest, is Becky Kingsbury, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Kingsbury of Ginn Road.

A nursery school with ponies led to riding lessons and summer camp, where Becky spent her counselor's check on a horse, which she boarded at Wittet's for several years.

Its board was earned every afternoon by cleaning the stables, grooming the horses and exercising them. Riding was a serious vocation for this young lady who trained to compete in Madison Square Garden.

Although she ended there only as a groom for another rider, her interest never waned. Now a graduate of University of New Hampshire, she is married to a man whose family own a horse farm, and their dream is to own a horse farm of their own in the future.

The teachers remember

Many of the Farm School teachers still reside in Winchester: Alice Dickman, Maxime Kajander, Irene Larkin and Dottie Williams, and they still gather on a regular basis to keep the Farm School connection. The years they shared at the Farm School give a closeness and fondness that endures through time.

Kajander continues on the Wittet tradition in a small way. "Mrs. Wittet loved the out of doors and made it a big part of the children's education. If they weren't well enough to go outside, they didn't come to school that day. We were outside a great deal, throughout the winter. I have a little nursery school of my own, just six children, but we carry on the same tradition. We stress the outdoors and go outside regulary making snow angels in the winter, enjoying each season. We stress consideration for others, a major focus at Farm School. Formal learning is not stressed; only story hour and snack are times when everyone shares the same activity. Of course, the only horse I have is a wooden one, but we love animals."

Larkin was a teacher who worked almost the entire 24 years at the school. When a newcomer to Winchester, with two small boys, she was thinking of being a substitute teacher. When she applied to Wittet, she had no idea she would stay "forever."

Like Kajander, Larkin remembered the main feeling at Farm Schoool was teaching concern for each other, learning to appreciate life through caring for animals. Happiness and good feelings for oneself and others were equally important. "It was a relaxed atmosphere, very happy; it was fun to go to work everyday."

Williams began the school with Wittet, staying home during the middle years to raise her own family. She and Kajander recalled an unusual visitor one of the final years Farm School was open.

They were both finishing chores at the day's end after the children had departed, when a stranger came up the walk and knocked at the door. The young man, about 30, politely asked to come in. "I was driving by and saw the sign. I couldn't help stopping. I wanted to see if it was the same as the place I remembered coming to when I was four."

Since the opening in 1952, more than 1000 children from half a dozen communities surroundng and including Winchester have patted animals at Forest Crest Farm School.

Most of them know "Rocky," short for Rockefeller, the turtle who lived for many years at the school. Some of them were on hand to see litters of Dalmations and goats born, others rode Mirap, Mickey Mouse or Chiquita.

Some gathered eggs from chickens, others brushed shoulders with the goats as they came down the slide. Some would remember frosty fingers and toes during the annual Christmas program when the MSPCA ambulance truck drove up the hill.

Many children were shepherds in the manger scene, and a few, like Wendy Capabianco, were chosen to be the Christmas Princess, riding on a friendly donkey.

Everyone had fists full of carrots and apples for the poor working horses in Boston and joined in carols around the living tree decorated for the birds of Forest Crest. Some of the magic was permanently captured on film by the Winchester Star and Boston Globe.

Current High School sophomores and juniors may even remember takng part in the final 1975 flag celebration that marked the bittersweet closing of the school that loved animals.

Forest Crest Farm still stands at 257 Forest St.; it is freshly painted and a flag hangs out greeting visitors. A garden with lettuce and zucchini flourishes out back.

Most of the animals are gone; a talkative cockatiel and Pepsi, a friendly cat, reign over the house where children once flocked.

And Mirap, Wittet's treasured horse, still lives at the MSPCA MaComber Farm in Framingham at 32, an amazing age for a horse.

In July, Wittet and her daughter Sandy, went out to visit the horse who had been such a beautiful member of the Farm School family.

Time does not change devotion to animals and Wittet greeted her old friend as if time had stood still. When she returned to Winchester, it was difficult to see the freshly painted corral behind Forest Crest empty.

But she knew in her heart, as in the book she has written, that the ponies and horses will always be there.

This is the third in a series of articles on Elsa Wittet by Mary Jean Weylman, a Winchester resident and friend of the Wittets.

FLASHBACKS

A look back at Winchester news this week...

5 years ago: 1982:

Two firms, Geotechnical Engineers of Winchester and the Cambridge firm Haley and Aldrich, submit bids for a contract to study five sites for the relocation of the police and fire station. They request that the two departments be moved elsewhere in order to open up the current station for commercial development.

Winchester Home and Garden Club supplies a series of new steps and accompanying plantings on the slope at the rear of the public library to replace an eroded footpath.

Arrangments are underway for the Swanton Street Bridge to be removed and replaced by an embankment across the rail line. By building a road instead of a bridge, the state will save almost half a million dollars. The reconstruction was halted on June 19 after constrction workers had been there for only one month, because B & M Railroads was considering abandoning the railroad.

All but four of the 15 teachers laid off by the School Committee August 10 will be expected back in Winchester Schools on the schools in the fall. The approval of a federal grant for the Winchester Intervention Network (WIN) program is allowing the school system to hire back 6 of the laid-off teachers. Unless enrollment in the schools declines by less than expected, 4 teachers will not be coming back. The fate of those jobs rests on the accuracy of the school administration's enrollment projections.

15 years ago: 1972

Winchester Youth Center is termed successful after its first year, offering activities such as concerts and movies every Thursday and Friday night. Some 200 to 300 youths came to the center each night, ranging in age from junior high level, to college level. What made the center such a success, whereas centers in neighboring towns have been closed, was the freedom for the participants.

A two-day orientation program is conducted for teachers new to the Winchester Public Schools. Familiarization with buildings, facilities, administrators and fellow instructors is stressed. Returning teachers are welcomed back into the system at an opening general faculty meeting.

25 years ago: 1962

The Tufts Road controversy reopened this week when the Board of Selectmen, in a three-page letter to the Editor of the Star, criticizes the newspaper reporting of the controversy as "inadequate, slanted, and innaccurate." The board voiced concern that the people of Winchester could not depend on their only local newspaper for complete, objective, and accurate reporting.

The Winchester Dog Officers urge the owners of unlicensed dogs to license their pets immediately at the Town Hall. Failure to register a dog can result in court action, a fine and possible loss of the dog to Harvard Medical School. If a dog is found unlicensed about town, he will be impounded in a kennel at a board charge of $1.50 per day to the owner. If the dog is impounded for more than 10 days, he will be sent to Harvard Medical School.

10 years ago: 1977

Winchester is chosen to be one of the 37 Massachusetts communities involved in the American Host Program of 1977. The American Host Foundation is one of the few non-government agencies designed to show the American way of life to foreign visitors. There are 2,000 Host families involved in the program, covering 43 states.

Bartlett Private Elementary School takes another step when its doors open in the fall for the 14th year at its new location, the former Wyman School on Church Street. The rental of the Wyman School property at 83 Church Street increases playground area, and adds a fine arts room, music room and gymnasium-auditorium.

40 years ago: 1947

Through the courtesy of Houghton Mifflin Co. Publishing, the Star receives a copy of "The Boston Book", a book on Boston photographed by Winchester photographer Arthur Griffin.

Winchester's intolerable hot spell is broken after an electrical storm followed by a terrific downpour of rain, breaking all comparable records of the Water Department, which reproted that 2½ inches of rain fell in half an hour.

Coach Henry Knowlton puts a big green, but willing and ambitious squad through the preliminary paces of pre-season. All efforts go in preparation for the football season, with the first game only two weeks away against Lexington High School.

Three make dean's list at Bentley

Lisa Jean Cipriano, Lisa M. DiBlasi and Barbara N. DiVincenzo have been named to the dean's list for outstanding academic achievement in the spring semester.

To be named to the dean's list, a student must have a grade point average of 3.2 or higher with no course grade falling below 2.0 during the term.

Cipriano, a senior, is majoring in management.

DiBlasi, also a senior, is working toward a degree in marketing.

DiVincenzo, a sophomore, is majoring in business communication.

Three to attend Bates College

Steve M. Goudsouzian, Kimberley D. Small, and Michael P. Golden will enter Bates College in Lewiston, Maine, as freshmen in September.

Goudsouzian is the son of Dr. Nishan and Mary Goudsouzian of Mayflower Road. He is a graduate of Winchester High School, where he participated in student government and was a member of the soccer team.

Small is the daughter of William and Elizabeth Small of Stowell Drive. She is a graduate of Winchester High School, where she was editor of the "Red and Black," the school's newspaper.

She was also a member of the band and the soccer and softball teams.

Golden is the son of Francis and Maureen Golden of Kenwin Drive. He is a graduate of Winchester High School where he was on the staff of the "Red and Black." He was also a member of the National Honor Society, the international club, band, Latin club, and French club.

PEOPLE

Nancy Marmon, Diane Marian, Brooke Estridge and Cameron Hooson perform.

Carayannopoulos is home on leave

Leonidas Carayannopoulos, a 1986 graduate of Winchester High School has graduated from boot camp at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot in Parris Island, S.C.

The son of George and Margaret Carayannopoulos of Church Hill Road completed Marine Corps Recruit Training Aug. 17 and returned home on 10 days leave last week. He will report next to Camp Pendelton in California for armored vehicle training.

Recorder students perform

The recorder students of Carole Davidson, Winchester teacher of recorder and Orff-Kodaly, performed a concert for the residents of Mt. Vernon House and their guests.

Students in the class include: Nancy Marmon, Diane Marian, Brooke Estridge and Cameron Hooson, Scott Phillips, Sanjeeve Martyn, Annie Marotta, Jed Berger, Jason Beals and J.J. Wrighton.

Pieces performed included "Sonata" by Corelli; "Now Is The Month of Maying" by Morley; "Buttercup's Song" by Sir Arthur Sullivan; and many folksongs from other lands.

The teaching of Orff-Kodaly has become very popular in our country. It features children learning musical concepts: singing in tune, rhythm, movement — while playing games and having fun in a class of your peers. Children who begin at 4 or 5 with this training move easily into more advanced work on various instruments as they grow. Mrs. Davidson offers classes for children from 4-9.

COMING EVENTS

Girls Scouts to hold anniversary tea

Winchester Girl Scout Chairman Mary Johnson and 75 Anniversary Liason Marjorie Moore are planning a tea for Sunday, Sept. 20 to honor the Girl Scouts anniversary.

The tea will be held at the Knights of Columbus Hall at 2 p.m.

All former and current girl scout leaders and adults who were once scouts are invited to the celebration.

For further information, contact Marjorie Moore, 729-7212, or Mary Johnson, 729-3082.

'Lite Learning' offered

Time to think about fall activities for your children. Once again, elementary and junior high students will have the opportunity to take some courses for enjoyment in our after-school enrichment program.

Pottery, aerobics, personal grooming and style, creative drama and music, woodworking, and photography are samples of the variety which will offered in our six week program.

Classes will begin the last week in September and will be held at Ambrose, Lincoln, and McCall schools.

Please write to Catherine Alexander, 11 Grassmere Ave. for more information. Be sure to include your phone number. Registration will be the week of Sept. 21. Look for the flyer.

Local artist's works on display

A collection of award-winning pastel portraits by Dorothea Jeffery of Winchester will be on exhibit at the Cambridgeport Savings Bank, Main Street, Winchester, beginning Sept. 1.

The artist is a graduate of New England School of Art and Design. She is a member and treasurer of the Winchester Art Association.

In 1986, she was awarded "Best of Show" for her portrait of "Gail Alice" which appeared in a members' show sponsored by the Lexington Arts and Crafts. She also was awarded first place for pastel in the Winchester Art Association's Autumn Juried Prize Show. Many of her works are in private collections throughout New England.

The exhibit runs through October.

Immigrants have a new home in Friends of Refugees' house

By MARGARET BURNS

The Friends of Refugees have raised enough money to buy a house in West Medford, a secure, affordable home for those escaping war, turmoil and starvation in other countries.

Refugee families will rent the house from the church-affiliated group for up to 18 months, getting them integrated into the region, before another family of refugees takes their place.

The Friends of the Refugees, a non-profit organization run out of the St. Eulalia Church in Winchester, was developed in 1979 by Sister Winifred Behlen of Arlington, who heard of the then-thousands of Indo-Chinese refugees fleeing Vietnam.

After eight years of hard work by Sister Winifred and the consistent generosity and support of the parish — including residents of both Arlington and Winchester — the program has integrated about 30 families into American life.

In the newly purchased house they plan to welcome 10 more families over the next five years.

By purchasing the house at 133 Boston Ave. in West Medford, along the Mystic River, Friends of the Refugees will no longer undergo the frustrating task of finding affordable rental housing for newcomers.

When the program began, Sister Winifred said, they could find apartments for about $350 a month. But now the lowest rent she can find for two-bedroom apartments is $600 to $700. The refugees cannot afford it, having used most of their savings getting here from Asia.

Now, when the refugees arrive, they can immediately move into a home, a two-family house in very good condition, and rent at reasonable cost from the Friends of the Refugees, said Sister Winifred.

The group looked for a house in both Arlington and Winchester, but housing costs were too high in both towns, Sister Winifred said.

The West Medford house cost $145,000, and if it were not for Warren Ramirez of Bank Five, Sister Winifred said, they probably would not have been able to get a mortgage. Bank Five offered to give the group a mortgage if they could raise $52,000 for a down payment.

Ramirez, along with Sister Winifred, is a member of the Arlington Affordable Housing Task Force, which has been working to find afforable housing alternatives in Arlington.

A combination of a grant from St. Eulalia for $45,000 (to be distributed over three years) and $39,000 in contributions from parishioners totaled $54,000 in cash for the first year. Sister Winifred had hoped that the rent collected from the refugees would cover the monthly mortgage payments, but that will not be the case, she said.

Most of the money raised will go toward the downpayment, but several repairs are needed before the house can be lived in. While the past owner kept the house in good condition, the upstairs apartment needs to be repainted and wallpapered. All the paint in the house needs to be delead-ed. The house was moved to its present location from Arlington in 1901.

The financial and deeding papers for the house will be completed by Sept. 25, but they will not be able to welcome a family until late October because of the work that needs to be done, said Sister Winifred.

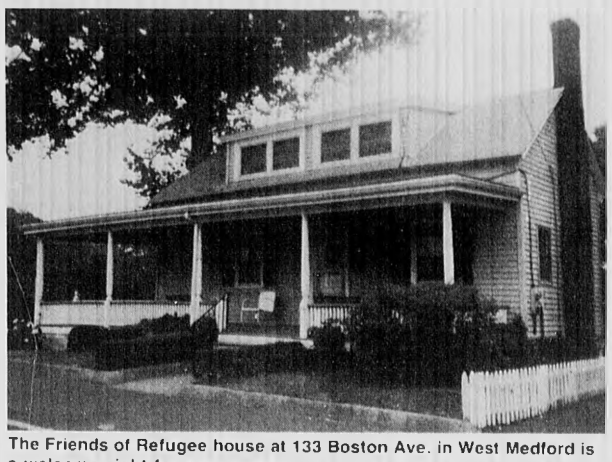
When the first two families are welcomed into the house, they will be able to stay for 18 months while they become acclimated to the culture and learn English. They will receive the same attention and assistance that the 30 other families have received from the Friends.

To sponser a family the group usually contacts the International Institute, an organization that works with the governments of countries with refugee camps, to say they are ready for a new family.

When the family, usually only a few members, arrives the Friends must provide furnished housing, basic clothing and food supplies, assist them with registering with Social Security, Division of Employment, welfare and a doctor; register the children in school and the adults in adult education classes such as English; develop the skills of the adults and try to find them part-time work, and visit the family frequently to assist with any other various problems or questions that occur.

Sister Winifred said that the contact and support never really stops, even after the family establishes its own residence and is able to support itself. She added that she and many members of the parish are in regular contact with all 165 people the program has sponsored plus the 100 others they have assisted.

Clothing, food and furniture used to get the refugees settled are all donated from the parish as is much of the money used to fund the program. But Sister Winifred said that since St. Eulalia's does not have collection baskets passed around at Mass, many church members were not aware that the group was not receiving the financial support it needs. She added that the program has always been a shoestring operation and needs all the help it can get.



The Friends of Refugee house at 133 Boston Ave. in West Medford is a welcome sight for newcomers.

Most of the refugees the Friends have helped are Vietnamese, but before they even have contact with the refugees, the refugees must successfully escape their country, usually by boat, face the possibility of capture and imprisonment by the communist regime in Vietnam. If they make it to a place such as Malaysia or Hong Kong, they must wait to be accepted by the country for placement in a refugee camp.

After making it to a camp, often after suffering torture and imprisonment for past escape attempts, they must await a sponsorship from a group like the Friends. Although the U.S. requires that the refugees have relatives living here, in many cases, said Sister Winifred, the Friends can apply to sponsor a family who has no relations here by stating that the group will act as family.

To date, all the refugees sponsored by the Friends of Refugees have been Vietnamese, but the group wants open the program to refugees from other countries. Sister Winifred said that there are thousands of refugees from several Eastern bloc and other Asian countries that need placement.

The reason the Friends have only sponsored Vietnamese refugees in the past is because the first migration helped with the subsequent migrations and made translation and adaptation move more quickly and smoothly.

Sister Winifred, a 71-year-old nun with sparkling blue eyes, has been with St. Eulalia's Parish for eight years, since she left her teaching position at the Marycliff Academy, the now defunct Catholic girls school.

And beside running the program, she also acts as mother to two Vietnamese children who are awaiting the arrival of their own mother.

Contributions toward the Friends of Refugees home can be made to: Friends of Refugees, St. Eulalia Church, 50 Ridge St., Winchester, MA 01890.

COMMENT

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Selectmen agree on how to disagree in future

Ever since Adam and Eve had children, there's been fighting among human beings.

The Winchester Board of Selectmen is no exception.

It is a healthy sign when a group of five elected board members argue about issues. No governing body should be without its differences, just as the population it governs is not without differences.

The problem begins when the differences in political opinion causes personal attacks.

The move by Selectman Thomas Schmitt to end the fighting was the most positive step a board member has taken since the disagreements began

Whether or not Selectmen Mark Lombardi and Francis Sopper acted in an improper manner when dealing with Francisco Ianino and the chemical blasting problem, is not the issue. Whether or not Lombardi acted as a private citizen or in his role as town official is also another issue.

Whether or not the Selectmen can put aside their differences to work for the better interests of the community is the issue. Personality problems should not enter the formal workings of government

Selectman Robert Deering hit the nail on the head when he said during the board's discussion of their recent problems, "What we're talking about here is decorum. It's something you either have or you don't. You can have all the rules you want."

Decorum takes a little self-control and respect for the board members and the governmental process they represent. The five Selectmen have all the ingredients necessary to conduct the town's business with decorum; they just put those ingredients on the back burner and forgot about them for a while

Not until Schmitt brought it up did the board publicly acknowledge the necessity of these qualities and the discomfort the disuse of decorum was causing all of them.

Only time will tell if the wounds of the past few weeks will begin to heal, but it will take more than a few minutes of discussion to heal them completely

It is a step in the right direction to decide that there will be no more pot shots and that personal differences will be worked out in a private forum or as a docket item, but it is only the first step.

If these problems continue to plague the board, whether they be docket items in which both parties are prepared for an argument or private discussion, the board will not be able to fullfill its responsibility to the Town of Winchester.

Each of the five board members must think, and think hard, not for one week, but for every week that they remain public figures, about putting their personal differences aside so they are free to discuss the concerns of the town.

Selectmen, among the most visible town figures, should know that stories become skewed and rumors begin the minute any one of them does something a little bit out of the ordinary.

Second-hand knowledge should be taken with a grain of salt, as should the testimony of someone who saw only part of an incident.

"Reliable witnesses" or not, all selectmen should give each other the benefit of the doubt, especially if that benefit will allow the town to run in a more efficient manner.

That does not mean that all behavior should be excused, but all the facts must be know by the parties involved before an internal problem is brought to the public attention. To accuse in public is a disservice not only to the accused, but also to the people the board represents.

An elected official has the responsibility to present the facts, all the facts, to the public so each individual can make a knowledgable decision.

Presenting some of the facts, or even most of the facts, to the public and asking it to make a judgment is an injustice to all parties involved.

Selectmen Chairman Judith Muggia admitted she did not handle the situation properly, and said the public fighting had caused her unhappiness as well, "I would be much happier to continue as I had before, to approach the person and discuss it in private."

Public disputes over personal matters make everyone look like a villain, and, further, they create a rift that will only make the current problem and any issues down the road more difficult, perhaps impossible, to solve.

Luckily for the town of Winchester, the Selectmen were honest enough to go back to the public and admit that they were wrong. What Schmitt said first was expressed by all the members of the board; they were not happpy with the way events progressed, but once the ball starts rolling, it gets harder and harder to catch up to it and stop it.

The Selectmen have caught the ball in time to avoid what could have become a problem for the whole town.

Takes exception to comment

TO THE EDITOR:

As a native of Winchester, as well as my father and all of his family, I would like to take exception to the statement made by one of the Town Meeting Members of Winchester, in the Winchester Star, Thursday, August 13, 1987. I am a subscriber to the Star even though I am no longer a resident of the town. After marrying I reluctantly moved.

I am referring to the following remark "After we had been in town for a little while I was shocked to discover that Jewish people were not welcome here. I was rather sorry to think we had bought a house in a place where my friends wouldn't be welcome to live...."

I can remember when I was in elementary school of several Jewish families residing in Winchester (early 1900s) namely: -the Feinbergs (at a later date one member of the family becoming an officer of one of the local banks); the Rabinovitzes, the Weiners, (a son a star athlete at the High School), the Cohens, the Frumsons, the Kagans, the Chitels (Ben or Jack, owners of the recently disbanded Haberdashery on Mount Vernon Street) formerly owned by their father, Philip for years, etal.

I also have fond memories of a group of Jewish folks gathering to observe their celebration of "Yom Kippur" every year. At that time it was necessary for them to hire one of the public halls, but were never interfered with, just helped.

As a member of St. Mary's Church (at that time our pastor was Nathaniel Merritt) where I was taught to treat folks as you would wish to be treated, and that is what we did.

Deserted drive-ins reminders of past

By TERRY MAROTTA

Many a summer night ago, when we were the privileged children of a generation for whom Annette, and the Beaver, and television itself had been invented, I went, together with my sister, for the first time to the Drive-In.

The Drive-In was near our summer place, on the outskirts of a small town tucked among some small and unassuming hills. Its screen was immense, a totem, a towering trapezoid glowing bright against a black sky.

We saw Doris Day that night. In her headbands and her pedal-pushers and her oversize men's pajamas, she cavorted with freckled children and with sheep dogs.

There was popcorn sold in boxes with smiling clowns on them. There were Root Beers and Nehis. There were other kids, in pajamas. Best of all, there was for each car its own personal speaker, which when hung from the window crackled and purred and brought the whole drama inside our very heads, it seemed, with the buzzing intimacy of the mosquito pledged to attend you on a hot and sleepless night.

The grownups brought us to this place of wonder, having bowed finally to our endless wheedling, even stoking us first at the new joint called McDonald's, where a burger went for a nickel and one skinny dime.

It was a rare night. We were dazzled by Doris, who grinned and bounded gamely through her fictional life, hitting just the right Fifties mix of pert spunk and melting deference; we were amazed.

It even took us a while to notice how many cars in front of and to the sides of us appeared empty.

"Mom, there are NO PEOPLE in those cars!" we yipped. "Where are the heads?"

Mom, who knew right well where the heads were, responded with tight-lipped and uncharacteristic reserve, which she maintained even when, after a fourth trip to the Snack bar for Jujyfruits and Dots and Tootsie Rolls, we ourselves had located them.

They were there, we told her. They were lying down, some of them; they were slumped against the doors. They looked unwell. Were they overcome by some kind of toxic fumes? Should we do something?

"No," she said rather firmly, and bid us gaze again at all the jolly high jinks on the screen.

Before many years passed, of course, the toxic fumes overcame us too.

We grew older, and went to other drive-ins with people other than our own little family.

Sometimes we went in groups — packed ourselves six, seven teens to a car, talking loudly about our hopeless teachers, our impossible parents, and smoked long theatrical cigarettes while shoot-outs and hangings and premature burials flickered on the screen before us.

Sometimes we went in pairs, and that face and that night were all that mattered in the world.

But those Drive-Ins were not like the one in that sleepy summer town so long ago. And television belongs to all the generations now. Annette is the Mother Theresa of the Disney Channel. Doris Day, I read somewhere, has taken to sleeping smeared in Vaseline.

I saw that Drive-In just last month. It stands deserted now, its era passed as our youth has passed.

The cindered lot is a pasture again. The posts that once held the little speakers stand ghostly in the high grasses, a march of simple markers, stark and similar as the graves of soldiers.

Buttercups and black-eyed Susans wave in the wind. Wild strawberries grow along the path to the Snack bar. The screen is in tatters.

A lone beer bottle makes sole testimony to the gaudy dreams once toasted in this place. A cricket hops about inside it. Together with a thousand brothers, he applauds unceasingly.

Why women should fix the pipes and men should fold the laundry

By Elma Chickering

Just in case you think this "unisex" idea has gone too far, consider the plight of today's young marrieds who, despite being "liberated" from all the old sex stereotypes about men's and women's roles in a marriage, find themselves right back where Dad and Mother were when confronted with the "logical and fair" division of household chores. Who does what?

He says: "Why does everyone, especially my wife, assume that just because I'm a male I have an instinctive knowledge of all the stuff she doesn't care to cope with — be it leaking plumbing, short circuits, a blacked-out TV screen or bugs in the garden? Sometimes she can do it better than I can but doesn't care — or dare — to. Is she afraid of shattering my male ego? I have none where unplugging the stopped-up toilet, locating garden sloths or twisting dangerous wires is concerned. Someone must do it — and quickly and, it is hoped, without taking out a loan to finance it. But why me? Her confidence in me is touching — but misplaced.

"Why did I ever give the impression that I was a handy man — or did I? Breathes a man with machismo so weak that he cares to confess before the honeymoon, or liaison, that he isn't mechanical, knows nothing about TV repair, plumbing or electrical problems? As for gardening, some like it indoors, some like it out. If the latter, I'm sure to be pressed into service to spade up the garden, fence it, spray and stake it and other manual work, but who picks the flowers and boasts of the vegetable crop? I have my limitations and, alas, many fall within the realm of the so-called masculine area of expertise."

She says: "It will come as somewhat of a surprise to most men to learn that we women are not born with instinctive knowledge of cooking, cleaning, baby-tending and how to get that spot out. Most of us learn, willy-nilly and achieve a degree of skill in many areas we find unpleasant and uncongenial. Said skill is acquired the hard way — by trial and error. We try to conceal from the trusting male in our life as many of the errors as possible and tout our successes.

"Should we confess our ignorance of domestic basics at the start? His confidence in our inate 'housfrau' know-how is all very flattering until we realize belatedly we're being conned into doing all the dirty, routine household cleaning jobs we hand't bargained for in a modern menage. This is not the kind of cooperation we thought implicit in a 50-50 partnership. Women's work is still women's work — plus a lot more.

"Breathes there a feminist with skill so minimal she hasn't wondered how she can hide from her expectant male partner the fact that she has no inborn knowledge of housewifery? Should she confess she watches Julia Child only for the monologue, thinks knitting is what bones do and hates laundry? Blessing, say we, on convenience stores, fast-food chains and disposable everything — assuming the plumbing and trash can can take it all."

Unisex may reign in the fields of clothing and hair styles and, we like to think, in job opportunities, but when will the already blurred lines between our present conjugal chores be erased?

Yes, both sexes like what they can do best, which may or may not include "women's work" as defined by men and "men's work" as defined by women. If unisex lives up to its promise, both sexes can be fulfilled.

And the millenium is here!

How much vacation time should a person get in a year?

Tom Hunter

"Three weeks a year. One or two weeks is not enough. People need time to relax."

Nancy Boyle

"They should have two weeks, after one year of employment. You don't get enough rest in one week."

Arca Amico

"They should get quite a bit of vacation. There is a lot of tension and stress in the body. You need a period of rest and relaxation."

Ann Mahon

"Two to three weeks seems fair. People need time off."

Rally gives Home Team win

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Home Team Realty rallied from a four-run deficit in the bottom of the eighth inning to edge Winchester Wine & Spirits, 8-7, in Winchester Men's Softball A League playoff final action Sunday night at Ginn Field.

The late heroics helped Home Team tie the best-of-five series at one game apeice. Wine & Spirits controlled most of the game but they squandered a pair of potential big innings early on and it came back to haunt them in the end.

This was evident in the second inning when Wine & Spirits had men on first and second with nobody out. Home Team third baseman Bob Alberigi fielded a hot grounder down the third base line, stepped on the bag, then winged it around the horn, just missing a triple play by a half step. The next two batters got hits including Jeff Lawson's run-scoring single but a chance to break the game open went by the boards.

Wine & Spirits picked up another run in the third inning when Mike Walsh's infield single brought in Mark Lawson to make the score, 2-0. Home Team threatened to tie the game in the fourth but Bill Tocci made a sparkling catch to strand two runners and preserve the tie.

Wine & Spirits had another chance to take command in the sixth but after Ron Askin singled in Tocci, the double play spoiled the rally again and Wine & Spirits settled for a 3-0 lead.

After showing no offense at all for most of the game, Home Team finally came alive in the bottom of the sixth. With Gary Floyd on first base, Earl Johnson smashed a home run to right-center field and suddenly it was 3-2 with nobody out. Rudy Fiore singled and advanced to third after a pair of outs before an error allowed him to score the tying run.

The momentum was now in Home Team's favor and they went for the victory in the bottom of the seventh. With the winning run at third base, a fly ball was hit to left. Steve Doucette and Tommy Datillo collided but hung on to the ball and the game went into extra innings.

Wine & Spirits appeared to have gained control of the game in the eighth when they pushed across four runs. John Gannon got things rolling with a single to drive in Tocci. But the news was not good on Tocci who split open his hand sliding into third base and will likely be lost for the rest of the series. Jeff Lawson kept the rally going with a single to drive in brother Doug Lawson and when Bo Peters came through with a clutch two run single, it appeared Wine & Spirits had the game in hand.

But whether Wine & Spirits let up too soon or were distracted by their teammate's injury, Home Team seemingly scored at will in the bottom of the inning. After loading the bases with nobody out, Kevin Scully delivered two runs with a single and it was 7-5. J.C. Forbes kept things rolling with yet another single to drive in Fiore and Nick Mastromarino tied the game with an infield single which scored Scully. Jerry Scully capped the rally by driving in Forbes with the winning run.

Home Team Realty wins 8-3

By MARK NADEAU
Special to the Star

Home Team Realty grabbed a 4-0 lead in the top of the first inning and never looked back as they posted an 8-3 victory over Winchester Wine & Spirits in game three of their best of five game series in Winchester Men's Softball A League playoff final action at Ginn Field.

J.C. Forbes was the offensive hero for Home Team as he drove in four runs, with a triple and a double. Wine & Spirits was without one of its offensive catalysts in Bill Tocci who sliced open his hand in the previous game. Tocci was sorely missed in the lineup as Wine & Spirits was unable to sustain any kind of attack after the first inning.

Another problem for Wine & Spirits was their inability to get the benefit of the doubt on close calls. Three times there were close plays that came down to the judgment of the umpire and all three went against Wine & Spirits.

Perhaps the most crucial call came in the first inning with Home Team at the plate. With two outs, [illegible] a line shot down the left field line. Tommy Datillo nearly made a great catch as he slid into the fence but the ball managed to elude his grasp. The problem here was Datillo and the rest of the Wine & Spirit team thought the ball was foul when in fact it had been ruled fair. The confusion allowed both Ed Osterberg and Kevin Scully to score and Forbes wound up on third with a triple.

Kurt Ellis came up next and hit an infield single to knock in Forbes and he moved to second on an error. Nick Mastromarino followed with another single to drive in Ellis and Home Team had a 4-0 cushion.

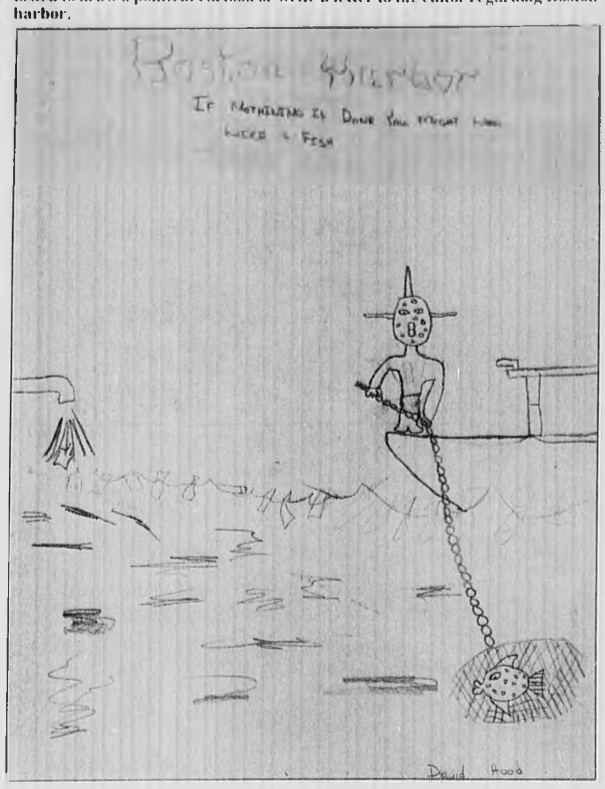
Wine & Spirits came right back in the bottom of the first thanks to some shoddy fielding. After Mark Lawson led off with a single, Datillo hit a hard grounder to second that was too hot to handle but the second baseman tried to make the play anyway setting off a chain of three errors which led to Lawson scoring and Datillo reaching third base. Jeff Lawson then hit a sacrifice fly and Wine & Spirits was back in business. Home Team avoided any further damage when Mastromarino came up with an outstanding diving stab and throw out which left two men stranded.

Home Team began to pull away in the third inning with three more runs. Forbes again came through with the big blow as he poked a one out bases-loaded pitch over the wall in right field for a ground-rule double scoring Osterberg and Rudy Fiore. Ellis delivered Scully with a sacrifice fly and the lead was now, 7-2.

Home Team picked up their final run in the fourth when Gary Floyd knocked in pinchrunner Kevin Floyd with a base hit to make it, 8-2. The Wine & Spirits offense went AWOL after their first inning outburst and they never really threatened to score until the seventh inning. But by then it was a case of too little, too late as John Gannon drove in Mike Walsh with the final run of the contest. Wine & Spirits will need to revive their offense if they plan on coming back from their 2-1 series deficit.

SCHOOL NEWS

The following cartoons and essays were written by fifth and sixth grade students at the Ambrose School during a lesson on pollution. The students were asked to draw a political cartoon or write a letter to the editor regarding Boston harbor.



Drawing by David Hood, Grade 6

Jenifer Dooley, Grade 6

Fifty square miles of polluted bays and 180 miles of trash covered shores surround one of the largest and most polluted seaports in the country - the Boston harbor.

This harbor must be purified. Beach closings due to this dilemma have resulted in no place for summer recreation.

Only an estimated 20 percent of the harbor's organisms will survive. Birds and fish become attracted to the sewage outfalls from Deer Island. This could spread disease to neighboring towns.

Could it have helped in causing cancer? AIDS? What will the future behold for Bostonians?

Carrie Marotta, Grade 5

Boston harbor should be cleaned up because of reduced animal life. By the turn of the century, 15 to 20 percent of all the organic matter could be extinct. Clams, oysters, winter flounder, lobster and flatfish could all disappear.

The poisoning of these and other fish that we eat could lead to our sickness.

Soon there could be nothing living in the harbor to get sick from. There are already one million pounds of flounder taken from the harbor each year. Out of the 4,700 shellfish flats, all of them are now closed, 1,700 conditionally.

I think the animal life in Boston harbor is important, not only to fishermen, but to us so we can view it and enjoy it right next door.

Mark Richter, Grade 5

Boston harbor is one of the most polluted harbors in the country. The harbor is nearly 50 square miles of bays and tidal estuaries enclosed by 180 miles of shoreline.

New England's largest seaport, Boston harbor is a center of trade, transportation, and recreation.

Boston harbor, with its cleanup, has the potential for regaining its importance as a fishery. Over 100,000 tons of solid wastes are deposited into the harbor daily.

I think that public awareness of the causes of the pollution will hasten the cleanup of the harbor.

David Fiorentino, Grade 5

Boston harbor has been a memorable part of my growing. Across from the harbor in an inlet called Pleasure Bay my grandparents live in a huge green house. They tell me that many years ago the sand on their beach was clean and powdery. The water crystal clear.

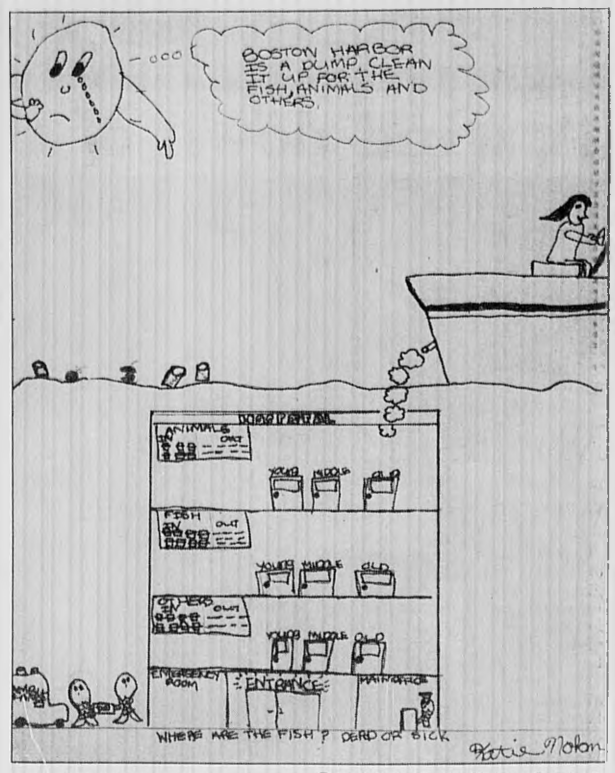
Today when I walk there it is very different. Debris and chemicals contaminate sand and water. No one can swim or enjoy the beach as people did many years ago. I wish I could swim there. It would make my grandparents happy, too. Boston should clean up its harbor!

Elizabeth Hare, Grade 6

People can see Boston harbor while walking or driving along its banks, sailing through its muddied water, or flying overhead. People still picnic along its shore.

However, today instead of a bright blue clean harbor, over 500 million gallons of sewage empty into the harbor daily. About 6000 factories dump sewage into the harbor. By the turn of the century all the fish in the harbor will be extinct.

Boston harbor is the most polluted harbor in America. This is a shame. Clean up the harbor. It may be our last major water resource. Let's save it.



Drawing by Katie Nolan, Grade 5

Jessica Livada, Grade 5

Scientists say that 15 to 20 percent of the plants and animals in the Boston harbor will be extinct by the turn of the century. They also say that if people were aware of the danger in the harbor, they might realize how serious it really is.

I feel bad for the animals, especially fish because they'll either die from the bad water or fishermen will catch them. That's how they'll become extinct.

We should clean up the Boston harbor so that the creatures who live there won't die. So let's do something now!

MAXIMIZE YOUR STORAGE SPACE

No matter how much storage space a house has, it's never enough. So if your home is on the market, it's important for you to maximize whatever storage you have.

Many of our sellers become quite offended when they see prospective buyers open up the closets. They're not snooping, however, but just want to see how large each one is. Even the biggest closets may fail to impress buyers if they are crammed with mounds of smelly laundry and everything you've been meaning to give to the Salvation Army Thrift Shop for the past decade. Because closets are so important, it's a good idea to go through each one to make it as neat and uncluttered as possible. Then go through your basement and attic to get rid of whatever you don't need. Moving is a great excuse for a yard sale or a trip to your favorite charity with a tax-deductable contribution. Maximizing your storage space is one more way to make your home much more competitive and help it sell quickly.

If you are considering a move, contact the professionals at The Bixby & Porter Company Realtors. Call us at 729-7000 or stop by our offices at 33 Thompson Street in Winchester.

WEDDINGS

Michelle and Richard Rosmarin

Michelle Caggiano weds Richard Rosmarin

Michelle Anne Caggiano, daughter of Mr. and mrs. Gabriel Robert Caggiano of Winchester, and Richard Rosmarin, son of Daniel and May Rosmarin of Lexington, were married at the First Parish Church in Lexington last September.

The Rev. John Bailey of Boston and Rabbi Alfred Ginsberg of Brookline performed the double-ring ceremony. A reception at the Wellesley Country Club followed the ceremony.

The maid of honor was Gabrielle Caggiano of the Canary Islands, Spain, the bride's sister. Lauren Storella, cousin of the bride, was the flower girl.

The best man was Kenneth Desloover of Midland, Mich. Ushers were Stuart Myron of Calgary, Alberta, Canada, Mike Tischer of White Plains, N.Y., David Leenhouts of Windsor Locks, Conn., Cpt. Marshall Caggiano, USAF, of Spangdalen, West Germany, and Gabriel Caggiano Jr. of Fort Meyers, Fla.

The bride attended Winchester High School and Bentley College. She is an account executive with NYNEX in Boston.

The groom attended Lexington High School and graduated from the University of Michigan with a bachelor of science degree in computer engineering. He is Manager of Systems and Research of ATEX in Bedford.

The couple honeymooned in Germany, Switzerland, and Austria.

Susan Berardi weds Charles McCarthy

Susan Marie Berardi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matteo P. Berardi of Lynnfield, and Charles Warren McCarthy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McCarthy of Winchester, were married June 20 at Our Lady of Assumption Church in Lynnfield.

Father Daniel Graham, a cousin of the groom, officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The matron of honor was Lori Wetherbee of Randolph, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Sandra Moran of Lynnfield and Catherine McCarthy of Winchester, the groom's sister.

The best man was James McCarthy of Tewskbury, the groom's brother. Ushers were Richard Wetherbee of Randolph, and Sean McKenna of Concord.

A reception was held at the Ocean View Country Club in Nahant.

HEALTH

Cancer support group starts

The problems of coping with cancer are many and complex. How do you deal with treatment, discipline, nutrition, family, finances, employers, and insurance? These and other issues are faced by cancer patients and their families on a day-to-day basis and, as a community service, will be addressed by Winchester Hospital's cancer support group.

Beginning Wednesday, Sept. 16, at 7:30 p.m., the Social Services Department will hold the first in a series of eight free meetings. The cancer support group will meet the first and third Wednesday of each month from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the Social Service Department office.

For more information and registration, contact the Social Services Department, Winchester Hospital, 729-9000, ext. 3140.

Richard Weiner

Weiner joins surgery practice

Doctors Hugh F. McCarthy, Richard A. Kingsbury, and Ronald L. Nath announce that Dr. Richard E. Weiner has joined their practice of surgery, Middlesex Surgical Associates, at 955 Main St.

Weiner earned his undergraduate degree at U.C.L.A. After his graduation from the University of California Medical School, he completed internship and residency requirements at the Tufts-New England Medical Center. During the 1986-87 academic year he was awarded a fellowship in vascular surgery at Lahey Clinic. He is eligible for certification by the American Board of Surgery.

The associates are all members of the Winchester Hospital Medical Staff.

Hospital joins health care network

Winchester Hospital has signed a contract with Private Healthcare Systems, Ltd (PHCS), a Lexington-based developer of national managed care networks, to become a part of the preferred provider organization (PPO) network.

Other members of the system are Beth Israel, Mass. General, New England Medical Center, St. Elizabeth's, Emerson Hospital in Concord, and Newton-Wellesley Hospital in Newton.

PHCS was founded two years to create care networks for commercial health insurance carriers.

Approximately 60,000 individuals are covered by the insurance carriers in PHCS.

The preferred provider organization features controlled health care costs for all necessary treatment.

New parents get picnic to go

In honor of a child's birth at Winchester Hospital, picnic dinners are being offered to new parents for their first evening home. The dinners, unique to Winchester Hospital, include a half-carafe of wine, appetizer, entree, two vegetables and dessert. During the renovation of the maternity unit, the dinners will be offered free-of-charge.

For further information, call Maria Schiff, Women's Health Services Manager, 729-9000, Ext. 3039.

Hospital opens speakers' bureau

Stroke, seizure, headaches; arterial disease; cancer prevention and screenings; the medical consequences of a nuclear war; corrective surgery; adolescent and child mental health: these are just a few of the topics available to community groups who call upon the Winchester Hospital Speakers' Bureau which will make its debut this fall.

Through the new service, representatives of business and industry, clubs, organizations, schools and congregations can call on the hospital for program speakers for upcoming meetings. Speakers are members of the medical and management staff who will speak without a fee.

In general, requests should be made as far in advance as possible and at least a month prior to the meeting date. To arrange for a speaker, program chairmen and personnel directors are invited to call the hospital's Community Relations Department at 729-9000, Ext. 3041.

PEOPLE

Clamming down

Ed and Carol Johnson of Winchester, left, take a moment to pose with WHDH-AM radio personalities Dave Supple, Larry Glick and Tom Doyle on the third annual WHDH/Jimbo's Clambake Cruise. Carol Johnson phoned in to win a lobster clambake dinner followed by a star-light cruise around Boston harbor. More than 50 people attended the event.

McCrensky accepted in builders' group

Harry D. McCrensky, president of Burlington based Letter-men Inc., has been accepted for membership in the Builders Association of Greater Boston (BAGB).

By joining BAGB, Letter-Men Inc., also joins the Home Builders Association of Massachusetts (HBAM) and the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB).

McCrensky, a Winchester resident who offers financial consulting services for residential and commercial mortgages and private loans, is joining the more than 750 builder and associate (those who service and supply builders) members of BAGB, a non profit trade association serving 120 cities and towns in eastern Massachusetts.

The Builders Association of Greater Boston promotes professionalism and quality development in all aspects of the building industry through seminars, workshops, publications, and meetings. The Builders Association's full time staff is headquartered in Braintree.

Cunningham promoted at Apollo

Apollo Computer, Inc. of Chelmsford has appointed William J. Cunningham of Winchester as vice president and general manager, Manufacturing, according to Roland D. Pampel, Apollo's president and chief operating officer.

Cunningham joins Apollo from Honeywell Bull, Billerica, Massachusetts, where he was serving as vice president, U.S. Manufacturing, Product Operations. In his new position, Cunningham will report to Mr. Pampel, and will have responsibility for Apollo's current and anticipated manufacturing facilities worldwide. In addition, he will be responsible for all planning functions associated with manufacturing, purchasing and distribution, material management and manufacturing quality programs.

Cunningham joined the Honeywell organization in 1964. Six years later he was promoted to plant materials manager for Honeywell's operations manager in Lawrence, Framingham, and Lowell. He was subsequently promoted to materials manager for Honeywell Information Systems and program office director before he was named director of Lawrence (Massachusetts) operations.

In January, 1985, he was named vice president, Manufacturing, Boston operations, and he assumed responsibility for all manufacturing activities for the company's small and medium systems. When Honeywell, Groupe Bull, and NEC announced the partnership forming Honeywell Bull Inc. in 1987, Cunningham was named to the post he held at the time of his resignation.

William Cunningham

Cunningham graduated from Harvard University in 1960 with a bachelor of arts degree in history and political science. He received his MBA from Boston College in 1967.

A native of Arlington, he is married to the former Adele Robinson Pardee of Coral Gables, Florida. The couple resides in Winchester with their two children.

Romero in concert at Berklee

Summer Program student Andreas R. Romero, son of Laurence Romero Jr. of Winchester, was a featured guitarist in "Five Week Performance," a concert of jazz Aug. 13, in the Berklee Recital Hall in Boston.

The ensemble, comprising the finest Berklee Summer student instrumentalists, was showcased in a program spotlighting the compositions of Charlie Parker, Miles Davis and others.

Romero is attending the five-week Summer Performance Program at Berklee.

Chalas and Poulos elected to council

Two Winchesterites have received a vote of confidence from their peers.

Steve Poulos, president of Geotechnical Engineers, Inc., and John Chalas, senior vice president/privatization, Metcalf & Eddy, Inc., have both been elected directors of the American Consulting Engineers Council of New England (ACEC/NE).

The American Consulting Engineers Council of New England is the largest association in the New England region representing the business and professional interests in independent, private practice engineering firms.

Carol Davidson

Davidson interns at US attorney's

Christine Davidson of Thornberry Road, who has just completed her first year at New York University School of Law, spent the summer as an intern in the US Attorney's Office, Southern District, in New York City. She was attached to the litigation staff there.

A graduate of Winchester High School and Dartmouth College, and Cromwell in New York City for a year before attending law school. She is a staff member of the Journal of International Law and Politics at New York University.

SENIOR NEWS

Keep Well Clinic provides valuable health care to seniors

By LEONOR RICH
Special to the Star

One of the most important services offered at the Jenks Senior Center is the Keep Well Clinic that meets twice monthly. It is conducted by the Board of Health, the Winchester Council on Aging, and the Winchester Seniors Association Health Committee.

The clinic is held on the first and third Thursday mornings each month to keep tabs on the general health of the seniors who register. It is not a substitute for the care of a physician but often indicates when such consultation is needed.

Services were offered for the first time in the Board of Health Clinic Room in the Town Hall on April 10, 1975. Hilda Hope, R.N., realized the value of providing free consultation services concerning weight control, blood pressure monitoring, nutritional counseling, and general health advice. Pauline McGuigan, R.N., also played a significant role in organizing a staff of volunteer nurses to serve the clinic.

Hope was a member of the Council on Aging in 1975 as was McGuigan. Hope became the first coordinator of the program, followed by McGuigan. The position is now held by Ann Ciampa, R.N. Other coordinators have been Barbara Hoglund, Arlene McGrale and all have provided a very popular service with very positive results.

Many hours are devoted to paper work and record keeping prior to each clinic. The average attendance is about 45 seniors per session with a yearly count of over 1000 requests for assistance from the volunteer professionals at the clinic. During the 12 years of operation, approximately 12,000 appointments have been made with many people returning for regular check-ups at each session of the clinic.

The following registered nurses are commended for faithful and dedicated service: Irma Adams, Virginia Bird, Ellen Horn, Mary Lavin, Pauline McGuigan, Alice O'Hara, Hilda Zerwekh, Barbara Leaf, and Lillian Engestrum. Also commended for services efficiently handled are Agnes Mahoney and Mary Copley as receptionists, and several aides including Frances Capoldulopo, Rita Grant, and Audrey Smith, the latter's short illness and untimely death has left a memory of her warmth of personality and perpetual cheerfulness.

Available at the second clinic of each month are Health Benefits Counselors to assist seniors with insurance questions. A Podiatrist is available for advice at regular intervals.

Additional nurses and aides are needed to help to take care of the needs of the growing elderly population. People who are willing to serve either as nurses or aides for the ensuing season are requested to call the Jenks Senior Center, 721-7136 and leave a name and telephone number.

The Keep Well Clinic is a preventive service. Through its vigilance, serious health problems have been detected with recommendations to see the personal physician for the treatment of such serious physical disorders as hypertension, diabetes, phlebitis, gangrene, circulatory problems, overweight, respiratory difficulties, skin disorders, sight problems, hearing loss, arthritis, heart symptoms, kidney ailments, and other physical problems.

The clinic has had far-reaching effects on hundreds of seniors, enabling them to remain active and productive in the mainstream of life. The Council on Aging and the Winchester Seniors Association are proud of the success of this important service to seniors.

"We do all the basics drycleaners do, we just do them better."

For more than 38 years Faulkner's Cleansing has served the cleaning needs of Winchester residents and has built up a reputation for quality workmanship that has made them a trusted name in drycleaning and has made many Winchester residents lifelong customers.

Faulkner's not only drycleans all the usual items including pants suits, dresses, and coats, and cleans and presses shirts, but they also go one step further — Faulkner's inspects every article of clothing and replaces buttons or sews seams at no charge.

"We do all the basics that other drycleaners do, we just do them better," explains owner/proprietor Francis Hardy.

As far as service is concerned Faulkner's Cleansing offers something we tend to associate with past decades — door to door service. At no extra charge Faulkner's will pick up and deliver your drycleaning to your house.

Every Tuesday and Thursday their truck goes through Winchester for convenient door to door service. There is no extra charge for this convenience and customers can arrange for free pick-up and delivery by calling Faulkner's Cleansing at 665-6300.

In addition to cleaning all the usual items, Faulkner's also cleans various household items including slipcovers, draperies, and bedspreads. They are also experts at cleaning both suede and leather garments.

And, if you don't have the space around your home or apartment to store seasonal garb, Faulkner's offers storage for anything from furs to wools. Box storage is available in which you receive a large box to store your clothes which are cleaned and pressed just prior to pickup, and ready to wear when you retrieve them by calling Faulkner's Cleansing several days in advance.

For quality workmanship and the customer satisfaction which has been the trademark of Faulkner's for more than 38 years, or for convenient door to door service at no extra charge, come into Faulkner's at 437 Franklin st. Melrose, or just pick up the phone and call them at 665-6300.

Faulkner's Cleansing is open Monday through Friday, 7-5, Saturdays, 8-5.

Edgell reelected to Afghan Hound club cabinet

The Colonial Afghan Hound Club held its annual meeting and election of club officers recently. Mrs. Stephen M. Edgell of Sheffield West, was re-elected librarian of the club, a post she has held for many years.

At the C.A.H.C. annual Specialty Show, the Edgells again gave a trophy for Best of Breed in memory of Stephen M. Edgell. The sterling silver tray must be won three times by the same owner, but not necessarily with the same dog. A silver-plated Paul Revere bowl is given by the Edgells to commemorate the win.

Studio Guild encourages new memberships

The Studio Guild of Winchester is actively seeking new members. The Studio Guild offers professional instruction in drawing and painting with annual exhibitions of member's work.

The organization is composed of a group of people with one thing in common, an interest in art. Many members are beginners, while others have worked for many years in the arts. Subject matter and individual interests vary greatly, but everyone is encouraged to pursue his or her own particular interest in medium and subject matter.

Classes are held on Tuesdays from 7 to 9:30 p.m. and Thursdays from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon in the Church of the Epiphany. Classes begin Sept. 29 and continue through May, 1988.

SPORTS

Photographer picks site for museum

By SUE SHOR
Star Assistant Editor

Arthur Griffin's first choice as a location for his museum is the Wadleigh School site, the land bordered by Mt Vernon, Myrtle and Washington Streets, Board of Selectmen Chairman Judith Muggia told the board Monday.

Griffin, a photographer who has lived in Winchester for the past 50 years, proposed the project to the Selectmen in May. He will use his own money to build the museum, donate his photographs, and endow the project. He also said he will set up a scholarship program for New England artists of all media to be funded out of his estate.

Griffin's other choices for the museum are the land across the street from the post office, the Judkins green area north and the west side of the Aberjona River on Skillings Road, and the Aberjona River site between the Knights of Columbus building and the Jenks Senior Center.

Muggia said she went with Griffin and his architect to the sites and gave them all the information she could. Griffin chose the Wadleigh site because it was the most accessible and had the fewest obstacles to its use, according to Muggia.

Muggia said the town is concerned about the funding of the project. She said the town did not want to end up paying if the endowment did not sufficiently cover the costs of the museum.

The Board scheduled an executive session with Griffin to discuss financial plans, but Griffin's representatives had not completed their financial reports by the time of the meeting

The Wadleigh site is currently zoned as park land. Town Cousel Douglas Randall said there is precedent for leasing part of a public park for other uses, but that the particulars would have to be worked out The land would not be sold to the museum and the terms of a lease would have to be worked out.

The Conservation Commission is questioning what the trade-off to leasing the park would be, Muggia said.

All concerned parties including the Conservation Commission, the Planning Board, the Engineering Department, Muggia, Randall, met with Griffin's attorney, Thomas McCord. McCord requested the meeting to hear questions and get advice from the town, Muggia said.

All the boards have agreed to cooperate, but Muggia stresses that the final decision will be made by Town Meeting. Griffin, Muggia said, is trying to have his presentation ready to present to Fall Town Meeting.

Youths face charges following brawl

Police arrived at the parking lot of the Bowladrome the night of August 21 to find the aftermath of an eight-person brawl.

A group of five youths on foot and four in a car encountered each other on Swanton Street. One of the passengers in the car said the five on foot began to harass them. The driver continued on Swanton Street and then turned around to follow the four into the parking lot, according to police.

The teen said an unidentified black man stepped out in front of the car the car could not get by, but the driver swerved around the man and continued into the parking lot, according to police.

A member of the group on foot said the car pulled into the lot and the driver got out of the car with a tire iron and said he wanted to fight and would "take them all on at once," according to police.

After more yelling, he then returned to the car and came back with a pair of vice grips out of the car. He began to swing the tire iron at one of the teens, who ended up with a bleeding head. All involved said the driver swung the tire iron, but no one saw it hit the injured youth. One of the passengers said that when she tried to separate the driver and the other teen, she pulled him back and he hit his head on a sign post, causing the injury, police reports said.

One of the youths said his friend, who also had a head injury, had the driver in a headlock. The driver was repeatedly hitting the teen in the head with the pair of vice grips. This continued until police arrived, the youth said, according to police reports.

A search of the area turned up a pair of vice grips surrounded by what police believed was blood in the parking lot, and a tire iron in the gutter next to the curb on White Street. A heavy bicycle chain and lock were also found, according to police.

Three teens were taken to the Winchester Hospital emergency room, two with head injuries and one with a bloody nose, where they were treated and released, police said.

The eight youths involved will be summoned to court on charges of disturbing the peace and being a disorderly person, according to police.

The driver, 17, was arrested on charges of assault and battery with a deadly weapon, police said.

ing about is decorum. It's something you either have or you don't. You can have all the rules you want."

Muggia, who had been silent on the issue until this point, said the incident had been on her mind all week. "Since I've been on the Board, I've tried to do it in private...last week I didn't," Muggia said. "This Board does to much good work in combos of two or three or the whole board to scrap it."

Her solution to the problem is twofold and follows Schmitt's lead, work on thrashing problems out privately, or come to the board with a docket item to eliminate the surprise attacks.

Muggia said she was not concerned with the facts of the sandblasting argument, but with the way the incident was handled. "I was not there," she said. "I'm not in a position to argue with you (Sopper) in any way over what the facts are. As far as facts, you were there, I was not. I have no trouble accepting what you told me as the truth."

There are conflicting reports about the events surrounding the argument. At the meeting Sopper said Lombardi saw the workers were not sandblasting at the Locateli building but "wetblasting," a chemical process that could pollute the Aberjona River. Lombardi then called Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer, who was not available, according to Sopper.

Lombardi then tried to reach Conservation Commission Administrator Elaine Vreeland. He did not reach her either, but left a message. Sopper and Lombardi then went for a cup of coffee, according to Sopper.

While the two were out, Vreeland received the message and went to the site to find the workers were violating the zoning by-laws. When Vreeland arrived, a police officer was already at the site.

According to both Sopper and Vreeland, Vreeland asked the men to stop working and then asked the police officer to tell the workers to shut down.

Sopper said the confusion arose because the officer told the men that Lombardi ordered the work stopped. Ianino became very agigated, Sopper said, but denies that he or Lombardi argued with Ianino.

"We did not argue with the gentleman," Sopper said. "Selectman Lombardi did exactly what he was supposed to do. He notified the proper authorities."

Muggia said that witnesses told her Lombardi and Sopper had acted in "a heavy-handed manner" and that Ianino had felt threatened.

Sopper said Lombardi was the one who felt threatened and that he called a police officer to the scene for that reason.

Lombardi did not make any comment on the issue.

Solution pending to problems at high school parking lot prevent people from driving over curbs to get around boulders.

The School Committee did not know the DPW had time to do the work in the coming weeks and thought they had more time to discuss and study the solution, but Jervey said, "If the safety officer (Kevin Mawn) is supportive of the cut and we are all in agreement that it is a piece of a longer term problem, that addresses the concerns we have."

Maurer said DPW Director Dominic Serratore originally thought the department could not do the work until the end of September, but its schedule opened up to allow the work to get done sooner. Cutting the curb, grading, putting a border around the courts and painting parking spaces will take about one week, Maurer said.

Selectman Thomas Schmitt suggested removing the boulders by the beginning of school to satisfy School Committee requirements and having the town assure Spruce Street residents that there would be a police cruiser at the exit to control traffic while the work is in progress.

What To Do

The purple hills:

There is something about the beauty of the Berkshire hills which draws artists of every description and always has," notes Margaret Cresson in her contribution to a collection of writings on the Berkshires, published in 1948.

"There is a tenderness in the landscape here, a comforting quality that lays the hand of benediction on the heads of those who visit it. Most of the hills are rounded, cushioned with only an occasional rocky crag rearing its head, like Monument Mountain, to give variety.

"There are quantities of little lakes to reflect the blue of the sky, lakes that are conducive to swimming, to sailing, or just to being decorative. There are wild fields, rich and productive pasture land, the pleasant grazing ground for cattle.

"There are fences and stone walls, well-kept farmhouses, weather-beaten barns, and there is always the river, the Housatonic River, broad in places, narrow in others, turning, curving, meandering, winding back upon itself in curves, its boarders thickly forested with willows and white birches bending over their reflections in the water."

These tender, rustic aspects of the Berkshires continue to attract people of the arts to the area from places like New York and Boston.

Nicknamed the purple hills because of their deep violet shades, the softly rolling hills and the valleys between have nurtured and encouraged the development of music, literature and art like no other single geographical area in this country has done.

Historically people of great means and men and women of letters were drawn to these low but majestic hills and valleys. The climate in the summer and autumn is delightful with warm days and peaceful cool nights, even in the hottest weather.

The air is pure and invigorating.

There are no less than 70 lakes in Berkshire County. Mt. Greylock is the outstanding peak in the landscape. It rises in the northwestern corner of Massachusetts and is the highest mountain in the state.

The Berkshire hill towns are dotted with scattered farmhouses, white churches, neat graveyards. It is the land of great variety: church suppers, square dances and socials; Tanglewood, the Williamstown Theatre Festival, Jacob's Pillow.

The Mohawk Trail (Route 2) from ancient times has provided the pathway across the hills. It was used by fur traders and Indian warriors; it is now traveled by those seeking the serenity and the beauty of the Berkshires. The trek on foot took from two to five days; by car, it is 63 miles of mountain roadway that offers some of the most spectacular scenery in New England.

Though beautiful throughout the year, the fall season is especially breathtaking because of the fall foliage.

There are acres of state forests with streams and ponds well stocked for fishing, plentiful game in season, picnic spots, foot trails and bridle paths, caves, gorges and lookouts, ski trails and open slopes.

For detailed information on the State Parks, write to Region 5 Headquarters, P.O. Box 1433, Pittsfield, MA 01202. Or call 413-442-8992.

You can travel approximately 700 acres of nature walks and trails at the Pleasant Valley Sanctuary in Lenox. There are numerous bird species there and marshes, deep woods, beautiful ponds and streams are everywhere. In September the goldenrod grows in abundance, along with magenta asters and bright orange devil's paintbrush.

The Sanctuary is located at 472 West Mountain Road, Lenox. Call 413-637-0320.

a place for canoes, music or solitude

Bartholomews's Cobble in Sheffield is a jewel of a wild garden - an outcropping of rock jutting into the alluvial meadows of the Housatonic Valley.

The Cobble consists of 300 acres of botanical paradise. It is a good place to picnic and particularly beautiful on a late summer or early fall evening. The view from the Cobble of the Housatonic Valley and the Taconic Range is breathtaking.

One is apt to see white egrets there. Muskrats slink around foraging for food and not far away the sound of cow bells might be detected.

Call 413-229-8600 for information.

John Ashley's house, the oldest in Berkshire Country is near by. For a look at what was, in its time, a richly elegant home, stop in to see the house. Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. through Oct. 24.

The Konkapot Kitchens Catered Canoe Trips take a 10 mile trip down the scenic Housatonic River with an elegantly catered lunch at riverside and a concert provided by harpsichord, oboe and flute!

All this followed by a box supper and a ticket to Tanglewood for the Boston Symphony's evening concert. Call 413-6614.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Seiji Ozawa performs through Aug. 30 at Tanglewood. For information, call 413-637-1940.

Toward the end of August the foliage show begins. The swamp maples suddenly change to fire color over night. And the cooler nights and crisp mornings cause the meadows to turn brown and the sumac a brilliant red.

One way to enjoy the foliage is to take a ride on the 1920 vintage railroad coach through the Housatonic River Valley. Round trips can be made from Lee, Stockbridge, Housatonic, and Great Barrington Railroad Stations. Open ticket allows departure and later reboarding.

The Museum at Lee is packed with railroad memorabilia. The train leaves Lee at 10:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. saturdays, Sundays and holidays (rain or shine) from Memorial Day through Oc. Call 413-243-2872.

At Jacob's Pillow, David Parsons and the Jazz Project will present the last concert of the season with vigorous, frisky and innovative jazz, both new and old during the week Aug. 25-29.

Jacob's Pillow is located in Becket, eight miles east on Rt. 2 from the Lee Interchange of the Mass. Turnpike. Call 413-243-0745.

A Midsummer Night's Dream, performed by Shakespeare & Company at The Mount in Lenox has been extended due to popular demand. Performances will continue through September 12.

The Mount, once the home of Edith Wharton, is a restored Italian-style mansion, complete with performing spaces, vegetable garden, greenhouse and stables.

Shakespeare and Co. has been performing there since 1978, when they opened their season with A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Producer Kenneth Field will bring the new national touring musical Satchmo: America's Musical Legend, celebrating the life and spirit of Louis Satchmo Armstrong, to the Colonial Theatre for a four-week engagement Sept. 11 through Oct. 10.

Armstrong has long been considered by musicians and critics alike to be a genius who forever changed the course of modern music. His unmistakable sound and unique style onstage captivated audiences worldwide and inspired fans universally to embrace him as America's Ambassador of Goodwill. Satchmo honors the man who holds a special place in the nations cultural history.

After an unprecedented international search for the musician to play the lead, producer Kenneth Field found Byron Stripling to be just the man he was looking for — a virtuoso trumpet player who closely embodies the talent and charisma of the immortal Louis Armstrong.

I come from a family of musicians," says Stripling, so I grew up listening to all kinds of music. But Louis Armstrong was a passion. I didn't just listen to his music, I felt I had to know everything about the man. I mean, he invented jazz trumpet. It's like I've been preparing for this role all my life."

Before securing the role of Satchmo in the Los Angeles auditions, this 25-year-old native of Atlanta, Georgia performed as lead trumpet and soloist (since 1984) with the Count Basie Orchestra under the direction of bandleader Thad Jones. Stripling has also played lead trumpet with the Big Bands of Clark Terry, Lionel Hampton and Woody Herman.

Stripling has had extensive formal training in music, studying for three and one-half years at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., and at the Interlochen Arts Academy in Interlochen, MI.

In addition, Stripling has received a grant from The Music Assistance Fund of The New York Philhamonic, The Fred Weber Memorial Scholarship for Outstanding Brass Players, and was named Outstanding Jazz Trumpet Soloist at the Eau Clair Jazz Festival in Eau Clair, WI

Satchmo is written and directed by Jerry Bilik, an accomplished musician in his own right and a leading authority on the life of Louis Armstrong. In preparation to write Satchmo: America's Musical Legend, Bilik collected an extensive oral history of the legendary jazzman from Armstrong's musical contemporaries and spoke at length with his widow, Lucille Armstrong, over the last two years of her life.

Bilik's passion for Armstrong and this project will allow audiences nationwide to relive the excitement created by the man and his music.

Maurice Hines, whose film and stage credits include Francis Ford Coppola's The Cotton Club and Broadway's Uptown...It's Hot, for which he received a Tony Award nomination, directs the musical staging and choreography for Satchmo.

The 40-member cast includes James Rowan as Joe King Oliver, Ebony JoAnn as Lucille Armstrong, Matilda Haywood as Lil Harden, Elliot Goldway as Joe Glaser and Doug Barden playing multiple roles. Musicians and dancers are also actors on stage, representing real people in Armstrong's life.

Sets for Satchmo are designed by Ed Dejoie Burbridge with costumes by Judy Dearing, lighting by Tom Skelton and sound by Mike Cusick.

Performances begin at 8 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and at 3 p.m. on Sunday with the exception of Tuesday, Sept. 15, when the show begins at 7 p.m. Ticket prices are $35, $30, $25 and $20. Wednesday and Saturday matinee performances begin at 2 p.m.; tickets are $30, $25, $20 and $15. The Friday, Sept. 11, preview show will offer a special ticket price of $20. Senior citizens and children under 16 receive $5 off tickets at selected performances.

Tickets are on sale at the Colonial Theatre Box Office: 426-9366 and are available by calling Ticketron: 1-800-382-8080; or in Boston: 720-3400. For group information, call 426-6444.

Louis Satchmo Armstrong:

Critics and the public often disagree when an artist's greatness comes into question, but whenever the name Louis Armstrong is mentioned, all questions are put aside. Putting it simply, he is the greatest jazz musician who ever lived, bar none.

James Lincoln Collier, renowned jazz critic and author of The Making of Jazz, regarded as the definitive work in the field, analyzes musical genius in terms of four qualities: technical skill; an ability to swing; imagination; and the most elusive of the four which he calls presence.

By these standards, he pronounced Armstrong a musician who had no technical weaknesses, a trumpeter who had the ability to outswing a whole jazz band firing away at a classic tune at white heat.

His imagination never had an equal in jazz and probably not in any musical form since the great European composers of the nineteenth century. And his unique presence gave listeners the feeling that they were listening to, or even talking with, a human being who was saying deeply felt things about himself, his life, and the lives all human beings are forced to live.

And what a life Louis Satchmo Armstrong lived! The genius and unique qualities which made his music so endearing to millions worldwide were only part of his irresistible attraction. Behind the revolutionary sounds was a man who had, in spite of all odds, transcended the traditional role of performer and become a true American legend.

Louis Armstrong was a man of the people, a beloved [illegible] ambassador of goodwill who could communicate to any person and in any language by letting the horn do the talking.

His intense love of performing for an audience of fans was clearly visible on stage, while his love of music and honest character were audible in the way he spun soulfelt emotions into melodies that were sad and sweet one moment, hot and bubbly the next. One almost had to sit on one's hands to keep from getting up and dancing to his swing on a phonograph record.

His concerts were an absolute explosion of passion as his sound tapped some universal groove in an which opens at the Colonial Theatre on Sept. 11, followed by the return of the blockbuster Cats at the Shubert Theatre on Sept. 16, and, at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts, the Boston Ballet Company's Giselle opens Oct. 1 and the sensational La Cage aux Folles makes a return visit, opening Nov. 3.

In addition, the interior of the Wilbur Theatre is being completely restructured to house a cabaret-style format, with a reduced seating capacity of 499. News of their initial offering, possibly a new musical revue, should be forthcoming shortly.

audience which sent them singin' and swayin' into the aisles. Even toward the end of his life, the very sound of Armstrong, as trombonist Trummy Young remembers, could make a sideman cry."

Louis Daniel Armstrong was born on July 4, 1900 in a crowded section of New Orleans known as Back o'Town. His mother, Mayann, was the granddaughter of slaves, and his father, Willie Armstrong, was a turpentine worker in New Orleans. The family lived together for a time on an alley in the heart of The Battlefield, so called for all the shooting and fighting that went on there.

Armstrong's parents split up when he was five and he went to live with his mother in a place near Liberty and Perdido Streets, a neighborhood filled with cheap prostitutes and toughs of every sort. His musical career began when he was around seven and he and his friends would sing in the neighborhood streets for pennies.

Then on New Year's Eve in 1913, he celebrated by running out into the street and firing a gun he had borrowed from his mother without her knowledge. Arrested and sent to the Waif's Home, he was given a coronet to play in the institution's band and was soon playing with the other boys at picnics and parades.

After being released from the home, he was befriended by Joe King Oliver, a popular New Orleans trumpet player who was Armstrong's mentor and major musical influence. Oliver would later lead his own band in Chicago and send for Armstrong to join him as second coronet.

News of Armstrong's reputation as a musician flashed across America once he left New Orleans to play in such cities as Chicago and New York. Recordings and radio broadcasts introduced a whole new audience to his legendary swing, and the demand for Louis Armstrong in Europe was insatiable.

Critics agreed the reception Armstrong received during his first performances in London in 1932 established him as an international sensation. In fact, it was during this tour that an editor for the London Melody Maker unwittingly gave him the nickname Satchmo by garbling

La Cage Returns to Boston

La Cage Aux Folles will open at the Wang Center for a two week engagement, Tuesday, November 3 through Sunday, November 15. The musical extravaganza triumphantly returns to Boston following its highly successful, acclaimed world premiere engagement here in 1983.

Set in the south of France, the musical comedy chronicles the 20 year relationship of Georges, a night club owner and his star, Albin. In the best Broadway tradition, the musical is filled with a bevy of beauties, a chorus of beautiful girls (or are they an illusion?).

La Cage Aux Folles has been a phenomenal success due to the combined talents of its heralded creative staff. The musical has songs by Jerry Herman, a book by Harvey Fierstein, and was directed by the veteran Arthur Laurents.

The musical is based on the longest running French stage play, La Cage Aux Folles by Jean Poiret and was choreographed by Scott Salmon. Renowned scenic designer David Mitchell has provided the spectacularly romantic St. Tropez settings and the breathtaking costumes are by Theoni V. Aldredge. The lighting is by another Tony Award winner, Jules Fisher.

The performance and price schedule at the Wang Center are as follows: Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m. Saturday matinee at 2 p.m. and Sunday matinee at 3 p.m.; orchestra: $37.50, 32.50; Mezzanine and dress circle: $37.50; Balcony: $32.50, 25.50, 15.50. Wednesday matinee at 2 p.m., Orchestra: $30.50, 25.50; Mezzanine and dress circle: $30.50; Balcony $25.50, 17.50, 10.50.

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Restrictions should lift and communications with those at a distance will open up. Be alert for a career opportunity that may prove beneficial and get advice from a previous teacher. Social life steps up — accept travel invitations.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Ask questions, find answers about legal matters, contracts and joint assests. Tune in on public opinion, travel and communications — follow your hunches. Boost your prestige by getting involved in community or political projects.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Be cautious and play a waiting game about partnership, marriage or cooperative matters. Check the fine print and don't co-sign documents for anyone. Express your ideas — you're very articulate and entertaining now.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — Not the time to force issues at the workplace — be patient and it will all work out. Concentrate on cooperative efforts with your mate or partner. Diplomacy and patience, not impulse, will pay off in legal and financial matters.

LEO: (July 23 to Aug. 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Limiting conditions and obligations should lift and you're free to express yourself creatively. Concentrate on efficient performance — cut out unnecessary expenses. Stimulate public relations and cooperate with mate or partner.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — A family matter can be settled with sympathetic compassion on your part and a celebration ensue. Recognize a tendency to over-idealize the object of your romantic affections. Keep a low profile at work and complete current projects.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Gather information, make inquiry and communicate about a puzzling matter. Re-evaluate your real estate or property assets — they may be worth more than you thought! A generous gift could come from a special loved one.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — Maintain a conservative financial view and don't risk money on a project that appears to be too good to be true. A phone call or short trip could give you the information you need. You could finalize a profitable property deal.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — You are magnetic now — make new contacts, look your best and take a leadership role. Finances should improve through humanitarian interests and not underestimating your abilities. Ask a relative for advice and help.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — Low-profile activities are accented — help others with problems. A romantic adventure could uncover a whole new set of emotions for you. Be alert for money-making opportunities, perhaps through writing or publishing.

AQUARIUS: (Jan 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — The accent is on friends, romance and socializing — you'll be in the right place at the right time. Find time to read, write, study and sharpen your talents. Begin a good nutrition, exercise and diet program to lose or gain weight.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — You're on your way to more recognition and career prestige — good time to mix business with pleasure. Patience, discipline and consideration of others' needs are keys to success. Counsel in private one who seeks your advice.

What's On The Boards

His whole life was that horn

an earlier nickname, Satchelmouth.

From there, Louis Armstrong's popularity increased steadily with continued touring of Europe, Africa and America fronting various bands and making appearances in Hollywood films. But most of all, Armstrong loved to get up on a stage and give his fans around the world their ration of joy and happiness with a taste of his own special music.

Satchmo played a vital role for America as a goodwill ambassador, touring the world on behalf of the State Department. His hot jazz was instrumental in melting the Iron Curtain and promoting healthy East/West relations during the early days of the Cold War.

In the spring of 1971, Armstrong was booked to play the Empire Room of New York's famed Waldorf Astoria Hotel. Two weeks before the date was to start, Armstrong's doctor wanted him to cancel and check into the hospital, but he refused.

"Doc, you don't understand," said Armstrong, who simply couldn't let his fans down. "My whole life, my whole soul, my whole spirit is to blow that horn. I got to do it, Doc, I got to do it."

Immediately after the show closed, Armstrong checked into Beth Israel Hospital. He went home on May 5, feeling better but still weak. But he was not getting better, he was merely staying alive.

On July 6, 1971, two days after his 71st birthday, Louis Armstrong died, and a glorious chapter in musical history closed.

His death was the occasion for a tremendous outpouring of sorrow the world over. Louis Armstrong would be forever remembered not only for contributions that would forever change the course of music history, but as one of the greatest men of the entire 20th century.

Lyric Opera presents arias

7:30 p.m. at the Lenox Hotel in Boston's Back Bay.

The evening is being produced and coordinated by the Guild of the Boston Lyric Opera Company as part of its ongoing activities for the public. According to April Lipman, head of the Guild's membership activities, "Since our theme presents arias based on the writings of Shakespeare as viewed by different composers, the plush atmosphere of the music room at the Lenox is just what we needed as an appropriate period setting."

Lipman continued that "the selections we are presenting include arias by Verdi, Gounod, and Ambroise Thomas, from Falstaff, Romeo and Juliet, and Hamlet, among others. They will be accompanied by John Balme, the artistic director of the Boston Lyric Opera, who is well known to Boston audiences, and they will be sung by members of our company."

"This event is part of marking the start of the Guild's second year of operation," noted Lyric Opera General Director Anne Ewers. "Members of the Guild will participate in a variety of activities related to the inner workings of the opera company," added Ewers. "They benefit through attending special performer's receptions and dress rehearsals, as well as the excitement of being part of the beauty and pagentry!"

Since space is limited for the Sept. 13 event, reservations are strongly recommended. For reservations and further information about the performance, as well as about Guild membership, contact the Boston Lyric Company directly at 267-1512.

Aladdin's magic lights up North Shore

The tale of Aladdin and the Magic Lamp has captivated the imagination of children for generations, and now the Gingerbread Players and Jack will bring the color, adventure and splendor of this classic story to the North Shore Music Theatre for two performances at 9:15 and 11:45 a.m. on Thursday, Sept. 3.

Enriched by a musical score based on Rimsky-Korsakoff's Scherazade, this production is filled with lavish sets and costumes that match the pomp and opulence of the story. Using spellbinding light effects to enhance the magic inherent in the story, this production will satisfy a child's search for adventure, and provide a treat for his eyes and ears as well.

Whether in the Baghdad marketplace or at the sultan's palace, the Gingerbread Players & Jack's production of Aladdin and the Magic Lamp is a truly spectacular theatrical experience.

The Gingerbread Players & Jack is a professional children's theater company, whose productions expand the boundaries of children's theater by retelling familiar tales with new insights and imagination in the stories. The primary aim of the group is to develop the taste of young audiences for the living stage.

Aladdin and the Magic Lamp, will be presented at 9:15 and 11:45 a.m. on Thursday, Sept. 3 at the North Shore Music Theatre; tickets are $4.

The air-conditioned North Shore Music Theatre is easily accessible off Route 128 at exit 19. Free parking is available on the grounds.

To order tickets or for more information, contact the North Shore Music Theatre box office, 62 Dunham Road, Beverly, MA 01915; 922-8500.

Dinosaur in deep water

Do you believe a dinosaur lives in the Souhegan River? If by chance you don't, the American Stage Festival's The Young Company just might change your mind in their final production of the summer season!

The Young Company will take the stage in Milford on Thursday and Friday, Aug. 27 and 28 as they introduce the new musical The Last of the Souhegans, with performances at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Tickets are $3 per person and are available by calling the American Stage Festival box office at (603)673-7515.

An original folk musical, and possibly the biggest production this season, The Last of the Souhegans features a live fiddle band and hundreds of slides as it takes its audience back to 1912 and 1937 to explore the history of the Merrimack Valley, as well as the tall tale of a fierce dinosaur living in the Souhegan River. Above all, The Last of the Souhegans is about a special relationship between a young girl, Kate, and her grandfather.

The Last of the Souhegans was written and developed by artistic director Austin Tichenor and composer Andrew Howard. The two have been composing the script and researching the history of the Merrimack Valley since early winter.

"I was at Stonecutters (a local restaurant) and looked into the Souhegan River and saw a small creature and thought, wouldn't it be great if there were a dinosaur in the river," said Tichenor. He thought that combining the legend of a dinosaur in the Souhegan with the history of the area would make a great musical," he added. The basis of Tichenor's research was from the book Granite Township by Winnifred Eright.

After the success of last summer's Young Company production of Jenny and the Spirits, Tichenor and Howard decided to team up again this summer. "We thought the Last of the Souhegans would be appropriate as a folk musical because the play tells a story about the past and history, and that's exactly what folk music does," noted Howard.

A New York-based musician and composer, Howard also served as the musical director for the ASF's 1986 productions of Pirates of Penzance and Rhymes With Pairs.

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

Henri Matisse's 1927 Danseuse Refletee Dans Le Miroir is one of more than fifty Cone Collection lithographs by the artist, mostly from the '20s, on exhibit at the Danforth Museum of Art.

Charm and sensual delights

The triumph of the purely visual and its sensual delights is clearly in evidence in the Danforth Museum's exhibition, Henri Matisse: Lithographs and Bronzes From The Cone Collection.

A warm, happy surprise awaits those who walk into the beigy wheat and grey museum with the idea that there is little left to discover about Matisse, whose familiar arabesques, buoyant color, bouquets and odalisques adorn tote bags, silk scarves and (too) much more.

For just beyond the museum's cool, perpendicular architecture and the highly ordered Mary Miss installation in its foyer, the walls of the circular main gallery and adjoining hallways vibrate with a movement and color one would hardly expect from black and white images pulled from stone and metal.

Everything is alive with motion. A fine and sensitive rhythm in the hanging of the show is well in keeping with the spirit of the work. Series of languid, linear nudes, soft against creamy yellow paper, are interrputed at exactly the right point by denser works. Here, weighted form is described by layered values — straight and curved repeated short marks that set up a rich and, indeed, colorful interplay of dark/light contrasts and transitions.

One is struck with how clear it becomes that it is not only the limpid hues, so suggestive of the light and air of southern France or the heavier, voluptuous pigment of Morocco's glare and shadow that colors Matisse's pictures.

One is also struck with the insistence of the sculptural — the reference to weight and volume — of Matisse — not only in the figurative bronzes of the exhibition, but, most notably, in the prints. The elegant curves and unabashed saturation of pattern do not relegate these pictures to the flat and decorative.

Roundness of arms, when not described with the marks of light falling over them, is sculpted by bracelets and sleeves. Hats flop and fold to embrace heads, feet tuck under bends in knees, elaborate collars regally encircle necks — all graceful clues to the weight and substance of the subjects and the three-dimensionality of their world.

Finally, one becomes ever alert to the artist's absorption with the visual — the way things look. There is no need to read emotional, dramatic, political or metaphysical content into these works in order to enhance their meaning.

Matisse reveled in appearances: the tilt of a head, the curve of a Louis Philippe bed, the blunt, dark shape of a bobbed haircut, or the dancing eyelet trim on a crisp organdy dress are selected and lavished on with a sense that experiencing this visual moment is the most compelling and interesting thing one might do.

That charm has the legitimacy of drama, and that the discoveries of observation have excitement and sensuality all their own, are at least two of Matisse's important contributions illuminated by this exhibition.

The fifty prints and six bronze sculptures from the collection of sisters, Dr. Claribel and Miss Etta Cone, noted collectors of Matisse's art during his lifetime, are on tour from the Weatherspoon Art Gallery of the University of North Carolina in Greensboro. The only New England showing of the exhibition is at the Danforth Museum, 123 Union Ave., Framingham, through Sept. 13. Museum hours are noon to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 1 to 4:30 p.m. weekends. Call 620-0050.

Troubled tomatoes?

Many homeowners are now harvesting lucious, red, juicy tomatoes from the garden patch, but others are not. The Metropolitan Horticulture Clinic has received many inquiries about red tomatoes having a decayed spot on the blossom-end. This is a common physiological disorder called "blossom-end rot."

Blossom-end rot first appears as a water soaked lesion on the blossom end or bottom of the fruit, which gradually blackens as the fruit matures. There are several causes for this disorder including: drought stress, calcium deficiency, nutrient imbalance or injury to the roots or plant foilage.

To help avoid this problem in the future, homeowners may wish to have a soil pH test done to determine if additional limestone (calcium) is needed to maintain a proper balance of essential plant nutrients. Gardens should be watered properly, especially during extreme dry spells, and avoid fluctuating soil moisture levels. One way to avoid fluctuating soil moisture levels is by mulching. Mulching helps to conserve and equalize soil moisture.

Another common physiological disorder seen this summer is misshapen fruit with discolored, callus areas at the base. This is due to cold temperatures earlier this season during the time of pollination and fruit set. Those cool temperatures affected the formation of viable seeds within the fruit. It is a surface blemish and does not affect the flavor or culinary use of the fruit.

For further information on cultural problems with vegetables, contact the Metropolitan Horticulture clinic, 240 Beaver Street, Waltham, MA 02154 or call 891-1956.

Cats returns to Shubert

Cats, the international musical hit by Andrew Lloyd Webber, based on T.S. Eliot's Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats, will open at Boston's Schubert Theatre on Thursday, Sept. 17 at 7:30 p.m. (after a preview performance on Wednesday, Sept. 16 at 8 p.m.) and continue its run for eight weeks through Nov. 7. This is the first national company which played at the Schubert for 20 weeks in 1983 and the Hub engagement will bring to a close a four-year record breaking national tour.

Cats is directed by Trevor Nunn, with Gillian Lynne serving as associate director and choreographer. Sets and costumes are by John Napier, and lighting is designed by David Hersey.

Most of the poems comprising T.S. Eliot's Old Possum Book of Practical Cats (published in 1939), have been set to music by Andrew Lloyd Webber complete and in their original published form. Some lyrics were, however, discovered among the poet's unpublished writings with the help of his widow, Valerie Eliot.

The lyric Memory is by Trevor Nunn, incorporating lines from Eliot's Rhapsody on a Windy Night and other Prufrock poems.

Andrew Lloyd Webber was born in 1948. He is the composer of numerous musicals including Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, Jesus Christ Superstar, Starlight Express, Evita, Cats, and Requiem.

The Requiem Mass had its world premiere at St. Thomas Church in New York. The soloists were Placido Domingo, Sarah Brightman,and Paul Miles-Kingston. Starlight Express opened at the Gershwin Theatre this season. Webber's new musical The Phantom of the Opera, which opened in October 1986, was awarded both the Laurence Olivier and Evening Standard awards for Musical of the Year, and will open on Broadway in October 1987.

T.S. Eliot was born in Missouri in 1888. Educated at Harvard, he settled in London in 1915. His first volume of poems, Prufrock and Other Observations, was published in 1922. Eliot also wrote a number of verse plays, the best known of which are Murder in the Cathedral and The Family Reunion. Four Quartets, generally regarded as his masterpiece, was first published as a single work in 1943. Eliot became a British citizen in 1927. Among his many distinctions are the Order of Merit and the Nobel Prize for literature. He died in 1965.

Trevor Nunn, former joint artistic director of The Royal Shakespeare Company after having run the company since 1968, won the 1983 Tony Award for his direction of Cats.

Gillian Lynne, 1983 Tony Award nominee, choreographed David Merrick's Roar of the Greasepaint, Pickwick and How Now, Dow Jones on Broadway. Lynne has over thirty shows to her credit as director and choreograher. She directed and choreographed a new London production of Cabaret and provided the musical staging and choreography for Andrew Lloyd Webber's newest London musical, Phantom of the Opera.

Cats will play a performance schedule as follows: Week of Sept. 16 through Sept. 20, Wednesday, Sept. 16 at 8 p.m. (preview); Thursday, Sept. 17 at 7:30 p.m. (opening night); Friday, Sept. 18 at 8 p.m.; Saturday, Sept. 19 at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m.; Sunday, Sept. 20 at 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. For the period of Sept. 21 through Nov. 7: Monday through Saturday evenings at 8 p.m.; Wednesday and Saturday matinees at 2 p.m.

Tickets are available through The Schubert Theatre Box Office, 265 Tremont St., Boston, MA 02116, Telecharge (24 hours a day, seven days a week) 1-800-233 3123; and all Ticketron outlets. For general information, call 426-4520.

CAR CARE CORNER

By Dan Hogan, Service Manager

Dirt on your car's finish can damage the finish. Salt sprinkled on the roads during winter months can cause the metal on your car to rust. The best preventive maintenance for finishes is to wash the car every time it gets dirty. If you have been driving the car on salted roads, the car should be washed weekly at a car wash. Your car also should be waxed at least twice annually—in the spring and fall. Don't overlook cleaning the inside of your car also.

The technicians at PETER FULLER OLDS are ASE certified. We keep a computerized history of all cars serviced here to notify you of preventative maintenance. Open 8-5, Tel. 924-8100. M/C, Visa & A/E accepted. We are located within walking distance to public transportation. Come to PETER FULLER OLDS, Watertown Sq. "Olds National Service Award Winner."

Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit — alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts — is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

*Ask for Autobahn or Audi Limited Warranty at our Parts Department.
